The British, according to Professor Loudon, still have the only real freedom in the world today. They are making tremendous strides toward freedom, with each Briton, from top to bottom, shouldering his share of the burden.

Whoops!! What Trousers!

By O. Rumpel

W. H. Martin, famed wrestling coach at this university, has inaugurated a novel system this year: instead of supplying his wrestling team with the usual sweat pants, he has reversed the order and bought a new blue pair and is now looking for a man to fill them. A place on the first team is assured anyone who can do so.

However, there is no use of any skinny fellow, of a mere 250 lbs., making an appointment for a fitting. It takes a BIG man to fill these pants. Mr. Martin himself can stand in them and draw the waist closed over his head.

Just to give some idea of the size and to prevent useless enquiries we give the following measurements. The leg length is five feet and the seat has a circumference of over six feet; but being an athlete a slender waist of four feet is required. Slip into the privacy of your boudoir and see how closely your measurements correspond—you may be able to make a first team yet! No co-ed need apply.

When asked if after all he wasn't being a bit optimistic in buying such a large pair the coach admitted one of his rascals had ordered a larger pair than the ones in stock and apparently there had been a "slight" slip in the measurements.

Varsity Lads Have Chance to Make Olympic Track Team

CONWAY WINS MILE

Ab Conway of Trinity, who last week set a new record for the half mile, last night succeeded in capturing the mile also in 4:51. I. Forrest of Vic and Delaney also of Trinity, finished second and third.

Harris of Meds and Ashenburt of S.P.S., tied in the 220 yard event, each sprinting the distance in 25.4 seconds, with O'Connor, the hurdler, placing third. Meds and Trinity are leading in points, with S.P.S., present holders of the Interfaculty Cup, and Vic following close behind.

Owing to the Olympic games being held next summer there has been a renewal of activity in local track clubs, with the result that a greater number of indoor meets are to be held this winter. Hec Phillips, Varsity track coach, is working hard to get the lads in shape so that they may acquit themselves with credit to the University. Several dual meets are being held between Varsity and some of the city clubs in February and it is hoped that (Continued on Page 4)

Vocational Guidance Association

Of late years, particularly since the depression has made jobs so scarce, there has been much talk of vocational guidance, but little constructive action has been taken. About a year ago a group of interested people in an effort to fill what they considered to be a great lack, founded the Ontario Vocational Guidance Association.

In the past year the Association has made considerable progress. They have not attempted any hasty and superficial system but rather have planned a methodical campaign to give the subject careful study and to thoroughly investigate the needs. They have placed the emphasis on guidance, believing that education for citizenship is the first step towards solving the problem.

The problems of vocational guidance as they see them are the giving of assistance in the choosing, and the preparation for an occupation and in meeting the problems that arise after an occupation has been entered. If they succeed in their aims they will be fulfilling a great service to the youth of the nation.

Part of the work accomplished by the Association in its short career has been the issuing of bulletins on various pertinent topics. One of these "The Selection and Guidance of College Students" is of particular interest to us. It is written by a lecturer in the University, one of those associated with the groups on vocational guidance which were given at Victoria College a year or two ago.

Apparently the result of these groups was to show just how varied and complex are the problems in vocational guidance. It was discovered that for many students the mere giving of information about different vocations was not enough. Vocational guidance had to take second place to other more urgent and immediate problems, difficulties in adjusting to the new and different conditions of university life, difficulties in managing studies, in selecting courses and subjects. Personal and social problems had also to be dealt with.

Residence Thievery

In these columns yesterday appeared an editorial which told of the thieving rampant in residences at Victoria College. When reporters attempted to gain information from residents regarding this thievery, in an attempt by The Varsity to bring about more satisfactory protection, they met with open hostility from officials and students alike.

Thieving from campus buildings has long been a matter of considerable importance. Students who could ill afford the additional expense, have been losing wearing apparel and other property at an increasing rate. The policy of police and university officials in the past has been to give the matter as little publicity as possible, lest the ease with which buildings can be entered be circulated among the light fingered gentry.

This policy has not been a success. No newspaper publicity is needed for word of that kind to be circulated among thieves. And since the word has undoubtedly reached their ears, and since no adequate means of checking their activity apparently can be set in motion, it becomes a duty to tell all undergraduates the danger they face, that they may have a more even chance to protect their property.

Publicity can do no possible harm when the extent of the thieving has reached its present proportions. It may lead to a decided change for the better. For, by the same method of reasoning used by officials, thieves will learn that students are now on the watch for them.

Aggression Denounced

In his maiden speech as foreign secretary of Great Britain, Sir Anthony Eden emphasized that aggression must not be allowed to succeed. He was referring specifically to the Ethiopian situation and the League's action on it.

Sir Anthony's stand is an admirable one. He has recognized a basic principle often forgotten, particularly in this country. As soon as aggression is allowed to succeed, the way is paved for future aggressors. If we really seek to maintain peace, we must make it impossible to gain by aggression. No matter how worthy the aim of the aggressor, or how "intolerable" his position in the status quo, his goal must be achieved by some other means than organizing an expedition of arms. Taking any other position leaves the way open for those who consider themselves justified in changing things by force; it may seriously be doubted whether any nation ever went to battle without feeling justified.

Eden must, then, consider the implications of his stand. What would he substitute for aggression as a means of change? For so long as world forces, of which his country is part, create intolerable situations for certain nations, the world must be prepared to relieve the pressure or face the explosion.

Specifically, Britain must do something to alleviate the serious economic situation in which Italy finds herself or have an uprising of the Latins on her hands. If she chooses the latter, her only means of preventing a war will be to have a force on her side sufficient to quash Italian aggression, and one which Italy will be willing to recognize as sufficient. In the present situation, this would mean that Britain and several other nations would have to give up their sovereignty sufficiently to join in suppressing Il Duce.

In any case, Eden cannot talk himself out of a sacrifice, however skilled a speechmaker he may be. The choice that faces him is—lose economic interest, sovereignty, or peace? Or some of each?

It is, of course, doubtful whether he can preserve peace at all. The nations of Europe have failed to face the problem in time, and in so doing have let the situation get to the point where it is hopelessly snarled.—Minnesota Daily.

League of Nations Society

We have received the following letter from the League of Nations Society of Canada and are publishing it here to bring the matter to the attention of any students or student bodies interested.

To Canadian Universities and Colleges:

I am taking the liberty of sending to you a number of announcements of our Third National Study Project. We are extremely anxious to have groups in universities and colleges associated with the Society and participating in this Project (and consequently in the National Conference of the Society). Would you be good enough to bring the notices to the attention of groups which might be interested.

In Great Britain there is a Universities League of Nations Society but even there it is not self-supporting. The development of Corporate members of the Society among university and college student bodies would appear to be a very appropriate way of proceeding in Canada.

There is the matter of the fee: the minimum rate for Corporate Membership is $10.00. This may be more than many college groups can afford. We are prepared to consider special circumstances or even the revision of the fee for this category of membership.

One matter before the Society at the moment of particular interest to university and college groups is the Youth Congress to be held in Geneva under the auspices of the International Federation of League of Nations Societies, August 31-September 7 next.

I am enclosing a copy of the letter we are now sending out to our existing Corporate Members.

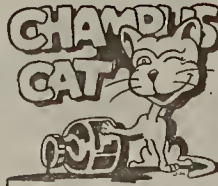

For your information I am enclosing also two copies of a booklet entitled "The League of Nations Society in Canada: An Essential Instrument of Canadian Democracy".

Yours sincerely,

R. B. INCH,

National Secretary.

No. 1. The Head Waitress at Hart House.

Outside of Nancy Pyper, she is the most authoritative female in Hart House.

Has only been known to be disgruntled once. That was when the edict was announced allowing you to sit anywhere you wished in the Great Hall.

In common with all dictators, she ignored the edict.

Subtly differentiates the importance of the would be diners by varying the distance she accompanies them into the dining room. If Lord Tweedsmuir ever eats here she will have to go and run around the block.

Her disgust of students who flirt with waitresses is only equalled by her disgust of waitresses who flirt with students.

She cannot understand why students eat anywhere except in the Great Hall. Is still dubious about the lifting of the non smoking ban.

She tolerantly regards the Hall Committee as a necessary evil.

She does not look nearly as important when presiding at a supper dance.

All of which we can easily forgive as long as she is not responsible for the nomenclature on the menus.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Margaret Eaton Hall

To the decided gratification of some seven hundred undergraduates, "Follies" came through last night with all the gaiety, music, wit, cleverness and charm which its advance publicity attributed to it. "The source of innocent merriment" team produced the priceless satire on British parliamentary procedure that will appeal to every student who has ever dipped, even lightly, into constitutional history; the Victoria Music Club supplied an excellent cast, clever direction and had obviously spent ample time on rehearsals. Added to that perfect combination was the general atmosphere of happiness and camaraderie existing between cast and audience, the feeling that the players were having as much fun in presenting the tomfoolery as we were in watching it.

The principles were most satisfactory. Charlie Joffie, in wisely following Martin Green's precedent in pantomime, made an unforgettable chancellor; Margaret Davies was first rate in the difficult role of Fairy Queen; Patricia Lundy and Evelyn David delighted with their singing. Some of the men seemed a little afraid of the reception they might receive though their fears were perfectly groundless—we only hope the little verse about Wellington and Bonaparte won't be mislaid again.

There were naturally minor details that merit adverse criticism. The fairies' costumes would have been more graceful minus the tunics or if they had all

R. G. Anglin

A New York radio "gag writer" has been offering the world a few of his theories on the future of radio humour, via the airwaves column of a local newspaper, and some of his remarks are very amazing indeed. This gentleman, David Freedman by name, predicts the gradual decline of his own profession and the eventual demise of all gag men. His theory is that the comedian who depends for his laughs upon the humorous continuity typed on sheets which he holds in his hand, is through. The air comedian of the great entertainment era to come, announces Mr. Freedman (and here is where we were sore amazed) is already heralded in the person of that charming little girl featured on the otherwise popular Fred Waring program, who calls herself "Snoony".

Snoony, according to Mr. Freedman, is the advance guard of a New School of humour which will depend entirely on the odd quirks and mannerisms of the comedian's personality. He draws attention to the presence of these factors in Snoony, and points out that she needs no "gags", no humorous patter, but entertains by merely chatting about herself, her dog, her burning yearning for Fred Waring, etc., etc. And right there is where we would like to take exception to Mr. Freedman's theory, and with no little heat. We have carefully checked the reactions of a num-

GYMNASTIC DISPLAY TAKEN BY FACULTY OF MEDICINE

MacDonald of Meds Individual Champion; Farrar is Second

TRINITY TEAM SECOND

Displaying a slight superiority in all departments the Faculty of Medicine gym team last night repeated their victory of last year in the annual inter-faculty gym meet at Hart House.

The Medicals amassed a total of 1495 points on the evening's performance to give them a substantial lead over Trinity College, which finished second with 1210.5 S.P.S. were third with 1105.

Stewart MacDonald, who led the Meds team to their victory, captured the individual honours with a total of 642 points. Farrar of Forestry totalled 603 points, while Fran Buck, last year's champion, rated 522.5.

Individual standing: 1, MacDonald, Meds; 2, Farrar, Forestry; 3, Buck, Trinity; 4, Crossland, Meds.

Team standing: 1, Meds (MacDonald, Crossland, Hodd); 2, Trinity (Buck, Martin, Holmes); 3, S. P. S. (Powell, Gorman).

EMMANUEL CAGERS DEFEAT FORESTRY

Theologues Lead from Start of Rough Game

Defeating Forestry by 33 to 21, Emmanuel yesterday showed classy basketball. The Theologians stepped out in the lead and kept it up throughout the game, and Forestry never threatened after the first few minutes.

Play was somewhat erratic and far from scientific. The Foresters played the man rather than the ball on most occasions, but failed to rattle their opponents.

Hick, who scored most of his team's points, was the best man for the Wood Cutters. Gardiner, Griffith and Edwards worked well for Emmanuel.

Forestry: Hick, Dargavel, Grinnell, Chalk, Harrison, Ballantyne, Ward.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Vic were in the majority at the intercollegiate hockey practice yesterday. Elaine Knight and Gladys Carvolth of St. Hilda's, and Bunty Lang of U.C. composed the representation from the other colleges, and the rest were Vic. Now from this you will probably gather that the Annesley Hall girls are the only ones with Varsity spirit, but we must admit that the entire turnout for the practice reached a grand total of nine. To get a good hockey team, a coach should have plenty of material to choose from, so prospects for the Varsity team don't look very bright at present.

ff and when a team is chosen it will probably play in the Toronto league. We heard disappointing news yesterday, that Mary Dignam has decided that she will not be able to play on the team, since academic work has piled up to too great an extent. Jean Atkinson will also be missing, because of general health and a great many executive responsibilities. These two absences, as well as those of Betty Mark and Chippy Grant, will certainly weaken the prospective team.

McGill still think that Varsity is not going to have an intercollegiate hockey squad, according to the latest girls' sports column we have read. Queen's and Western are not much interested in the noble game of puck-chasing, and so Toronto was their last hope. We understand that they are trying to arrange games with Bishops' College, at Lennoxville, Quebec.

The Montreal girls have also arranged for a badminton tournament with Queen's, which will take place tonight in Kingston. These two universities held a similar tourney last year. It seems too bad that we can't arrange one with Western or McMaster, our neighbouring universities.

Anglicans, who were lost at bat. The Theologians may not be the best ball players in the world but their games are full of chatter and they show more life than most of the other teams.

For Wycliffe, Huether behind the bat, played a good game.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George Vair

Varsity sportsmen will be pleased to learn that Joe Carruthers is speedily recovering from his recent illness and will soon be released from the hospital. Joe has trained, groomed and fathered the Blue athletes since away back when and is highly thought of in the world of sport.

Tonight hoop fans get a real bargain when three basketball games will be played at Hart House and the entry fee is a dime for all and sundry. Mac McCutcheon's Intermediates are the head liners on the bill, going up against St. Mike's, while the Grads meet Senecas in the second game. Varsity are second in the league and although expected to come out on top the Irish in the Bay Street students always makes things interesting. The Blues need the victory to keep up with West. End so how's about it for a little support? Varsity Juniors and Broad-view clash in the opener, which is scheduled for 7 p.m.

As Saturday draws near and the International wrestling and fencing meet with Buffalo which is scheduled for that night at Hart House, the grappling and foil artists are adding the final touches to their training. The card will be augmented by the appearance of four of Varsity's top rating boxers who will take on O.A.C.'s best. Although boxing has faded into the dim past as a crowd pleaser in Toronto since the appearance of wrestling syndicates which put on a "good show", boxing at the University seems to be at high tide due to the untiring efforts of Les Black and Frankie Brown. With the intercollegiate assault still three weeks away and the senior assault just around the corner the majority of the boys are "tops" as far as condition is concerned.

For the past two days Mel Glionna has been taking on anybody and everybody around the boxing room in an effort to show the students the finer points of the game. Glionna is one of Toronto's most experienced and crafty amateur boxers and certainly deserves credit for taking time off to help men whom he meets under the bright lights when no quarter is given or expected. Remember he took decisions from both Smith and Millson at the Gardens not so long ago.

Trinity, sporting five intercollegiate swimmers on their eleven man team, walked away with the interfaculty honours at last night's meet. The Black and Red finsters had so many human fish on hand that they entered two teams in both relay events. Cressy McCarty, after arriving too late to enter the first race, went out and clipped a fraction of a second off the previous mark in the 100 yard backstroke. In the following race, the 100 yards free style, he and Earl of Victoria finished in a dead heat.

Co-Eds and Chorus Girls

College girls wouldn't trade places with chorus girls on a bet and vice versa, according to the results of an interview conducted with five of each of them. The chorus girls were selected from the twelve who have been dancing and singing at Shea's for the last few weeks, and who played the Imperial before that. The co-eds are University of Toronto girls, all pretty enough to grace choruses themselves, if they so desired. The purpose of the interview was simply a comparison of the two types of girls, all of approximately the same ages, and the questions asked were general ones, but a study of the answers to them may afford means of comparison. No attempt to draw conclusions is made here; the reader may do that if he wishes.

The chorus girls interviewed are Bee Stanford, 18 years old; Joanna Starr, 18; Anita Mongana, 19; Jeanne Bradel, 20; and Betty Kaye, 22. The co-eds are Christine McGregor, 18; Genevieve James, 18; Nonie Hallinan, 18; Ann-Elise Ross, 19; and Fran Malloney, 20. All of the show girls, with the exceptions of Miss Kaye and Miss Starr, did some type of work before they started dancing. Miss Hallinan, alone of the college girls, has had experience as a working girl—a summer job during the Exhibition.

All of the dancers have only one ambition—to work up in show business. Miss Kaye, co-featured in a bicycle act that played Shea's last week, hopes to get and keep good bookings. The co-eds, however, have varied plans for the future. Miss Ross wishes to become an aviatrix, Miss Hallinan a business woman and Miss Malloney a physiotherapist. The Misses James and McGregor have no particular ambitions as yet.

In regard to their hobbies, all of the Shea's girls find knitting a relaxing and valuable means of using up spare time. To prove it, they produced scarves knitted hats and pieces of half finished knitted goods. The Misses Stanford, Bradel and Kaye also go in for sports, when opportunity provides, with emphasis on swimming. Miss Hallinan is an enthusiastic athlete, who sees most of the football and hockey games, and plays basketball and tennis besides. Miss Ross particularly likes skiing, while Miss McGregor, Miss James and Miss Malloney all swim. Miss McGregor rides as well, and Miss James is a golfer.

All of the girls find enjoyment in the movies and theatre. The Misses Stanford, Bradel, Kaye, and Hallinan like musicals best. Miss Starr, Miss James and Miss Malloney prefer pictures that have action, such as "Captain Blood". Miss Mongana likes love films and neither Miss McGregor nor Miss Ross has any preference, except that the picture be entertaining.

All had definite choices for favourite actors and actresses. Robert Taylor was picked three times by co-eds, who also selected Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Myrna Loy, Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, Irene Dunne and Leslie Howard. Howard was also selected by one of the chorus girls. Other selections of the dancing ladies were Sylvia Sydney, Robert Montgomery, Helen Hayes, Frederic March, Claudette Colbert, Clark Gable, Ginger Rogers, Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

The Shea's girls read little, except an occasional magazine. Miss Ross and Miss McGregor read constantly—both best sellers and classics. The other three read little, but limit themselves to magazines and an occasional best seller. All of them like music, the Miss Mongana, Kaye, Hallinan and James preferring jazz, and the rest enjoying both jazz and the lighter classics.

Two of the chorus girls finished high school, two finished their second year in high and the other graduated from public grammar school. The co-eds are first and second year University students. When asked the first question, "Would you trade places?", the universal chorus was, "no". The show girls said a college education would be no help to them and the co-eds have no stage ambitions. However, the stage girls would like to sit in on a couple of University lectures and labs "just for the experience".

ber of other Waring fans to the new "little girl" comedian, and have found their experience to check with our own to a great extent. At first hearing, Miss Snoopy creates a pleasant impression with the odd little characteristics of her delivery and personality which Mr. Freedman mentions. On the second and subsequent occasions these are discovered to have lost their freshness and their charm, and Snoopy having nothing else to go on, is a complete washout. On last week's Tuesday evening Ford hour Snoopy's cute mannerisms left the studio audience painfully unaffected, until the director gave the applause signal to conclude the act. We would like to make a prediction right back at David Freedman that Snoopy won't last another month with that capable showman, Fred Waring, unless somebody thinks up something humorous for her to say.

An analysis of any radio comedian, successful or otherwise, reveals two chief characteristics: a novel style of delivery coupled with an ability to communicate the artist's personality (as per Mr. Freedman) plus cleverly prepared continuity which is designed to make the most of this style. And again in direct denial of our New York authority, we declare the matter of style to be the less important essential.

Eddie Cantor and Joe Penner may briefly be cited as perfect examples of what happens to funny men who think they can get by on the manner rather than the matter of their delivery. Even the American masses finally tired of Woonahyaduck's, and Mr. Penner amuses himself in his old age by making third rate pictures in Hollywood. Stumbling on Eddie's program by accident the other night we found him in the last crippled stage of all—reviving "early successes". You've guessed it—he was singing Whoopie! Meanwhile Major Bowes (substituting good thick slices of human interest for weak humour) is selling the coffee.

The final case history to be studied reveals the exactly opposite situation,—in this instance style is reduced to the minimum and continuity is everything. Jack Benny is undeniably the most popular comedian on the air today, by common consent of radio editors, listeners, and grocers who sell the six delicious flavours. Benny's style is so mild that it can hardly be called that, and such standing gag-lines as "Play Don!" and (on the current series) "Jello again!" are merely part of the atmosphere. For laughs he depends on the constantly varied situations which he or his gag men concoct, satirizing the news event, the moving picture or the fad of the moment. His own history is proof in itself of the present argument, for a slump during the second series with his first sponsor (the gingeale program of four years back) very nearly brought a promising career to an untimely close. Benny did some firing and hiring on his continuity staff and ever since has been steadily climbing towards the top,—where he will stay so long as his script authors don't let him down.

As you may have gathered, we think that David Freedman is all wrong in his theories and prophecies re broadcast humour, and we believe that the days of the radio gag men and authors of humorous continuity will yet be long in the land. But we said humorous continuity, and Mr. Freedman's strange forecasting of his own hollow future suggests that possibly he has been one of the gagsters responsible for the downfall of Cantor, Penner, and their ilk. If he was writing for Benny he'd be getting too big a kick out of life to be so pessimistic.

ALEXANDER LECTURE

considers one of the chief reasons for the enduring significance of Burns' poetry.

Burns was endowed by nature with great mental ability and that he used his gift is proven by his extensive vocabulary, his interest in music, his knowledge of English literature, and of Scotch theology. His intellectual power shows itself in his alert and inquisitive interest in history and politics, in his unusual talent for reducing things to their lowest terms, and in the accuracy of his self-analysis.

Burns had an antithetical mind, subject to moods of great elation and great depression. He praised honourable poverty but dreaded it worse than any man in Scotland. These contradictions are partly explained by his long struggle with heart disease and hypochondria. His real difficulty was, however, to accommodate the spirit of a genius in the body of a tenant farmer and exciseman. Aware of his poetic powers he was however compelled by fate to spend most of his energy in tilling for his daily bread. Yet if he had been able to live a life of ease he would probably never have written the poetry that living in close contact with hard labour and suffering enabled him to write.

By virtue of his intellectual power wedded to his gift of song he was able to unite truth and beauty and to bestow on humanity the greatest of all boons.

RENEWED INTEREST IN TRACK OBSERVED

these will awaken interest in the sport among the track inclined students, and bring forth some real results.

Conway has been suggested as a probable Olympic candidate, and the chances of Worrall, the O.C.E. hurdler, formerly of McGill, and Larry O'Connor, who last year set a new Dominion record for the 120 yard hurdles, to take the trip to Berlin, are considered more than good. Bill Kibbiewite, who represented Canada at the Games in 1928 in Amsterdam and last year winner of the intercollegiate harrier race, is turning out, and he is expected to go places in the distance events during the next two months.

clined to do." Says the professor, "It is time they took a look at themselves, a Canadian stock-taking. They are too inclined to criticize the United States for faults which are actually Canadian. That lays Canada open to propaganda, because Canadians will believe the worst of other countries."

He criticizes the proneness of nations to condemn what they don't like in other countries, saying, "Individuals seek grounds of mutual agreement, then try to correct the other person's errors—why should not nations do the same? Germany is extremely friendly to the British and to us," says Mr. Loudon.

Hither and Yon

The University of Saskatchewan has abolished the system of class credit for C.O.T.C. work. This is the result of agitation by the student paper, The Sheaf, and by campus pacifists.

A students' union building is to be built at the University of British Columbia, and will be known as the Brook Memorial Building. It is called after the former dean. Canada's fourth largest university has felt the need of such an institution, which will be modelled on Hart House to a great extent but will have facilities for both men and women.

The man who ran the campus gramophone at Columbia is leaving, and his departure leaves a big gap in the Columbian set-up as he has supplied rhythm for more campus merry-making than all the orchestras combined. It seems that the gentleman in question is the inventor of "auditory perspective", a device to make sound in a film appear to follow the actor or action, instead of, as at present, merely popping from the centre of the screen. Hollywood is interested in the idea, and the inventor has gone out there to test the scheme. He will also be given a job in the sound research line.

American colleges and universities went into mourning over the death of the king to just as great an extent as the Canadian ones did. At Harvard, they held a special service, and other colleges in all parts of the country had some form of observance.

The University of California in Los Angeles has a plan to insure all athletes against injury on the playing field. The idea began when a player received an injury which nearly cost him his sight. It has been the custom to pay medical and hospital bills for injured players, but this is seemingly the first attempt to provide against permanent damage or disfigurement.

At Stanford, a group of students have presented a petition to the Council to have smoking banned in examinations. They say that smoke becomes so dense in the examination hall that it becomes very irritating to non-smokers, and even to some who smoke. Smoking on the campus is forbidden at Stanford in accordance with the wishes of Mrs. Stanford.

Psychology professors in several colleges, however, say that smoking in examinations increases the efficiency of the student.

place for the big college.

Woods of S.P.S. had an easy time capturing the diving honours. He displayed a marked superiority in the various ways of cutting the water over the rest of the field. Brandon of O.A.C. and Stratton of Trinity had a close battle for second place, with the honours finally going to the latter.

The fifty yards free style provided the best race of the meet when Bull and Bickle of Trinity and MacDonald of O.A.C. finished in that order with a fraction of a second separating them.

Follinsbee gave O.A.C. their only win of the meet in the 440 yard swim by leading Vipond and Hampson of Vic home by a comfortable margin.

The 100 yard free style race saw a dead heat between Cress McCarty and Earl, Cress, swimming this event immediately following his record breaking back-stroke effort, went into a slight lead which he held until the final stretch of the tank. Here Earl staged a driving finish, just catching McCarty at the finish.

The final event on the card, the 200 yard relay, resulted in a first and second for Trinity. This event was the most exciting of the evening as each man swam fifty yards and all the teams were close at the finish. The Trinity A team won in handy fashion, but Bull, swimming the anchor leg for the red and black B team, passed two swimmers in the final fifty yards to take second place.

Hart House is not the only university library to be troubled by book-thefts. At the University of British Columbia, three history texts were stolen from the library. The tragedy of it is that they are the only ones obtainable on the campus, and there is an examination set on just that work which the books cover.

Nearly $600,000,000, or two per cent of Canada's total national wealth, is invested in schools and universities, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimates.

been on the pattern of Iolanthe's; there were some rather grotesque gestures and unusual wand drilling by the chorus due probably to a superabundance of "trippers" on the small stage; the costumes of Phyllis and Strephon would have been more effective if, as in D'O'ly-Carte tradition, they had been matched.

On the whole, however, the production comes well in the 90 per cent class when compared to most amateur musical comedies. The club has worked hard, their presentation is all they predicted it would be, and they deserve all the praise and applause they are bound to get for the rest of the week.

he really wants to do. There is, said Dr. Strong, a great respect for individual choice; young people are encouraged to choose their own work. This decided, the student may enter a university and there specialize in his chosen subject. All general cultural education is carried on in connection with the factories and such centres; moreover, any group of ten people can demand a teacher for anything they wish to study.

Education in modern Russia is primarily utilitarian; it aims at productivity of some sort. Study for its own sake is not encouraged. Its subject-matter is predominantly modern, and it aims less at a general cultural background for all, than at individual specialization along some line that will make a useful contribution to the state.

criminals would eventually disappear. The Marxists claim the war of Ethiopia is justified because their country is at stake, but war of Mussolini is war of aggression, therefore wrong. Revolution cannot come until the working class and the capitalist class both want a change.

Communists do not want force and violence. They visualize the revolution as coming when the working classes challenge capitalism and bring out an army. The working class will then be forced in their own interests to take arms and turn on capitalism.

European Dictators Described Before Engineering Society

Professor T. R. Loudon Tells of Situation in Three Countries

FREEOM CURBED

"Freedom of speech and freedom of the press are the most valuable prizes we possess," Professor T. R. Loudon told a meeting of the Engineering Society yesterday afternoon.

Professor Loudon was speaking on "Dictators of Europe" and in outlining to his listeners the facts he had observed on his various trips through Europe, he pointed out how this freedom of speech and press is non-existent in countries under a dictatorship.

Commenting on the present situation in Germany, Professor Loudon said that Hitler had the support of most of the German people, especially the younger generation and that he had inspired in them an ideal to be of service to their country. On the other hand the speaker pointed out that there were also disagreeable aspects to the Hitler regime, such as the persecution of the Jews, and the attitude taken by some Germans towards foreigners.

PREMIER DEFEATED IN U.C. PARLIAMENT

Canada Overgoverned is Opinion by Vote of 28-27

NO LONGER EXPEIENT

The motion "That this House favours the continuance of provincial government" was defeated by one vote in the U.C. Parliament yesterday, the count being 28-27 against.

The government, led by Prime Minister E. A. McCall, contended that provincial legislation acts as a sieve for matters of local interest. The federal government has already too much to perform. The provinces do not share the burden of federal interests. The B.N.A. Act was used as a means of proof that Canada is clearly and logically divided.

STILL CONFIDENT BLUES PLAY PORTS

After Near-Victory Monday, Bailey's Boys Hope to Win First O.H.A. Game

HOPE TO BREAK JINX

A vastly improved senior Blue team will journey to Port Colborne tonight to engage the Sailors in a Senior O.H.A. tilt. An atmosphere of confidence holds full sway in the University of Toronto hockey camp, as the sextet skate through their paces. The rousing battle of last Monday night is still fresh in the minds of the Blue-clad puck chasers and it was only bad breaks which beat them, even though they had a decided edge in the play.

Ace Bailey put the Varsity seniors through their paces in a brisk workout and was highly elated by their showing, and tonight down in the box-like arena at Port Colborne, Captain Normie McClelland and the rest of the squad are all set to gain their first victory of the season.

That the Blue team has had a continued jinx for an indefinitely long spell means nothing to the lads as they go into the final games of the series still undaunted by the bitter blows of defeat, with the same spirit of reaching their ultimate goal of at least one victory. Whether they realize their ambition or not the Blue team still give their best.

GRANITE CARNIVAL IS HUGE SUCCESS

Thirteen Numbers, All Worthy of Honourable Mention—Imported Artists

Many and varied have been the presentations at Varsity Arena but few if any have exceeded the Granite Club skating carnival for sheer enjoyment. The carnival, which opened last night, contains no less than thirteen numbers and every one is worthy of honourable mention.

The imported artists, Douglas Duffy, Norval Baple and Gladys Lamb, live up to advance notices but the essence of the carnival is provided by the skaters of the Granite Club. As is to be expected there are some mistakes in the production. The chief faults lie in the timing of the choruses but as the offenders are for the most part youngsters, the audience is sympathetic rather than critical.

The solo artists from the club went with the largest response. Their creations carry more spontaneity than those of professionals and therefore are proportionately more popular. Mrs. Edward Gooderham achieves the best performance of the evening in her Gardenia Dance, but all the cast deserve honourable mention.

Ruth Slenczynski, Child Pianist Considers Tour Just a Holiday

Dislikes Some Modern Composers; Reads Shakespeare for Pleasure

SPEAKS THREE LANGUAGES

By Nora Loeb

Ruth Slenczynski is on her vacation. The ten year old child who performs miracles on a piano considers it a holiday to play before two thousand and people, so The Varsity discovered in a special interview with this sturdy bright-eyed genius.

"Do you suffer from stage-fright?" we almost gasped with awe.

"Oh no! I have not committed that crime in years," was the quick reply of Ruth, who started to play a piano when she was three and made her first public appearance one half a year later. "Who is your favourite composer, Ruth?"

"I haven't any. I like them all although I am not very fond of some of the modern composers such as Debussy and Ravel because they have too many discords which I can't harmonize," replied this child of the Muse who has written a cadanza to one of Beethoven's Concertos.

Wondering whether this child was just as precocious at academic subjects as she is in the arts we enquired as to her schooling.

MEDS SET PRECEDEENT WITH IMPORTATION OF AT-HOME BAND

Setting a unique precedent on the campus, the medical students of the University are importing a 10-piece coloured band from New York for the annual Medical At-Home to be held next Friday, February 7, at the Royal York Hotel.

Leroy Smith and his 10 coloured musicians from the N.E.C. have been obtained for the big medical formal and the music will continue from nine until three in the morning. Smith's band played their tunes at the Cotton Club in Harlem when the maestro of the hi-de-ho, Cab Calloway, was touring England with his band, and recently they have been making recordings for one of the largest organizations in America.

Co-eds Startled from Slumber by Early Morning Intruders

CAMPUS POLICE SILENT

Evidence that strange male intruders have been discovered in Whitney Hall during the past week and that considerable petty thieving has been taking place there as well as in the Victoria girls' residences was revealed to The Varsity last night.

Last Sunday one girl in Cody House was aroused at five o'clock when a man emerged from the clothes closet of her room. She dashed out into the hallway in fright but when she returned the intruder had disappeared. On the same morning another co-ed was awakened by a rummaging sound in a vacant room next to hers. However, the alleged robber also had made his getaway when the room was entered.

Wednesday it was reported that a man was discovered on the third floor of Falconer House and was apprehended by one of the women after being chased to the basement. On being questioned by the police he claimed to have

SCHOOLMEN PROMISE SUPER STUNT NIGHT

One Continuous Play Is New Innovation Replacing Usual Skits

FIVE BANDS SUPPLY MUSIC

Hart House will tonight be filled to capacity with Engineers and fair femininity as the men from the south end of the campus hold their annual School Night. The men of School have always prided themselves on their ability to throw a super stunt night, and this year they promise will be the greatest in history.

Five bands will supply the dancers with five different varieties of music. The head tuner is to be Loren Cassina, who was featured here with Rudy Vallee last summer. The other orchestras will include Fred Evis and his Collegians and Len Whitehouse, Toronto bandsman.

The show, which will be given in Hart House Theatre, will be somewhat of an innovation for School Night in that it will be one continuous play, instead of a medley of shorter items as formerly. To accommodate the crowd, two performances will be given.

The show will be "Paradise Regained", an Ethiopian fantasy dealing with the troubles of Emperor Haile Selassie before and after importing a bunch of Schoolmen. The Schoolmen proceed to pull the King-of-Kings out of the frying pan into the fire, but finally succeed in turning Ethiopia into Utopia. The committee claim to have obtained $20.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION LECTURES POPULAR

Over 200 Hear Dr. Porter Speak on Subject of Artificial Respiration

Two hundred and twenty enthusiastic students crowded the Debates Room in Hart House to capacity yesterday when Dr. Porter addressed the first year physical training class on "Artificial Respiration".

Schaefer's method of respiration to overcome asphyxiation in cases of drowning, electric shock and carbon monoxide poisoning was discussed at length. That work must be commenced immediately the patient is discovered, Dr. Porter considered to be of the greatest importance. It must be continued over a period sometimes of two and a half hours duration. "Some patients require a great deal more time to revive than others, although exposed to the same extent," he said.

Physical training credits are given to first year students and repeaters at these lectures, it was learned from W. H. Martin. Members of the life saving class will be accorded credits for the first lectures.

Details of the next lectures are posted on the bulletin board in Hart House.

Speaker at Macdonald-Cartier Club Sees Improvement in the Future

"BEO-ROCK PRINCIPLES"

"The Conservative party in Canada will remain because it is based upon bed-rock principles," stated Denton Massey, M.P. for Greenwood, in an address to the Macdonald-Cartier Club in Hart House yesterday.

Mr. Massey dealt with the future of the Conservative party, pointing out that it is essentially a progressive one, capable of adapting its policies to the needs of the current social conditions. "It is built upon principles of solid, uncompromising and unswerving Imperialism," he said, "which are fundamentally inherent in a race of people of British origin." He cited the appearance of social legislation as an example

FINE ARTS COURSE TO BE ADDED TO CURRICULUM

The University's newest course, an honour course in Fine Art, is announced by the Registrar today. It will be taught in the first year in the session of 1936-37 and in the higher year in succeeding sessions.

The requirements for admission to the first year of the course will include complete Pass and five prescribed subjects of Honour Matriculation, including two of Latin, Greek, French, German, and Italian or Spanish. The first year of the course will consist of the following subjects: Greek and Roman History, Oriental History, English, Archaeology, Philosophy, Theory of Art, Drawing.

There will be, in addition, two Pass subjects.

Full details of the course may be obtained from the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, and will be included in the next issue of the Arts calendar.

Studying and Health

A national health survey conducted in the United States last year revealed that, because of the life they had led and the habits they had contracted, university graduates were more susceptible to tuberculosis, pneumonia and similar illnesses, than other people. This is an alarming situation. Granted a sedentary life spent in poring over books is less healthful than an active one, there would still appear to be great need of investigation into the health habits of university students.

In his recently published report President Cody declares that the connection between the physical fitness of students and their success in academic work is so close that a well-equipped health service must be regarded as an essential function of every university. We have reason to be pleased with our own health regulations which require that all men and those women registered in University College must undergo a physical examination upon entering the university. But it is unfortunate that there is no record of the health of students after their first year in the case of women and their second year in the case of men.

The Medical Advisor for women has in the past made an effort to arrive at a comparison of the health of out-going students with that of in-coming students by asking the graduating women to come to her for a physical examination. Unfortunately as this examination is not compulsory not sufficient women have responded to provide an adequate basis for comparison.

If a medical examination were made part of the requirements of graduation as it is at present of admission to the University information would be secured which would be of great value in watching over the health of undergraduates. Then it would be made evident just how great an effect long hours of study, insufficient sleep, lack of exercise, irregular eating habits, over-indulgence in smoking and drinking have on student health, and efforts made to overcome that effect. The number of students participating in any form of athletics is very small in comparison with the total registration and as most students either live on the campus or drive their own cars lack of exercise is probably our greatest affliction.

The physical and mental strain of college life is harder on one's constitution than heavy manual labour, and if our graduates are to go out into the world with the same gifts of good health with which they entered college very strict supervision is necessary.

Lectures on physical training such as those which are being conducted by Dr. Porter, are a step in the right direction. W. H. Martin, the instructor, is to be commended for the work he has done in instituting these lectures in this University.

The Radio and Politics

In last week's issue of Time, there appeared an account of a controversy in the United States over the question of political broadcasting. President Roosevelt was the first to use the radio for his one-sided "fireside chats" with the nation, but his political opponents were not slow to adopt the same tactics. The Republican National Committee recently prepared a series of short skits, presenting in dramatized form some of their chief objections to the New Deal. The Committee then approached two of the large American broadcasting chains with the purpose of buying time on the air for their presentation. The offer was flatly turned down by both companies. The reason given for refusal was that plays entail a certain "dramatic license" which might be abused. In other words, it is all right to make political speeches over the air, but the dramatic presentation of the matter contained in these speeches might have an insidious influence on the susceptible minds of the public, and so must be banned.

The distinction drawn is a very subtle one. Apparently, a silver-tongued rhetorician is to be allowed every opportunity to play upon the prejudices, apprehensions and intolerances of his audiences by means of skilful oratory, but the air is closed to those who only go a step further and are completely frank in their dramatization. The radio companies are engagingly naive in their belief that all political speeches which they broadcast are "accurate statements of fact and opinion", in the phrase of one of their presidents; we are a little doubtful whether the influence of a political speech depends upon matter rather than manner. The prophetic pronouncements of doom, the stirring battle cries, the scathing railery of the persuasive speaker have more effect on the average person than any amount of accurate facts and unbiased opinions. Why, then, draw the line at the casting of these elements into dramatic form?

Moreover, no one can turn on the radio for more than ten minutes consecutively in any one program without being subjected to an odious little playlet in which Mary, a housewife, delights her crotchety spouse John after a long hard day at the office with a delicious meal prepared with the aid of Somebody's Baking Powder, or holds his love by keeping her hands soft with Somebody's Hand Lotion; these are the penalties one pays for radio ownership. The radio companies are not so solicitous for their audiences as to prevent their minds from being perverted by this form of dramatic license; to be entirely consistent, they should allow the use of the same methods in the advertising of a political party.

The vital question of political freedom may also be raised here. If political broadcasting is allowed at all, a fair discussion of both sides of the controversies of the day should be allowed. The exclusion of anti-Administration arguments from the air would savour too much of the methods of dictatorship. In Germany and Italy anyone who wants to object to the government on the air has to remove himself to some adjacent country and set up his own radio station; and even then he is apt to avoid dark streets and unfrequented places with nervous assiduity. The radio companies must either provide an open forum for political opinion, or exclude politics from the air entirely.

Are We Backwoodsmen?

The following quotation is an excerpt from an interview given by Dean Cappon of Queen's College, Montreal, just prior to sailing to Europe from New York. The interview appeared in the New York Times and later the Toronto Star.

"Social life is a good thing for students, especially in a country like Canada, where so many of them are raw, unpolished boys and girls from the backwoods," Dean Cappon said. "Social activities are part of their education, and rightly so."

Just what a dean of a Canadian college should wish to convey the impression to the world at large that Canadian students are backwoodsmen is somewhat of a mystery. His description of "raw, unpolished boys and girls from the backwoods" no doubt left the reporters and the reading public conjuring up visions of the Canadian students musing in lectures clad in deerskin coats and moccasins, with a long rifle swinging from their shoulders and a wad of tobacco in their mouths. This is certainly a picturesque vision of a Canadian student but like many picturesque visions it divorces itself entirely from the truth.

True, there are some distinctive qualities found in Canadian students. They are inclined to be considerably more mature in their ideas than American students. There is a healthy virility and strength of character found in Canadian colleges which appear to be lacking elsewhere but these are scarcely qualities to be deplored.

In the matter of personal appearance the Canadian students are perhaps unrivalled in the quality of their dress and deportment. Certainly they present a different picture than the students in American colleges. Even the freshmen dress with an excellence of taste, a condition which excludes the possibility of social contacts having affected them to any great extent.

Canada has long since graduated from the age of colonialism and has a social life which is just as cultured and more desirable than many of her critics. But this fact will be a long time in coming to light while responsible men go abroad making statements which are as absurd as those attributed to Dean Cappon.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Massey Hall

Those of us who follow with interest the extraordinary feats of Popeye, the Sailor, would be similarly impressed by the astounding accomplishments of Ruth Slenczynski, infant prodigy, who played at Massey Hall last night. This child pianist displayed a facile technique worthy of most virtuosi. Aside from her fortissimos, which were a trifle forced, she displayed an amazing clarity and beauty of touch.

Her program was not so commendable. It was obviously designed to display her technical capabilities—and, incidentally, displayed her limitations. For instance, the dramatic contrasts of the Walstein Sonata were not as dramatic as Beethoven intended. Both this and the Schumann "Papillons" (Continued on Page 4)

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crocker

For some time now we have been considering the advisability of having two referees handle all senior games. It is practically impossible for any one man to keep his eye on the ball, watch the ball-carrier's feet, check up on holding and other petty fouls, be on the look-out to call the three-second and four-second rules and watch for a host of other things at one and the same time. An official trying to call everything soon gets in a mess with so many things going on at the same time. Many games get out of hand because the official lets most things go. The solution of the matter seems to be in recruiting an extra pair of eyes and a second whistle. However, in Canada at any rate, this is almost an impossibility due to the fans' apathy toward the cage pastime. In last week's Broadview Varsity tilt, which was considered a natural paid attendance was below one hundred. Basketball is not the only indoor sport to suffer. The students seem to avoid all indoor games. At Wednesday's combined gym-swim meet and dance the paid attendance was only about one hundred and last night's basketball triple-header drew the magnificent total of thirteen payees. At this rate it is suicidal to employ a second referee and so it seems that the single official system together with all its drawbacks must continue. In the United States a good many games are handled by two referees since the cage pastime is able to pay its way but in Canada it seems that this unsatisfactory arrangement must continue due to the financial handicap.

Tomorrow night Varsity's senior and intermediate squads invade London to tackle the Western Mustangs and unless we miss our guess the Blues are in for a double trouncing. The intercollegiate senior basketball loop is especially well-balanced and the Blues will have to be at their best this year to keep the title. There is nothing the senior Blues would rather do than trounce the Purples right in their own pasture due to the fact that the Londoners spoiled the Blues' near-perfect record last season, but it seems to us that they'll have to wait for their revenge. MacCuthen's Seconds are seriously weakened due to the absence of Powers and will in all probability absorb a defeat.

Ace Bailey's Blues invade Pt. Colborne tonight and it wouldn't surprise us if they came back with a victory. We remember a trip to the Sailors' town about two years ago when the Blues won their last victory and they may do it again tonight. At any rate there is no harm in hoping.

We hear that tomorrow night's doings up at Hart House should be very interesting and it would certainly be gratifying to the Blue officials if a decent-sized audience showed up. The dual meet should furnish some good entertainment as eleven University of Buffalo and four O.A.C. lads will visit the Blues.

BASKETBALL SQUADS SPLIT DOUBLEHEADER

Mac McCutcheon's junior and intermediate cage squads earned a victory and a defeat in last night's basketball program in the big gym at Hart House. The juniors bowed to the West End Y youngsters by a 31-25 count while the Blue Seconds coked out an 18-8 victory over the St. Michael's intermediates. In between these two games Varsity Grads were defeated 35-33 after leading by 33-31 with only thirty-five seconds to go.

The St. Michael's-Varsity tilt was one of the poorest games played on the big gym floor in years. Although both squads kept sending the ball up neither team seemed able to get within feet of the hoop. At half time the score was 5-4 in the Blues' favour. Throughout the entire first period the double blue Bay St. squad failed to sink a field goal, getting their total of four on free throws.

In the second half the teams again were away off in their shooting. With four minutes to go the score was 10-6 for Varsity and St. Mike's had yet to score a field goal.

BLUE BASKETEERS TO MEET MUSTANGS IN FIRST CONTEST

Varsity open their intercollegiate basketball schedule this Saturday when they journey to London to tangle with the Mustangs from Western U. All indications are that the game will be a close one. The intercollegiate circuit is very strong this year, with no team being outstanding. Western have played two games so far in this series, losing to McGill by three points and to Queen's by two points, all of which speaks volumes for the ability of the Purple and White quintet, as both of these games were away from home. With the added experience gained from these encounters plus the advantage of playing on their own floor the Westerners are going to be hard to beat.

JR. MEDS DEFEAT U.C. IN WELL-FOUGHT GAME

Travelling at a furious pace throughout the entire game, Jr. Meds defeated U.C. 20-17 in a basketball encounter in the upper gym yesterday afternoon. A large number of fouls slowed up the game, which was a nip-and-tuck affair all the way through.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By B. L. K.

Victoria seniors scored a victory over their juniors at hockey last night, but it was a close game and both teams played well. Vic is fortunate in having enough hockey fans to make two teams, with plenty of subs. Several enthusiastic freshies have turned out to make up for the losses from last year's team, and Vic ought to put up some keen competition for the other faculties. Maisie Cowan showed the same steady dependability as she did in basketball, and Edith Lewis as goalkeeper gave her team-mates excellent support. Gladys Wagg, of last year's all-star team, is back in the game again in as good trim as ever.

The Saint Hilda's Badminton Club are putting up the draw for their tournament today. There are about thirty paid up members in the club, and several others who play anyway, so the tournament promises to be lively. The first round is to be played off by Feb. 8. Saints please note.

The swimming enthusiasts from U.C. held a tea yesterday at the Women's Union and discussed their plans. They are to practice and received instructions from Miss Cockram on Thursdays from 5.30 to 6.30 at the Lillian Massey tank. The U.C. inter-year meet will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 23rd, and the interfaculty grind is scheduled for March 13th.

There is a meeting of the Basketball Club Executive today at 5 p.m. in Room 82, U.C. Details are to be discussed for the Bronze Baby competition, so there will be further information in Monday's column.

UNBEATEN ST. MIKE'S DEFEAT TRINITY 16-4

St. Mike's continued their merry way and unbroken record through the Interfaculty Baseball schedule as they trounced Trinity 16-4 in the Big Gym yesterday afternoon in a five inning game.

Cremasco, pitching for St. Mike's, added 7 strikeouts to his already imposing total and his fine twirling held Trinity to two freak hits and four runs, one of which scored as a result of an error, the other three coming because of passed balls with men on third base.

PHARMACY AND S.P.S. WIN IN HOCKEY

Pharmacy whipped Wycliffe 5 to 1 and Junior S.P.S. scored a 1 to 0 victory over the younger Medicals in an interfaculty hockey doubleheader up on the outdoor rink yesterday afternoon.

The rugged druggists were much faster than their inexperienced opponents and kept Coleman, the Wycliffe goalie, as busy as a Hart House waitress, during the first game.

The second scrap displayed good hockey on both sides. Pringle of School dropped the disc into the mesh from a scramble before five minutes of play had elapsed. From then on it was a tussle with no quarter given.

Varsity fight fans will have a chance to get a line on their B. W. & F. team in Hart House tomorrow night when the Blue and White gladiators of the ring meet the wrestling and fencing teams from the University of Buffalo and four picked fisticuffs from O.A.C.

The Buffalo boys are unknown quantities according to the latest report given out but let it be known that the Blues have reasons to believe that they may split the card with them. Varsity is favoured to win at least two of the boxing bouts, and in the opinion of this writer, will probably make a clean sweep of the agricultural leather-punchers.

Johnnie Millson and Jock Piggett will not be fighting tomorrow night as was previously announced. Piggett is taking an enforced rest because of an injured left hand, and Millson is out because O.A.C. could produce no one of sufficient ability to pit against him. Their places will be taken by Jack Brunke, 155 lbs. and Charley Burke, 165 lbs.

Varsity's two former intercollegiate champions, Freddie Smith, lightweight, and Tom Powell, welter, meet two members of Guelph's senior team of a year ago, Dan Smith and Dave Gray, respectively. These should produce two fast, interesting bouts and two Toronto victories judging by the way both Smith and Powell are working now.

The Varsity wrestlers are all set to take on the Buffalo bone-benders, who may or may not be of outstanding ability. It is thought, however, that they will not be able to show the blue-trunked boys much in the way of legitimate wrestling. The members of the wrestling team are: Austin, 118 lbs.; Johnstone, 125 lbs.; Robertson, 135 lbs.; Houle, 145 lbs.; Cruickshank, 155 lbs.; Newell, 165 lbs.; Van Allen, 175 lbs.; Lathrop, heavy.

One of the visiting fencers, by name Philip Wells, is expected to make things interesting for the local blade-flashers. Wells ranks among the ten best in the United States.

of how the Conservative party has adapted its policies to conform to the changing order.

Dealing with the defeats of Conservative governments in Canada recently, the speaker said, "I do not consider for a moment that the Conservative party has been jeopardized in the least."

The policies of the C.C.F. were disposed of by a reference to man's universal antagonism to legislation affecting his private life. "Moreover," he said, "the man who is most in favour of sharing is the man who has nothing to share."

Among other things Mr. Massey emphasized the importance of maintaining our credit in England. "In England," he said, "Ontario spells Canada."

meant that our present government should exist only as long as it proved expedient. It is no longer so. We are forced to undergo four forms of government which duplicate themselves. Efficiency is a good thing but must not be bought at so dear a price."

The Hon. Mr. Shortt pointed out that our present social set-up requires a form of bureaucracy with a rather intricate development. Besides Quebec would never tolerate such a union as advocated by the opposition, nor would the Maritimes and Prairie Provinces see eye to eye with a legislative union.

school, a definite time at recreation and a definite time at music. I finished public school when I was seven but my father made me repeat it. Now I am doing high school work. I can speak German, French and English fluently."

"What do you do for recreation?" we asked, wondering if our own delights of ten years were beneath her. "I play tag, catch as catch can, or something like that, with my two sisters, other time I write and read. I love literature and read Shakespeare a great deal," Ruth replied, at the same time telling us that she had read more of Shakespeare's plays for pleasure than we had for duty.

been selling magazines and was released, it was learned.

Cody House also had the unique experience of finding two men on the second floor on Wednesday, but they left in a hurry on being questioned by some co-eds.

Co-eds reported an unprecedented amount of thieving has been going on in Whitney Hall this year.

Campus policemen yesterday refused to offer any comment on the robbing of girls' residences in the University. Policemen interviewed would not divulge what if anything, was being done by them as a result.

Toronto police offered little more assistance, although the sergeant declared that, as far as he knew, no added protection was being given the residences by police.

St. Michael's College had several experiences similar to that of the Amesley and Wynwood co-eds last year. Some of the residences were raided and students and priests lost money and clothes as a result. Charles Peters and James Vollmer, entering their room, heard a noise in the closet and investigated. They found a man crouched inside with several pieces of clothing in his possession.

We quote the Professor:

"A Good Meal at a Low Price"

Convent Auditorium

"The Comedian", presented by St. Joseph's College Dramatic Society in the convent auditorium, Brea dalbane St., last night, was an ambitious portrayal of an incident in the reign of the Roman Emperor, Diocletian. The honest depicting of so serious a theme requires finished acting, and St. Joseph's are to be congratulated on the adequate result. Mary McGuire as Genesius, the actor, Eileen O'Donnell as his brother, Eileen Zeagman as Poppaea and Bernice Hall as Polydorus, a playwright, are especially deserving of praise.

The play itself, however, was rather heavy. The plot was obvious and many of the speeches seemed excessively long. Despite the sustained high quality of the acting, the audience became restless at times.

The A.C. Players' Guild

The full import of Professor Wilson-Knight's preface to Sweeney Agonistes did not strike us till after the performance. Separately, both were unusual; together we felt they were supposed to stir to consciousness our sense of the aesthetic, dormant so long in our lowbrow, humdrum existence. We agree that Mr. T. S. Eliot was making a definite attempt to return to poetic drama; the way "What am I going to do", rhymed with "What am I going to do", was superb.

Professor Lange, Iris Gibson and Joan Renaud were particularly good, playing their low types with remarkable realism. The final chorus really was impressive—we caught the nightmare, thank you, professor.

Sherlock Holmes proved to be a rather ordinary little mystery-comedy, the mystery being practically nil. Marg Howe made a good job of her adapting and Hart Buck, if a little stiff, nevertheless proved as peculiar as we always imagined the great detective would be.

The Rector, Rev. C. J. S. Stuart, M.A., B.D., M.C., will preach.

"Regarding the Russian situation," Professor Loudon continued, "I do not think that the Marxian experiment offers a solution to our problems. In fact I believe it will be a failure because it is based on 'materialism'."

"As far as Italy is concerned," he continued, "we must remember that she was our war-time ally. Mussolini, also, has done a great deal of good in Italy since the war. For the last five years, however, the people of that country have been subjected to propaganda regarding the rebuilding of the Roman Empire to its ancient greatness, and as regards the present Italo-Abyssinian situation we can only hope that Italy will realize that her best course is with, and not against, Britain."

As a contrast to countries ruled by dictators, the speaker told his audience of his visit to Great Britain. He also reminded them that it is the presence of the king that prevents the establishment of dictatorships in the British Empire, for the king has the power to dissolve parliament if the latter should infringe on the constitutional rights of the citizens. The king, therefore, stands as the protector of our rights to free speech and a free press.

libelous obituary notice which unfortunately was widely copied, and was not founded on fact.

Burns' popularity may be judged by the fact that at the centenary of his death, 871 celebrations were held, had it not already been proved during his life by the number of his imitators, whom he, however, assessed at their true value as "ill-spawned monsters".

Modern scholarship has given us a picture of Burns as he really was, and his character of a good man, as well as a great poet has been established. "He loved," says Bliss Carman, "and made the world his lover."

SWEESTAKES FOR CANADA!

Winners Insist on Lotteries on Historical and Legal Grounds

The University of Western Ontario team won the first intercollegiate radio debate of the series last Friday night, defeating their opponents, Saul Rae and Jack Graham of the University of Toronto on the subject "Resolved that sweepstakes should be legalized in Canada".

Larry Dampier, the first speaker for Western, upheld the affirmative, and argued for the legalizing of sweepstakes on historical and social grounds. He pointed out that sweepstakes for worthy purposes had long been a policy of government and had been abolished in the reign of George IV due to the protests of the puritanically minded. In spite of the ban betting and lotteries mings is reputed to be the A one-st. Englishmen who would never think of passing a trifling light though it no crime to buy sweep tickets.

The speaker concluded with an appeal to end hypocrisy, establish a governmentally operated lottery on the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes system which would legitimize "good honest gambling" and give the revenues to the government and to worthy causes.

In reply, Saul Rae of Toronto charged his opponent with hypocrisy, and denied that any Canadian sweep could hope to compete with the well-organized Irish system. He denounced the whole idea of sweepstakes as socially and morally vicious, as producing a spirit of "get rich quick" which, moreover, was directly counter to the present Canadian philosophy which is making for organized social betterment.

Sweepstakes, contended Mr. Rae, tended towards a redistribution of wealth that was without intelligence and order, and which embodied a principle that was uneconomic. He declared, in answer to his opponents, that no cause, however worthy, could rely on unworthy means to attain its ends.

Gordon Speers claimed that the gambling instinct in man was too strong to be driven out by any laws, and cited the breakdown of the prohibition amendment.

RABBI EISENDRATH TO SPEAK AT "LIT"

Noted Preacher Will Discuss the Feasibility of Pacifism

An important constitutional matter is to be discussed at the open meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society next Wednesday night at eight o'clock in the junior common room, Bernie Shaffer announced last night.

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisenrath will be the guest speaker at the meeting. The subject of his address will be "Is Pacifism Possible". Noted throughout America as a powerful speaker, Rabbi Eisenrath has spoken previously on the campus at a Hart House debate.

It was rumoured that the high table scene from the tremendously successful U.C. Follies of this year will be presented in answer to widespread demand from the undergraduates.

RDYAL YORK HOTEL

Medical students and even Arts men were getting "out their white ties and brushing off their tails" today in preparation for the huge Medical At-Home at the Royal York this Friday night.

Further information about the coloured dance band led by Leroy Smith which will play at the affair, was obtained by Cam Gray, member of the dance committee, over the week-end. Smith himself has arranged for Don Redman and Fred Waring and has been acclaimed as a novelty fiddler and a tap dancer.

Smith and his 10 coloured rhythm boys from the Cotton Club and the NBC will play the hy-de-ho music of the Cab Calloway variety but any request from "Sidewalks of New York" to the "Music Goes Round and Round" will be played as well. Gray pointed out that the negro band will provide a well balanced program of 20 dances of 15 minutes each with plenty of novelty numbers interspersed throughout the program.

Only one of the three waterpolo games scheduled for Friday afternoon in the pool, took place. St. Mike's defeated the first game to the Victoria team and the Jr. S.P.S.-Jr. Meds game was postponed. In the third scheduled game U.C. swamped the Sr. Meds by the score of 4-1.

The U.C. boys had too much speed and too clever a passing attack for the Medical team and had no difficulty in eluding their checks, to score practically at will. U.C. scored two goals in the first period and two in the second. Meds lone goal was scored on a long shot at the end of the first period.

Many capable University men are overlooking a good chance in the field of Municipal Administration, is the opinion of the Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Public Welfare. The Municipal Board is at present inaugurating a series of lectures on the subject of local government and it may be possible for interested students to attend, he thinks.

While no such survey is made in the University of Toronto, Mr. E. A. Macdonald of the S.A.C. thought the figures here would be much larger.

Colonel Smyth, who is connected with the placing of students in the Faculty of Applied Science, made the statement that "about ninety per cent of the students are gainfully employed by the first six months after graduation. The absorption of graduates last (Continued on Page 3)

GIFT OF MELODY BURNS' GREATNESS

Snyder Delivers Last Lecture in Series on Scottish Poet

WRDTE 354 SONGS

The Alexander Lectures on Burns were brought to a conclusion yesterday afternoon in Hart House Theatre when Professor Snyder attempted to rank Burns according to his deserts in the field of art. "There have been definitions of poetry," confessed Professor Snyder, "from the time of Aristotle to Carl Sandberg and I do not propose to add another."

Beginning with words which are the "bricks and mortar" with which the poet builds a "Temple of song", Snyder pointed out that Burns' choice of words was "like Scotch whiskey, a skillful blend", that he abounded in "phrases of memorable appropriateness." He also pointed out his absolute and perfect simplicity of phrasing, metrical skill and drew attention to Burns' fondness for the single rhyme uniting all of the verses. "Craftsmanship is not enough, however, to preserve Burns' work to eternity."

Burns wrote 354 songs in his day, two thirds of which according to Professor Snyder, might be eliminated, but the remaining ones would more than justify the trouble taken with them. They show Burns' power at its height, "simple, sensuous and impassionate." Matthew Arnold's praise of the "Jolly Beggars" despite his "Johnsonian aversion to things Caledonian", was quoted in behalf of Burns.

To sum up his rapid survey of the poet's works, Professor Snyder said, "His style was uneven and inconsistent and showed rapid development, he was (Continued on Page 4)

GRUBE, HAVELLOCK AND REID

There were indications today that the faculty of the University are going to turn out in unprecedented numbers to the Hart House debate this Thursday when the controversial topic "That this house regrets the intrusion of professors into politics" is debated.

The issue of academic freedom and the part of the University professor in public life has been dormant for some time on this campus, but there is evidence that Thursday night it will flare into the open again. "It looks like a memorable debate," Saul Rae, Speaker of the House, commented last night.

Professors Grube and Havelock, who spoke at the Victoria College faculty debate last term, are expected to attend and Escott Reid of the Institute of International Affairs will also be there. Professor Underhill of the history (Continued on Page 4)

The Blue and White exponents of the many arts were just too good for their opposition in the international-intercollegiate set-to at Hart House on Saturday night.

The Varsity boxers showed a marked superiority in smoothness of style and fistic effectiveness and sent the four Fighting Farmers from O.A.C. home with only one win and a close one at that.

Freddie Smith and Tom Powell, former intercollegiate champions, gave clever variations of the punch, parry and clinch act to win their respective bouts in the feather and welterweight divisions. Jack Brunke, fighting at 155 lbs., seemed short on condition but had his man ready for the "put away" at the final bell. Charley Burke, at 165 lbs., disappointed the fans by dropping the decision in a bout that can only be described as "bloody".

"Paradise Regained", dramatic offering in Hart House Theatre, was a rare comedy by Clare Annis, featuring Con Broady and Warden Likkerebreath. The plot featured an invasion of Engineers into Ethiopia, and was comparatively clean for School Night. What is Wrong With Boxing?

Many people at many times have offered suggestions as to what was wrong with boxing at the University of Toronto and why the best matched bouts available attract but a mere handful of followers. While there may be several underlying reasons, we believe the chief obstacles were personified at the dual meet here Saturday night.

During the course of the evening the official announcer, who arrived considerably late, stepped into the ring at the conclusion of the first bout and made the following announcement. "If you people want to shout, you better go down to the Arena Gardens. These are intercollegiate matches and no shouting is allowed. Anyone wanting to make noise during the bouts better go somewhere else and do it. If there is another occurrence of this we will stop the bouts immediately." This polite announcement came from the gentleman in the stiff shirt without any previous announcement to the effect that no comments concerning the competitors was to be allowed during the course of the bouts.

Granting that boxing at the University is a different type of sport than the average "fights" and heckling is not permitted, this method of conveying the information to the audience is hardly likely to elicit much public support for such affairs. Nor is it very probable that it will be favourably received by a public always ready to brand the University as being snobbish.

We have every sympathy with the desire to conduct such affairs in a manner in keeping with the atmosphere of the University. That is as it should be and is to the advantage of the audience and competitors alike. But we have no desire to see such exhibitions of snobbishness repeated, as was manifested by the announcer, who incidentally is on the athletic directorate.

The meet which took place on Saturday night was a credit in every way to the men who promoted it. Besides giving the athletics much needed competition it fostered a friendlier spirit in the international intercollegiate circles. But such ventures must be supported by the public and students if they are to continue. And such support will continue to be lacking if the general attitude, as conveyed in the announcer's remarks to the audience is to continue.

An Undesirable Art

What are the most promising courses of study for modern students to follow? The answer forms one of the few statements upon which recent writers tend to agree. They simply say,—there isn't any. By way of postscript, it is generally noted that this profession is slightly more overcrowded than that one.

One phase of the question is only slightly discussed. There is one art which students could study greatly to their material advantage; yet, to their glory, it can be said that they shun it. It is that profitable trick of sitting gracefully on the fence. Anyone can sit on a fence but it takes much practise and careful study to do it gracefully. The art is diligently pursued in that harsh, cold world into which we are going to be bounced in a few short months or years. Under present conditions high ideals and sound sportsmanship of college life may become a mercenary handicap, and if you are going to fit into the business world you will have to learn how to become a fence-sitter, (F.S.). At least you are going to be faced with the temptation.

It is comparatively easy and comfortable to slip along by studying the path of least resistance and following it. On the other hand, the man or woman who undertakes to be guided by his inmost conscience must be prepared to fight every inch of life's way. And this definitely excludes those who line up with the opposition just because it is the opposition.

The fact that fence-sitters are so easily tolerated, indeed acclaimed clever, is undoubtedly a soft spot in our social structure. Those outside college walls may fling their taunts at our ideals, and, with a degree of truth label us as theorists. Some of them may demonstrate to perfection the gains of fence-sitting and with a sly wink suggest that we become more practical and consider it. Our worth as Canadian citizens and graduates of the University will, in a large degree, depend upon how we answer this challenge.

Today, when each new headline heralds some world crisis, or the outbreak of a new menace to world peace, the newspapers, and the press agencies on which they rely, are the centre of increasing interest to the general public, which must look to them for guidance in following the major events of the day, both at home and abroad. People are more and more coming to realize the importance and nearness of happenings in Europe and the Far East. Instead of being merely something that is occurring two or three thousand miles away, news of foreign events touches closer to home than ever before. We live now in an age that is making history, as no other era in the world before. The result is that the metropolitan press exerts a tremendous influence on public opinion and in the formulating of mass ideas. This represents a social responsibility that newspapers have never before known. The question is, how are the modern newspapers meeting this new and vital issue?

The most important development in recent days in the journalistic field is the rise of what has been called, variously, "yellow papers" and "tabloids". William Randolph Hearst and Bernard MacFadden, are the two leading exponents of the art of introducing propaganda into the news with the least degree of subtlety and with the utmost crudity and blatancy. Between them, they own enough newspapers and magazines to influence a very great majority of the American voting class. Although outwardly antagonistic and competitive, it is surprising to see what degree of similarity really exists in the respective chains of newspapers which they control.

Advertising is openly and quite apparently mendacious in these journals. The most obvious fakes and quack nostrums are advocated in its advertising pages. These newspapers capture most of the patent medicine advertising trade and the great percentage of the lower forms of trickery.

Editorial policy in even the more conservative journals, and in the supposedly independent ones, is frequently dictated by the interests of a small minority, since it is upon advertising that the sheet relies for over two-thirds of its revenue. One author referred to the men who write the editorials as "kept editors" and the analysis is piercing. Freedom of the press is guaranteed by law, but there is no federal control of ownership; and that is one of the fallacies of modern practical democracy, which rests after all on the truthful dissemination of news, and on honest commentary on it, freed from the necessities of catering to a very small minority and from purely mercenary considerations. Too often the metropolitan newspaper will confine its yellowness to its editorial pages. It is only when editors are released from these hampering ties and are allowed to express themselves honestly and truthfully, and at the same time can feel sure of retaining their positions, that they will cease to be mere hirelings. When this time comes, freedom of the press will be something more than a mere bombastic phrase and will signify something that is real, something that exists outside the mere frantic mouthings of political speakers.

No. 2. The Victoria College Graduating Class.

Are still a little surprised at the way their graduation pictures turned out. Are wondering how they will look in cap and gown.
Are really quite pleased that their education is nearly completed.
Are thankful that they went to Vic.
Are already prefacing their remarks with "This is the last time . . ."
Are wishing that they had been more attentive to what the president said in his opening address in their first year.
Are anticipating joining three or four Alumni Societies.
Are speaking of the "old College".
Are all of a dither about the senior formal.
Are rather dubious about how the Vic traditions will be upheld in the years to come.
Are quite complacent about their undergraduate achievements.
Are certain that they have exerted a strong socialistic influence on the political life of the campus.
Are planning to do something about the Rhodes Scholarship situation when they are on the Board of Governors.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

The five o'clock recital given by Viggo Kihl was of an impromptu nature and became an all-Bach program by popular demand.

Mr. Kihl first spoke on the form of a fugue, a composition on the basis of short musical with counter-subjects which are played above and below the theme. With these units, scores of permutations are possible. Bach was especially masterful in creating themes which could be adapted to this form.

The program consisted of the E minor Fugue in two parts and a Three Part Fugue and Prelude, both from the first volume of the Well-Tempered Clavichord; Prelude and Fugue in C minor; an Organ Fantasia and Fugue, and the theme and first variation from Goldberg Variations.

Mr. Kihl's jovial nature and his style of imparting this to his playing always make his recitals especially enjoyable. G.M.B.

Friday Afternoon Recital

Hart House Sunday evening concert goers were treated to a delightful program of song last evening in the Great Hall. Marion Copp, contralto, was the artist, with Sir Ernest MacMillan at the piano.

Miss Copp chose a program well-suited to her smooth, easy flowing manner of singing. It consisted of several German songs and a few folk songs. We were particularly delighted with the two Schubert numbers.

Sir Ernest in the role of accompanist is unexcelled. L.V.

Let's Go Places

Loew's—

Any radio or movie fan who may wonder on what basis Eddie Cantor calls himself a comedian will find the answer in Strike Me Pink which is appearing this week at Loew's. The picture may be aptly called a rejuvenation for Cantor for he returns to the role on which he swept to popular acclaim, namely that of Popeye the tailor.

Strike Me Pink is a hair raising comedy of the type in which Harold Lloyd used to excel. As the setting is laid in an amusement park, innumerable opportunities are afforded Cantor to partake in death defying leaps. The audience, certain of his ultimate ex-termination from the dangerous plights, rollick at the situations. One feature which should interest you is the freedom with which trick photography is used in the picture. In our opinion Strike Me Pink represents a decisive step in the disassociation of the movie from the legitimate theatre.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Both the hockey games played Friday night ended with 4-0 scores. Victoria seniors took St. Mike's into camp, and then St. Hilda's defeated Vic juniors in another shutout game. In the first game most of the play was down near the St. Mike's goal, and the goalie didn't have much time to relax. The Saints' best player, Mary Gallagher, was absent, and since the rest of the team admit that she does the scoring for them, perhaps the next game may not result in such a severe defeat.

The game between Vic juniors and St. Hilda's was rather one-sided with the Saints shooting wildly. Mary Dignam knocked down one of the goalposts and nearly broke her arm, in a rush on the Vic goal. Another feature of the game was Molly Scater, the Vic coach yelling, "Watch that Knight woman".

There will be a practice today for the following twelve girls from five to six in the Lillian Massey gym: Kay Grubbe, Betty Jenkinson, Billy McGarry, Ellen Wilson, Alice Bassnet, Kay Brown, Marg Glass, Myrtle Robb, Erna Laing, Mary Leslie, Alice Elshout and Muriel Beaton. All others who have been turning out, are to have to practice Tuesday from six to seven-thirty, and then the above mentioned players will work out from seven to eight-thirty.

At the meeting of the Basketball Club Executive Friday afternoon, plans were made for the big week-end of February 21 and 22, when the McGill, Queen's, and Western teams play here in the intercollegiate basketball series. This occasion comes only once in four years, and all girls in the University should try to put it over in a big way.

Victoria Juniors Defeated By St. Hilda's Pucksters

The St. Hilda's hockey team defeated Vic juniors with a shutout of 4-0 Friday night on the stadium rink. The game was uneven with the Vic team on the defensive most of the time. The Saints were inclined to shoot wildly and Vic fought hard to keep the score down but were unable to get close enough to their opponents' net to score. For the Saints Elaine Knight, Mary Dignam and Gladys Carvold did the scoring.

Have you ever heard of or seen SHAKESPEARE-LAND? If you haven't, then you've missed something. But there is yet time. The LAND is just around the east corner of Yonge Street on Wellington.

We were there the other evening and had a meal such as must have caused Falstaff's rotundity. The menu cards breathe Shakespeare; the decorations by way of panels of scenes in Stratford-on-Avon; coloured window panes; mugs and medallions; 'churchwarden' clay pipes strung in rows from the rafters, each autographed by and at the service of the patrons; cuckoo-clock and chiming; piano and fiddle-de-dee; candle-labrum and candle-sticks galore; the dinkiest little beer-barrel strung up and looking quite excusable; pictures and pottery about the Bard facing one on every hand and in most unexpected corners; the prettiest of waitresses (and the pleasantest of hosts); all do honour to the greatest poet of all time. And, in your haste to discover these wonders right here in the City of Toronto in this year of Grace One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirty-six, before ascending the creaking stairs and settling a most dinnerish-sounding bell a-ringing, stop and look at the door, so old and strong with iron bars, braces and studded nails to its adornment, which must surely have withstood any battering-ram of mediæval times.

Verily, if we cannot have Shakespeare in the flesh, we CAN imbibe his spirit and sportiveness here. No Torontonians who are self-respecting, can afford to say he has not been to SHAKESPEARE-LAND and taken his friends there, too!

SENIOR BASKETEERS LOSE TO WESTERN BY NARROW MARGIN

Varsity Team Wilts in Second Half after Leading 17-9

FINAL SCORE 26-25

Connelly Stars for Losers Despite Infected Leg

By Clarke Hood

The Varsity senior basketball team started the intercollegiate series on the wrong foot when they dropped a close decision to the Western Mustangs at London on Saturday night. The final score read 26-25 and is reminiscent of the game last season when Western defeated Varsity by the same margin. The Blue team led at half time by a 17-9 score, but in the second half their attack folded up completely and this, coupled with a determined Western attack, spelled doom. Joe Connelly was suffering from a badly infected leg, which had necessitated him spending the previous night in the hospital, but despite this handicap he played a stellar game. The capacity crowd that greeted the teams must have got the boys down in the second half, as the referee's whistle was barely audible at times above the din. To hear such a noise was new to the Blues as the Toronto students never seem to put in an appearance when their team plays.

Soon after the opening whistle the homesters jumped into a three point lead. However, Varsity soon became used to the floor, and proceeded to carry the attack to the Purple and White squad. Baskets by Neil Sullivan and Gold, along with a single by Marks gave Varsity the lead. Then Western came back to snatch the lead momentarily, but once more Neil of the Rochester Sullivan put Varsity on top and from then on they kept adding to their lead with Western occasionally putting in a feeble reply. Western failed to flash an impressive looking offense. They passed the ball aimlessly, and most of their players moved with the agility of a truck. Varsity, on the other hand, were always dangerous, and their more brilliant attack prevented the first half from being a complete washout.

The game was the last word in excitement, and the Western fans were constantly in a fever during the second half, first when their pets would score and then when Varsity would miss. And they missed several times during the last session. The strictness of the officials made them a little cautious, which had its inevitable result in the low scoring. Hugh Marks played the entire game and was the standout. He played aggressively at all times and handed out many accurate passes. Due to his rugby prowess he was the object of several taunts from the strongly partisan crowd. Phil Gold, with seven points, played a brilliant game for the Blues, especially in the first half, when he scored all his points.

KNOX AND SCHOOL WIN HOCKEY TILTS BY CLOSE SCORES

Friday afternoon on the cushion at Varsity Stadium, Knox College defeated Forestry 2-0 in a close, hard-fought game. There was no scoring until the last two minutes, when Warren, the Purple and White centre, scored two goals, with Graham getting an assist on the first, to decide the issue.

The game between S.P.S. and St. Mike's saw the Engineers emerge on the long end of a 3-1 score. This was a fast, hard-checking game, with School forcing the play right through, after the first five minutes. Wright opened the scoring by lifting a long one from centre ice that found the corner of the Schoolmen's net. Kerr came in soon to tie the game up by batting the rubber home in a scramble around St. Mike's goal. Woods scored next to put the Schoolmen ahead 2-1. Early in the last period School added another tally, but even though leading they led the attack and played the double blues off their feet by their backchecking.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Frank Lamberti

Disillusioned but not disheartened, the University of Toronto senior cage team returned from London with a stinging 26-25 reverse registered against them by the Western aggregation who overcame a 17-9 Varsity lead to flash home victors over the Blue and White. The Varsity intermediates had too much offensive strength for the Western seconds as they toppled the Purple and White by a score of 29-17.

The Varsity-Western basketball tilt was well attended and the return match in Toronto should draw a capacity crowd as each game in the intercollegiate series will be of vital importance, judging by the well balanced teams representing Queen's and McGill, who just eked out victory over Western by very narrow margins.

The dual boxing, wrestling and fencing meet held at Hart House was productive of very edifying results from a Varsity standpoint as the Blue representatives of the fine and gentle art of the corded arena came through with but one reverse in boxing and one in wrestling.

In the fencing Varsity was defeated by Buffalo, losing 9-8, and in defeat made a creditable showing as the Buffalo exponents of the foil have several outstanding fencers in New York. The meet attracted a crowd of one hundred and twenty-five paid. The dual meet in all pointed out the fact that the University of Toronto B. W. & F. team will be strong contenders in the intercollegiate assault.

Evidently down in Buffalo they have not forgotten the bovine traits of their namesake as the Buffalo wrestlers had a full repertoire of grunts and groans which would be the envy of the desperate badmen battling under the Corcoran colours, such as Zaharias and Plummer.

Although the Senior O.H.A. campaign has been fraught with difficulties for the Blue men, the University of Toronto hope to make amends in the intercollegiate series which opens next Friday night at McGill when they engage the Redmen in a home and home game with goals to count on the round for the intercollegiate senior championship. As for the international intercollegiate series there is "no such animal yet".

Bohn Head Plays—Although the officials in the Interprovincial R.U. have not as yet fathomed the Berry Hilliard mystery, down in Texas the football star is well established. It seems in his duties as liquor agent he was to make undercover purchase of a glass of whiskey which, according to state law, is illegal, and then use the purchase as evidence against the proprietor of such establishment, and while attempting to do so the familiar cry of, "there goes Bohn Hilliard", went up and the discomfited former Texas football star made a great run for the door—a pleasing run no doubt like the one up in Ottawa.

ment in the United States as an example of the failure of legislation against human nature. The government, which forbade lotteries, yet permitted stock market gambling and minor games of chance and actually collected income taxes from sweepstake winners.

J. E. L. Graham, drew attention to what he called his opponents' tendency to "minimize the social evils of sweepstakes and magnify the noble ones." That hospitals were not in such eager need of sweepstake money was shown by the refusal of British hospitals to request such aid.

Dr. Eddy is a former Y.M.C.A. Secretary for Asia, in which capacity he served the students of India, China, Japan and the Near East for many years. He is the author of innumerable pamphlets and of several volumes on politico-religious topics, the best known of the latter being "The New Era in Asia", "The Challenge of Russia", and "The Challenge of the East". Later, however, Dr. Eddy has devoted his energies to travelling, studying and lecturing.

Speaking in Toronto early in 1933, he outlined the contemporary crisis in Manchukuo. He filled Convocation Hall with an enthusiastic audience. This year the S.C.M. consider themselves fortunate in being able to bring Dr. Eddy to the University, and confidently expect as fascinating an address and as large a gathering.

their obligations and in every case the default is the result of an acute relief situation.

In the past it was the policy of the government to meet all the costs of unemployment relief but now, said Mr. Croll, "We pay ninety per cent and let the municipality supply the rest."

"It appears even now though," he said, "as if some of the localities were so much enjoying their lower taxation and other aids, that they have no wish to be self-supporting and neglect to realize that their future credit is being endangered."

Emphasizing the fact that both sides of a disturbing condition must be faced, the speaker pointed out that bondholders today are more reasonable than in the past, and in many cases a compromise was reached by means of a reference of the situation to the Department of Municipal Affairs.

In cases where thirty per cent of the bondholders would not agree to a compromise even after the board had studied the plan, Mr. Croll said nothing could be done.

There are also two other bureaus which attempt to fit the students into work for which they have the best qualifications. One is connected with the S.A.C. and another with the Alumnae. Cards may be obtained from these offices and filed so that employers may at any time find students to fit their needs. However, it was disclosed that the three best months for employing students were June, September and January.

Because we have no adequate survey for the whole University it is difficult to determine actually what percentage of students here know definitely what their plans are after graduation but it would seem that it would be higher

INTERMEDIATES WIN CAGE GAME AGAINST WESTERN

Varsity Forces Game from Start to End with 12 Point Lead

McLAUGHLIN STARS

The Varsity intermediate basketball team convincingly defeated the Western seconds by 29-17 to give Varsity an even break on their London invasion. Unlike the seniors the intermediates continued their assault of the first half into the second half, and their lead was never seriously menaced.

The game started out rather slowly, but the Blues soon warmed up. Western presented a very slow moving attack whose only feature was the nice ball handling of Wolff. They refused to open up and it was Varsity's task to make the game interesting. They jumped into an early lead and were never headed. Leading the Varsity attack was McLaughlin, who sank three baskets. This freshman was a standout all evening and looks the most promising prospect of the crop.

In the second half Western came out of their shell for a time, but even then their attack was anything but strong, and the Blue team coasted home with their twelve point margin of victory. Dougherty with four points, Hogg with three, were the high scorers for Varsity, while Singer supplied the feature of the half by sinking the ball from a long way out.

The wrestling teams from the University of Buffalo granted and groaned in true professional style to the vast amusement of the crowd but didn't do so well at actual wrestling and lost six out of seven bouts to the Varsity grapplers, who were quiet and business-like.

The best wrestling bout on the card was the 165 lb. struggle between Bert Newell of Toronto and Bud Person of Buffalo, which the Varsity boy won in overtime because of his better condition. Person tried flying headlocks and even an aeroplane spin but succumbed to Newell's punishing head twist.

The Varsity fencers won the foils competition 7-2 but lost out on the whole by a 9-8 count to Buffalo. Boxing: 155 lbs., Brumke, V. def. Craig, O.A.C.; 165 lbs., Wolfe, O.A.C., def. Burke, V.; 125 lbs., Smith, V. def. Smith, O.A.C.; 145 lbs., Powell, V. def. Gay, O.A.C.

Lokalbahn Stops At Every Station Herr Lange Stops At No Flirtation

Deah mei I simply must review my "der, die, das"! It seems the German Club's play Die Lokalbahn, has sort of sneaked up on us, unawares like, and tonight's the night. Place—Hart House Theatre. Director—Professor Boeschstein. Company—The Most Illustrious German Club Players.

Our chief informant for matters particular and specific was the chieftain of Usherettes. "Is it good?" she gasped. "Woman, it's magnificent, stupendous, colossal, it's... it's satisfying!" It appears that the cast know their German onions: Professor Lange plays the leading role; any of the players that don't speak German as a paternal language seem to have been finished (scholastically) in little deutsche finishing schools and sprechen with genuine toney German accents. Madeleine Cummings is reputed to be the A-oneest. The play is by one Ludwig Thoma. It's a comedy, social, political, and musical. The action is interspersed with robust folk songs, rendered by the Trinity choir disguised as the mob. The costumes are authentic (where have I heard that before?) designed by Lotte Ullman and executed by most of the club's feminine enthusiasts. There is a perfect replica of a beer garden complete with band and steins. The beverage will be refreshing but not quite as authentic as the costumes, prudence on the part of the director being the better part of good producing.

In choosing a modern play the German Club is setting itself a precedent. It seems they also set one five years ago. Goethe's Faust, as played by the club, was such a success that they were afraid any other production would look mediocre by comparison. After five long barren years, they again spread their histrionic wings, landing on Hart House chimney pots tonight. And not that we don't want to hear from them for another five years but we hope the usberette is right.

A jarring note is introduced by the producers, who, not content with having a sure-fire action comedy, try to turn the picture into a musical extravaganza. Personally, we gagged gustily at Goldwyn's glorious girls and could pen a lethal sermon about Ethel Merman.

Imperial—

We came away from the Imperial this week feeling very pleased with the world in general, because a poet theory of ours is so convincingly borne out by the current presentation. The Idea is everything.

Josef Cherniavsky is the man with the ideas, plus the ambition and the showmanship to carry them out. Writing a novel musical arrangement for your orchestra to play, is one thing; putting life into the members of your band so that they romp through their numbers in such merry fashion that the audience begin to perk up and chuckle, is something entirely different and exceedingly refreshing. This week at the Imperial, even the ushers are smiling spontaneously, instead of mechanically. Cherniavsky knows when to clown and when to be serious: he knows enough to give Francis Shelley a good mike and then let her personalize in her own fashion: he sensibly gives Harvey Doney no mike at all, and lets the Doctor have the spotlight all to himself while his mellow baritone goes "Rollin' Home", and all to the varied delight of the audience. And it is ever a treat to hear Dr. Doney's voice from some other source than "The Mission of the Air".

King of Burlesque, the film feature, carries you along in the mood already created by the orchestra. Warner Baxter is so natural as a show producer that you forget how many other people you have seen eat in similar roles. Jack Oakie provides pleasant humour and is minus his usual unbearable cockiness. The story travels quickly and musically to the tunes of half a dozen moderate hits. The "set-up millionaire" suggests a new character find for the films, and come to think of it, the story of The King of Burlesque itself plays tribute to the all important Idea—although the ideas concocted for demonstrational purposes are not themselves very original.

But, to switch back to the pit, you must go to the Imperial this week to hear Cherniavsky's version of Let's Put Out the Lights and Go to Sleep, if for no other reason. That portion of the lyric which had you raising your eyebrows the first time you heard the words to this hit, a few years ago, will have you chuckling as you hear it replete with the implications now given it by the Imperial orchestra.

Toronto Symphony

Sir Ernest MacMillan again conducted the Toronto Symphony Orchestra in their popular Saturday afternoon concert, this week's program consisting entirely of Russian music by the more well-known and modern of the Russian composers.

The sombre, fateful first movement of the Tchaikovsky Fifth Symphony opened the program with the clarinet and string accompaniment for the first theme rather unconvincing of the leaden deliberate tread of fate the composer meant to betoken. The later scale passages for the strings, however, were more successful in adding a still more eerie ghostly character to the movement. The entire Symphony, with perhaps the exception of the last triumphant movement was treated with too much restraint by the orchestra despite entirely adequate conducting. The delightful waltz themes constituting the third movement seemed more within the scope of the orchestra, and nothing of their intended grace and cheerfulness was lost in the rendition.

The Prince Igor overture by Borodin was disappointing, the charming brilliant ballet music, rich in colour and varied movement, was conspicuous by its absence. Borodin's style is somewhat complicated and full of bold harmonies, and although he lacks something of unity and simplicity, he atones for it by the power of his expression and the national, almost personal flavour of his music. The entire overture was much less moving than the symphony.

Arenski's "Variations for Strings on a Theme of Tchaikovsky" was characterized by the consistent treatment by the strings of the quiet, gentle, religious atmosphere of the theme itself. This rather uninteresting composition was a splendid foil, however, for the concluding number of the program, Rimski-Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagno"—a picture on realistic lines, somewhat crude in tone, but full of riotous combinations of orchestration that produce extraordinary effects. The orchestra entered splendidly into the spirit of the truly Spanish themes which were first taken up by the different solo instruments and then by the full orchestra. As an encore, the orchestra played the beautiful, ever-popular "Andante Cantabile" of Tchaikovsky.

D.D.S.S.

Canadian Grand Opera

The Canadian Grand Opera Association's presentation of Giuseppe Verdi's

Aida at Massey Hall last Saturday evening was very well received by an appreciative audience. This colourful pageant of ancient Egypt in the time of the Pharaohs was vividly portrayed in all its brilliant lavish scale, the scenic effects and costumes being exceptionally well designed.

Although the singing in the first act became subdued at times, almost fading before the resurgent music of an augmented orchestra, the performance of the role of Aida by Jeanne Pengelly struck a delightful peak. The installation of Rhadames as commander of the Egyptian army was particularly effective as the chorus reached a delightful epitome of full tonal quality. The character, Zoltan of Ammonas by Irving Levine had a dramatic buoyancy all through the opera.

The third act was productive of the best acting and but for the slight distortion of James Walker in the role of Rhadames, the characters were given many curtain calls by a rather enthusiastic audience. The touching plea of Anneris (Edythe Shuttleworth) in an effort to save Rhadames, while lacking full expression, had a pleasing effect, and the final scene as the opera drew to a close completely shrouded the singing of the principals, as Richard Hageman produced a fine musical background. Throughout the opera the music was well rendered.

The performance of Ramphis and the King of Egypt by Basil McGillivray and Burke Callaghan respectively, gave the production perfect balance. A rather surprising note was that the opera was sung in English, which in some way lacked the usual fire of the original but the attempt was most ambitious and deserves commendation.

PARENTS ADOPT WRONG ATTITUDE

An Effective Partnership in Adult's Enterprise is Aim of Youth

MUST UNDERSTAND, TO AID

Dr. Miriam Van Waters, prominent United States social worker, summed up the attitude of the present generation towards the rising one in an address on "Youth in Crisis" at Jarvis Collegiate last night.

"There are two attitudes commonly adopted by parents in their treatment of young people, both of which are utterly wrong. There is an exaggerated theoretical dependence on youth and a ready contempt when youth attempts to make some practical use of the oft acknowledged dependence."

"What youth is aiming at is to achieve an effective partnership with an adult enterprise that is a 'going concern,' the speaker continued.

Dr. Van Waters outlined the needs of young people as first, for an intelligible world whose standards they understand, for skill and the training which produces it, for the chance of recognition of their talents and above all for adults worthy of imitation.

The speaker stressed the fact that neither the home, which is invaded by the radio and popular press, nor the schools, too often occupied in teaching "the mechanics of making a living," nor the church are alone capable of guiding the young people of today. "We must aim at the integration of our forces for understanding youth," she declared.

Haworth To Speak On Architecture

The Art Committee are fortunate in being able to announce that Mr. Peter Haworth has consented to give three informal talks in the Art Gallery in Hart House on three successive Wednesdays—5th, 12th and 19th February. The subjects of the addresses will be (1) Decoration applied to Buildings: Interior and Exterior, (2) Reproductive Crafts, and (3) Objects fashioned for Beauty: Functional and Non-Functional.

Mr. Haworth is well known in Toronto not only as an artist of outstanding ability but as a brilliant teacher of the arts and crafts in the Central Technical School. For his first talk on Wednesday next Mr. Haworth will illustrate with the use of slides the great importance of the craftsman in architecture.

HITLER WORST MENACE TO PEACE MUSSOLINI NOT FAR BEHIND

Lying War Propaganda Spreads False Idea of Opponents Claims Noted Lecturer

CAUSE FOR ALARM IN EAST

Foundations of Economic Order Basically False and Wrong; System Crumbling

In his address to the Student's Christian Movement yesterday afternoon Dr. Sherwood Eddy, noted traveller and lecturer, gave a graphic description of the conditions existing in the world today and of the challenges with which we are faced.

In answer to the question, what is wrong with the world today, Dr. Eddy declared that the menace of a world war or a series of world wars, that threaten to destroy our civilization, seem most imminent.

"Italy, Germany and Japan belong to the 'have-not' nations—all are desperately poor, each have excess populations to which they are able to offer neither land nor employment (other than military)." Dr. Eddy stated that Mussolini was modelling his career on those of Caesar and Napoleon. He said that Hitler's aims were to control Austria and Memel, and through the Germans of Czechoslovakia, he was looking towards the Ukraine, the future empire. "Hitler is the worst menace to world peace today, and as long as this half genius, and half madman and his gang are ruling Germany there can be no hope for establishing lasting peaceful relations in the world." In speaking about the persecution of the Jews, Dr. Eddy claimed that it was his own experience to see such signs as "Dogs and Jews not admitted to this building," distributed freely throughout the cities of the Vatterland.

Trail of Limping Dog Ends in Beastly Fog

A dog's bloody trailing footprints in the neighbourhood of the campus yesterday led three news hounds along Wilcox St. and down Spadina Ave. on the scent of a story.

For some time it was suspected that proprietors of nearby beverage rooms were resorting to trickery to entice students into their kennels. Across streets and up alleys the news heeled wended their way, barking their shins on the refuse that litters the city's dark corners.

When the trail came to an abrupt end the Exchange Editor naively asked: "Can dogs climb trees?"

DISCUSS OLD TESTAMENT AT ORIENTAL SOCIETY

In a paper on the permanent value of the Old Testament, Professor Horan of Wycliffe College, stated last evening at the Oriental Society meeting that the religious value of this work could be summed up under three heads: The teaching of religion, which constituted his first reason, he maintained was the grounds for the establishment of the theory of the universe. His second point was the value of the ethical teaching found therein. The last benefit which such a study is likely to give is found in the insight which may be gained into the moral and spiritual qualities of mankind. "Events today illustrate that sooner or later we shall return to the religion of the Old Testament," stated Professor Horan.

ADDED PRIVILEGES AND NEW LOW RATES ATTRACT STUDENTS

Hart House Gains Popularity by Smoking Privileges, Removal of Benches

MANY FAMOUS GUESTS

More than ninety thousand lunches were served in the Great Hall at Hart House during the past term, it was learned yesterday. This increase of thirty thousand over the same term of the previous year is attributed to the introduction of new low rates together with smoking privileges and chairs in place of benches.

In addition to undergraduates, Great Hall saw many distinguished visitors during the past term. Among those who have recently sat at the high table are numbered such well-known men as Paul Robeson, famous negro singer; General MacNaughtan; Wilson Cash, world renowned authority on Mohammedanism; the internationally famous sculptor, Carl Mills; V. W. Lanfear, Dean of Men at Pittsburgh University; and E. Salter Davies, one of England's leading educationists.

LEACOCK DEPLORES PRACTICAL TREND OF MODERN COLLEGE

Disciplinary Curriculum Trains Students to Learn More Aptly

OLDER SYSTEM CITEO

Balance in Curriculum Wisest State Authorities of College

University officials at Toronto expressed a variety of opinions on the remarks of Dr. Stephen Leacock deplored the trend to practicalism in modern education.

Dr. Leacock, speaking before the class of '37 of Royal Victoria College in Montreal recently, said in part, "When I entered college a half century ago, the curriculum was almost entirely disciplinary. It aimed at training the mind—not to do any particular thing but to learn afterwards with ease any particular thing it had to do."

"After that, began and spread the new idea of a practical curriculum. It supposed to teach people how to do the very things they are going to have to do. I regard it as very largely a failure. It undertakes to train college men exactly in the way in which men who don't go to college get trained. It substitutes four years in college for one in a workshop."

"I don't think this is true for the University of Toronto," stated Dr. H. Bennett, Registrar of Victoria. "Our Honour courses, especially, although they contain a lot of utilitarian material, nevertheless have a large cultural content tending to fit students for life in general rather than for a specific occupation."

Professor W. J. McAndrew, Registrar of University College, expressed a similar opinion. "Our best plan, of course, is to retain the good parts of the old system, while adding the good parts of the new. That is what we are (Continued on Page 4)

Maria Chapdelaine Featured at Club

Scenes from Maria Chapdelaine, a novel by Louis Hemon, were a feature of the meeting of the Canadian Literature Club last evening in the Public Library auditorium.

These scenes along with a scene from Gilbert Knox's The Land of Afternoon, were directed by Mrs. H. Bibby. Adding to the French atmosphere of Louis Hemon's play were French songs sung by Monsieur Rochereau de la Sabliere.

Few Medics Forsake Profession

If a medical student is successful in his course he very rarely leaves that line of work without at least a trial period as intern in a hospital, according to Dr. Ryerson, Assistant Dean of Medicine. Fully ninety-five per cent go into hospitals where they spend from one to five years, depending on whether they intend to go into general practice or to specialize. A few do find that they aren't suited for the work and enter the business world. Of the other five per cent of graduates in medicine the greater number become fellows in such fields as biochemistry. Then working up, they finally become professors. A very few men and women, less than one per cent, take a special course and get their Diploma of Public Health. It was the practice up to a few years ago for the province to choose its Medical Health Officers from doctors who had made good as general practitioners but now it is becoming more and more essential for them to have their Diploma of Public Health. In fact men who have been officers for many years already are coming back for the course. For instance, Quebec has been sending five men up annually. Dr. Ryerson expressed the belief that in about twenty years time it would be necessary for every graduate in medicine to take the Public Health course.

100 TONS OF COAL KEEP VARSITY WARM

252,000,000 Pounds of Water Evaporated in Process of Heating

BLOOR AND COLLEGE JOINED

Believe it or not, close to 100 tons of coal are required to keep 37 University buildings warm on a very cold day. Nearly 100 tons used in twenty-four hours to feed the main plant in the rear of the Medical Building and the auxiliary plant at the Museum. The main plant has 2100 and the auxiliary plant 400 boiler H.P. nominal rating.

The total load on the plants is 344,700 square feet of radiation. That is to say, radiators which have to be heated, have a combined area of 344,700 square feet. Before the steam reaches the radiators it must pass through main line tunnels, of which there is 1 1-3 miles in and about the University, extending from Bloor St. on the north to College St. on the south, and from Victoria College on the east to St. George St. on the west.

UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRA WILL PRESENT CONCERT

Weinzwieg to Conduct Program of Classical Music at Hart House

The University Symphony Orchestra is presenting a concert in Hart House Theatre on the afternoon of February 29th. This concert is sponsored by the Students' Administrative Council and no admittance will be charged. The orchestra, which is under the direction of John J. Weinzwieg, will play several pieces well known to many people. The first of these is two movements from the G Minor Symphony by Mozart. Wagner's famous Peer Gynt suite will also be featured on this program. The occasion will also be further enjoyable by the presence of Miss Winifred Noy, a concert pianist who has been invited to appear as a guest artist on this program.

Trophy Presented Annually to Player Having Qualities of Ability, Sportsmanship

OUTSTANDING ON OFFENSE

Played at St. Mike's Formerly, Then with Jr. Champions of Dominion

Gus Greco, popular middle wing for the University of Toronto football team, yesterday entered the hall of fame of football players when he was awarded the Johnny Copp Memorial Trophy. The trophy is given annually in memory of the former Blue backfielder, shot to death by a burglar, to the player who possesses to the greatest extent the qualities which made Johnny Copp the most popular player on the Toronto team, those of ability and sportsmanship.

Greco was outstanding as a defensive middle during the past season and it must undoubtedly have been due to his brilliant work in this capacity that led to the almost unanimous choice of his name by his team mates for the signal honour, a choice which will be seconded by every follower of football at this University.

The past year was Greco's third with the Varsity Seniors. During his first two years in senior company he was one of the most effective offensive wing men in the intercollegiate series, but his ability as a defensive player has caused him to be used entirely for that purpose during the past season.

Gus learned his football at St. Michael's College, where he played for two years. In his first year at the University he was a member of that great junior team which swept through to a dominion championship. He moved up to the senior team the following year and has remained there since that time.

While playing his football with such success, Greco has also met with success in his academic pursuits, which will in another year find him qualified as a dentist. He has one more year with the senior team. His home is in Sault Ste. Marie, where he expects to practice after graduation.

Arts Ball is Popular Feature of Campus Life

After a year of respite, the University College Arts Ball will again make its appearance on Friday, February 28. This formal dance, which for years has officially wound up campus social life, bids fair to regain its tremendous popularity of former years. Many inquiries concerning it have been forthcoming from U.C. undergraduates, and F. D. L. Stewart, the social director of the college, is making plans to take care of a large throng of dance-goers.

The crystal ballroom of the King Edward Hotel has been engaged, and music will be furnished by Norman Harris and his 10-piece band from Montreal. It is expected that the price of admission will be the lowest in the history of college formals.

Johnny Copp Memorial Trophy

In the life of every popular athlete events occur which live for ever in his memory as marking the outstanding achievement of a career. Such an incident must have been achieved by Gus Greco recently when he was awarded the Johnny Copp Memorial Trophy. This trophy is donated annually to the member of the University of Toronto football team who possesses to the greatest extent the qualities of sportsmanship and playing ability.

Greco went through the past series playing on the line where the knocks are hardest and the glory least. He was the outstanding player on the inter-collegiate wingline and possessed, along with his football ability, the qualities which tend to make friends.

The confidence which his team mates placed in him when he was selected by a popular vote for the award is a tribute to his character as well as his ability.

"What More Can a Woman Want?"

If a young woman comes to college to be educated for a career, she might as well resign herself to life as a spinster.

Records of colleges and universities reveal that from one-fourth to one-half of their graduates die unmarried, showing that the chief sufferer from the situation—that of a shortage of marriageable men—is the educated woman.

And why is there a scarcity of good husbands? Paul Popenoe, director of the Institute of Family Relations in Los Angeles, reports his findings in the New York Times magazine.

He says that the principal reasons for the insufficiency of marriageable men are: first, the tendency of men to marry women less intelligent than themselves; second, the partiality of men for women younger than themselves; and third, the higher education of women which sometimes turns their thoughts from marriage.

It seems that the woman who graduates from college and goes into a profession, thinking she will earn her own way for a few years as a preparation for marriage, is facing a certain law of diminishing returns. Men of her own age will not marry her—statistically speaking—so after awhile the woman graduate must look for a man some years older than herself, only to find that the most eligible are already married.

This seems to prove that the young woman who attends college with the practical view of finding a husband is the wise one, after all. What more can a real woman want than marriage, a home, and a family?

Helenic Code

In reading the Ancient Philosophies of the Greeks, follow the paths of the Platos, the Socrates and the Aristotles, one discovers the immense deviations that we have made from the rules set down by them for the education of nations. Particularly is this noticeable in such realms as music, art and drama. The Greeks were accustomed to learning art, music and drama as a matter of the greatest import in a merely ordinary education. Today we have come to consider such fields either as for the specialist alone, or for the diversification of the masses of the more specialized professions.

Plato definitely considered that an education without music, without drama and art, could not be an education properly rounded out. He decided that without the introduction of these forces in the mind of man, the soul could never possibly possess that orderly and balanced nicety necessary for the accomplishment of its multiple functions.

Can we blame our own failure to follow this instruction for the chaos and the modern spirit of speed and lack of care?

(Submitted)

For the most part we University students live in a sheltered universe and are little concerned with the suffering and privation in the world outside. The natural tendency is that any claim of that world is minimized so that student responsibility is not a matter of grave concern. It is true that there are limitations placed upon a student's ability to help, but it is also true that we are not always aware of opportunities when they do arise.

Each year the Student Christian Movement has sought to assist the Neighbourhood Workers Association in securing cast-off clothing for the use of needy families in the city. The Association has been able to use garments and articles of all description: "trousers, suits, overcoats, sweaters, socks, underwear, footwear, etc." The bitterness of the winter's cold ought to serve to remind us that we have old clothing we can spare which would provide protection and warmth to others. Bundles of such garments left at the S.C.M. offices, either in the Household Science Building or Hart House, will be forwarded at once. Or if you telephone Midway 9727 or Kingsdale 9126 and leave your address arrangements will be made for the bundles to be collected. Any offering of clothing, however small, is valuable.

From French Canada

The Editor,
The Varsity,
University of Toronto,
Toronto, Canada.

Dear Colleague,

Please allow the following remarks from a French-Canadian law student concerning an article which appeared in your issue of the 21st and entitled: "Lower Canada Youth Has Ambitions for Independence".

This article, written by our colleague Tom Irving of Montreal University, I consider rather misleading, because it shows the attitude of only a portion of the Quebec youth. Those of us who possess the advantages of a bilingual culture (I studied 4 years in our local High School) have no ambitions for independence. We are proud of being Canadians; "our Canada" extends itself from Vancouver to Halifax and is not confined solely to the Province of Quebec.

Mr. Irving's remarks were made following a speech made recently by Mr. Paul Gouin in St. Hyacinthe, in which he quoted a paragraph from an article written in l'Action française, in 1922, by the Chancellor of our University.

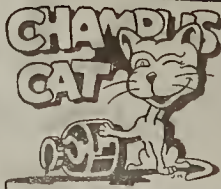

Mr. Irving will permit me to quote him an extract from a speech made last year by Cardinal Villeneuve (our Chancellor). He will see as well as I do (by comparing this extract with the one quoted by Mr. Gouin and published by The Varsity) that His Excellency Cardinal Villeneuve has modified his attitude since 1922.

"Perhaps we shall have to stop weeping aloud like children and take our place like men, not only in the Province of Quebec, of which we are, but in all of Canada, of which we also are, whatever the future may be.

"By always talking of Quebec only and of a laurientian spirit, we risk the prey for the shadow; in any case, we abandon without suspecting it our own compatriots beyond the provincial frontiers, we leave them struggle in the melée which smotherers and drowns them, and we contribute to accentuate the theory of a French Quebec which would serve to pen the sons of New France and make of our province a shut up reserve, for the use of the French language. . . . It would be foolish for us to isolate ourselves in a country which is ours from one ocean to the other" (Cardinal Villeneuve).

I am, yours sincerely,

J. Fournier, Law '36,
University of Montreal.

Something is always disturbing our work. We headed homeward Saturday noon intending to settle down to Mr. Beard's not unpalatable account of The Rise of American Civilization (Vol. I), only to find the following bright little note waiting for us. It has arrived in the morning mail, was addressed in a boldly printed script (per the best detective fiction) and bore no marks of identification whatsoever.

C-C

My dear and most respected Sir:—

I send you this your Love to stir. It is you I have chosen first of all from whom to make my Leap Year Call.

I offer you my Heart and Hand, pray take them for your own; and if for another year or two you prefer a single life, I promise you to wait till then to be your wedded wife.

I do not ask in jest, and hope that you will grant me one request, and send me back the answer 'YES' or 'NAY'.

Pray forgive me for my boldness, do not expose me for my life, for I only write to ask you if you need a LOVING WIFE, I will nearly darn your socks, wash and iron your shirts, keep your little flat nice and tidy, and promise not to flirt.

But if your hand does not in Wednesday clasp with mine, then you must LEAP YEAR'S CALL obey, and down Five Dollars of your pay, besides Sir, a Handsome Dress. I'll ask no more and take no less.

Now you may think this letter funny, but I must have a MAN or MONEY.

So please send me your reply and let me be your wife until I die, and if the Sender's name you guess, send it (Continued on Page 4)

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Canadian Grand Opera

Another musical treat is in store for Varsity students next Saturday night when the Canadian Grand Opera Association presents the second opera in the series which was so triumphantly inaugurated last Saturday evening in Massey Hall. The forthcoming production is to be Bizet's ever-popular "Carmen" with Toronto's lovely Edythe Shuttleworth in the title role.

Following his policy of giving Toronto the best in opera on the popular-price basis of "dollar top", Brahean Urban, general director of the association, has announced the first of a long list of guest artists who will appear during the season in the Massey Hall operas.

Guest artists for "Carmen" this Saturday will be Sydney Rayner, noted Canadian tenor of the Opera Comique, Paris, and the Chicago Civic Opera, and Ruth Miller, former Metropolitan and now Chicago Civic Opera soprano.

Dr. Richard Hageman, general music director for the Canadian Grand Opera Association as well as the Chicago Civic Opera, has been invited by Dr. Frederick Stock to conduct the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in the ballet music from his opera "Caponaschi" on Thursday. He will return in time to conduct Saturday's "Carmen" in Massey Hall.

The German Club

If Ludwig Thoma's Lokalbain had five acts instead of three we might have witnessed a perfect performance in the last act, so great was the improvement as the play progressed. Last night's presentation by the German Club began almost painfully badly. The first act was marred by the air of haste and uncertainty which prevailed, not to mention the distraction caused by too obvious prompting. The tempo gradually slackened during the second act and by the beginning of the third act the players were calm enough that the significance of their remarks was much easier to get.

Professor Victor Lange, as the Burgomaster, turned in an excellent performance as usual. The others were very good but difficult to understand. (Continued on Page 4)

Hollywood—

"Milady", complete with all the sensuousness and diabolical cunning that Dumas gave her, invaded town on Saturday and ended the dither we have been in since "The Three Musketeers" was shown here last November. The first instalment of this serial left us in mid-air with Richelieu planning new deviltries, Constance firmly and securely married and Milady still at large. The love of D'Artagnan and Constance is reconciled to facts by poisoning Constance; the love of Buckingham for the Queen is fixed by stabbing Buckingham; Milady's amorous pursuits are ended by a bullet from her husband; the picture's grand finale is the advancement of D'Artagnan to the rank of lieutenant, but only because the famous three are retiring.

Unfortunately, perhaps because we have been treated to a surfeit of romances, all our admiration in this film went to the willan and willaness. Richelieu, who passed through the picture like a series of Philip de Champagne portraits, was the most powerful and convincing character. Milady was hardly an admirable woman but she was certainly a superb actress, the kind that you can thoroughly hate and yet respect. The rest of the cast was more than adequate but was completely overshadowed by the dark dealers.

Various scenes of the novel were not followed religiously; had they been the picture would have been much less religious, if you understand. But there was plenty of action and thrilling escapes, good comedy, perfect settings (Continued on Page 3)

Whether University of Wisconsin football players have been served a wee drop of whiskey prior to their gruelling gridiron battles is under investigation on the Buckeye State campus. In spite of Wisconsin's liberal attitude towards the use of liquor, they draw the line at feeding it to their athletes.

The team trainer has made a statement to the effect that he spiked the Badger punt and passers' coffee with alcohol on orders from Coach Spears. Spears is also on the carpet for getting team-men out of the infirmary before they have sufficiently recovered from injuries.

At first the class were slow to take up the idea, but now they are becoming all too good at it, as the professor has found to his cost.

The University of Texas has granted only two honorary degrees in its history. The second one was in 1935 when John N. Garner, Texan and Vice-President of the United States, received an LL.D.

The wife of a German worker in a perambulator factory tried to persuade her husband to steal a pram for their baby. He refused, but agreed to purloin enough parts and to assemble it himself. Finally he had the necessary pieces and retired into a room to throw the vehicle together. After five hours his wife came in, to find him in a state of perplexity and near-exhaustion. "It's no good," he said. "No matter how hard I try, it always comes out a machine gun."

WINTER TALE
One thing we enjoy about the ski rage is the weather bulletins in the papers. Whatever the state of our own athletic intentions or abilities, there is nothing more salutary . . . than to read that the trails are fast in Pinkham Notch, and it's snowing hard in Stowe.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George Vair

This year the intercollegiate basketball race has tightened up considerably and the battle is on for the championship held by Varsity. The evenness of the four competing teams is shown by the fact that Western has met every team once, dropping two outside games by one point each and winning their third start at the Blues' expense by a lone point on their home floor last Saturday. At the same time the Tricolour swamped the visiting Redmen 39-14 on their annual visit to Kingston. Montreal's long domination of the hoop honours seems to be at an end.

Those who saw Varsity lose their first game unanimously state that the Blues were away below form and still rate as favourites to take the crown. Stevens' squad have a hard week, playing Broadway on Wednesday night on the easterners' own court and coming up against McGill at Hart House on Friday. Rennick's squad are sailing along on top of the league and beating them in their own lair would be harder than building a city airport at the island when Sam McBride is in the chair.

Bailey's senior hockey squad will also play a doubleheader this week. Tonight they meet the Dukes at the Varsity Arena and Friday play their first intercollegiate game against the Montreal sextet. Without being too pessimistic we can scarcely see how the Blues can avoid defeat before the faster travelling and highly experienced outfit coached by Ecclestone.

Here is some interesting information regarding Europe's hockey set-up which we have just received from Maxie Fullerton who is attending Zurich University and playing hockey for the Akademaiker Club of Zurich and the Zurich Canadians.

Unlike Canadian promoters, the Swiss rink owners do not sponsor hockey among the 'teen aged youths and force those who want to play, to pay as well. Two of Zurich's three teams are run by rink owners and to play it is necessary to join the club ($25 membership). On top of this you must buy a season ticket to the rink (an additional $25), and then provide your own equipment. Trainers are unheard of and all games are played on open rinks. The reason appears to be that the rink owners make their money out of the fancy skating clubs despite the fact that hockey draws good crowds.

Maxie says that the European lads are good skaters, but are inclined to pass the puck too frequently. Once past the blue line they are lost and invariably shoot at the goalkeeper rather than draw him out of position and pick the open net. Fullerton is evidently enjoying a good season on the foreign rinks, collecting three goals and three assists in a morning game only to add four and one in an afternoon session.

The Canadians in Zurich have a six man hockey club and are enjoying plenty of success playing various European clubs. The team consists of Maxie Fullerton and Charlie Sweeney from University of Toronto, Johnny McNeil of Toronto, "Steve" Brodie of Alberta University, Jerry Morin of University of Montreal and Harry Griffiths of McGill. Recruiting a Swiss goalie, the "Canadians" beat the Austrian Olympic team 5-1 in Vienna. A week later the "Canadians" defeated the Swiss Olympic team (8-2 and 5-2) and the latter are considered a strong outfit. By the looks of things Canada's Olympic team should have little trouble annexing the world's amateur title in Germany this week.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Another 4-0 score was turned in last night, when St. Hilda's chalked up their second win of the hockey season, by defeating the St. Mike's team. Elaine Knight was the star of the evening, since she scored three of the four goals for Trinity. The St. Mike's girls never had a real chance to get going. There will be two more games tonight. St. Mike's are playing Vic Juniors at the Vic ring at six o'clock, and U.C. are meeting St. Hilda's at seven on the Varsity cushion.

Quite a number of girls have signed up for the U.C. badminton tournament, in both the singles and doubles events. The Nurses are also enthusiastic about the game and are hoping to enter a team in the interfaculty tournament. They started running off a round robin tourney last Thursday, and had fourteen entries for it.

Will the twelve players who turned out for yesterday's basketball practice turn out again tonight from seven to eight-thirty in the O.C.E. gym? All others who are interested are asked to practice there from six to seven-thirty. There will be half an hour when the two practices will overlap. The teams have not yet been picked but nevertheless a game has been arranged for this Friday between McMaster and the Varsity Seniors.

Latest swimming flash—there will be an invitation swimming meet between the McMaster and Varsity mermaids sometime around the end of February. We'll give you more details later.

The Warden drew the attention of The Varsity to the fact that despite this galaxy of world figures, it is usually in the late winter and early spring that Hart House is really fortunate in its visitors and that the list of those who sat at the high table for the period from the first of the year till exam time usually contained more and more names of world-wide import.

The Hall Committee stated that the new chairs, donated recently by the Hon. Vincent Massey, will arrive before the end of the week, and will probably be installed immediately. The comfort of these chairs, the Committee believes, will greatly add to the enjoyment of the meals in the House.

HITLER A MENACE TO PEACE; MUSSOLINI CLOSE SECOND

Mussolini, in the name of unity, has started a drive of persecution against Protestants, Catholics, Jews, students, Labour and every institution which has dared to oppose him. The general idea prevails both in Germany and Italy that a Renaissance period is being created there.

Japan for the last twenty-one years, in her implacable conquest of China, is determined to conquer the whole. "China is doomed to a Babylonian captivity." In their relations with the League of Nations, Dr. Eddy stated positively that China is the innocent party and Japan the guilty. China is in no position at all to resist the advances of the aggressor nation.

Dr. Eddy contended that Europe and the world are breaking into two armed camps—both aiming to the teeth. Last year five million dollars was spent on arms and preparations in case of war. "The United States," Dr. Eddy said, "fully believes it is a peaceful nation, yet in that same country, in the last five years, three quarters of the Federal budget has been spent on wars. They are still paying pensions for the war of 1812. God knows how long they will pay pensions to the men of the last war."

"As long as the people can be convinced through lying propaganda that the enemy are not like we are but are swine, then we won't mind going out and killing them. But the fact remains that war propaganda consists only of lies and its only useful service is that it stirs people up to the right mood for killing off men who are not any different than themselves."

According to Dr. Eddy war must be stopped just as slavery was. Two groups are needed to give us peace, the first a group of absolute pacifists, who will be willing to go the whole way and who will of course be in the minority; and the second a group of realists, working through the League to impose economic sanctions to stop war.

"Fundamentally the foundations of our economic order are false and wrong, characterized by selfish individualism and the private ownership of the means of production. If you have 'have-not' nations and 'have-not' men divorced from the means of production, you cannot build on those lasting peace. The system is cracking and crumbling even now, because of its own inner contradictions. It is dormant just as slavery was, and for the same reason," stated the noted lecturer.

"The challenge of communism, is one of the most encouraging developments of our society, for all its evils. We are coming to an age where all will own and share in the means of production. We will repent of capitalism as we have repented of slavery and feudalism. Progress has come through education and catastrophe, through evolution and revolution, and the new day and order is bound to come by the same method."

8 p.m.—Varsity Chess Club at Toronto Chess Club, Church and Adelaide Streets.

8 p.m.—S.C.M. At-home, 79 St. George. All students and staff members cordially invited.

Hart House Theatre

"Guest of Honour" by Lois Reynolds, furnishes material for a pleasant evening's entertainment. It is a Canadian play with no suggestion of the Mounted Police or the Far North. The hero, in fact, is a sophisticated prince and there is a princess in disguise who does not marry the prince. The setting—any Canadian city.

It was the work of Andrew Allen in the role of the prince which carried this play along. We have seen Allen in a number of roles, all of them good, which is more than can be said for the usual run of amateurs. Margaret Tyrler as the daughter of a rich manufacturer, presented a pleasing foil for the sophistication of the prince, with an air of naivete which was so complete that it was rather dull in the opening scene where it was relied upon to set the play in motion. The rest of the cast carried their roles very well, the princess, who was a newspaper reporter to study types for her books, had a rather unconvincing role which she managed well. The play itself is pleasantly improbable and very amusing.

The curtain raiser, "Cupid on the Line", was a funny little piece. W. A. Athous as Cupid, a hard bitten linesman giving advice to a man who is trying to patch up a quarrel with a girl, did a short piece of work, but a good one.

Last year 252,000,000 pounds of water were evaporated in the process of heating. Of this about 90 per cent is used over and over. At the heating plant a certain amount of "juice" for lighting purposes is generated. The remainder is purchased. More electricity is generated during the heating season.

trying to do at Toronto; whether or not we have succeeded is a thing for the future to decide."

A somewhat different opinion was given by Mr. A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University, who was inclined to agree in part with the case put forward by Dr. Leacock. In his opinion, there could be no doubt that the giving of a general training to students to fit them better for learning outside the University should be the basis of modern education. However, there is nothing to show that the system of 50 years ago did this any better than the system used today. Education is without a doubt in a transitory stage today, however, and only the future will determine just what course it is to take.

They spoke too quickly and too excitedly, thereby failing to bring out clearly the character of the Major, who as the interpreter of the common sense views of the author, provides much of the humour in the play by his sarcastic and vehement comments.

Charity Grant as the burgomaster's wife was perhaps the star among those in the cast whose native tongue is not German. Anne Fergusson, too, deserves to be mentioned for her amusing interpretation of Frau Piegermaier. Trinity College choir, "disguised as the mob" came through nobly.

Considering the difficulties attendant upon producing a play in a foreign language the German Club must be given credit for their work although a few more rehearsals would undoubtedly have improved the play. M.E.R.

The demand for a repertory theatre in Toronto to replace the long since defunct Empire company is being met by a group of actors known as the Actors' Colony Theatre. For the past two years they have been functioning as Canada's only summer stock company and on the fifth and eighth of February they are opening at the Margaret Theatre in "The Show-Off".

The Actors' Colony Theatre has as its aim the training of Canadian actors and actresses and the revival of the legitimate stage in this city. Its members are well known for their amateur and radio work and several of them have worked for campus dramatic societies.

Don Stewart, Fergus Tobin and Dick Fonger are graduates of the U.C. Players' Guild and are well known on the stage of that organization. Don Stewart, who is the social director of the University College Lit., played the juvenile leads in last summer's productions at Bala. The director of "The Show Off" is Frank Hemmingsway, who has been associated with the Victoria Dramatic Society in their major productions.

Convocation Hall

Last evening in Convocation Hall, the Conservatory Orchestra under the baton of Ettore Mazzoleni presented a program of interesting and unhackneyed music including a suite for strings by Purcell, Beethoven's Second Symphony and two of Mozart's Concertos—the piano Concerto in A and a horn Concerto in D flat, with Jack Samaloff and Mary Robb respectively as guest artists.

The performance of the National Anthem promised firm, decisive playing and smooth conducting which as the program progressed was not maintained. While the Purcell was not taken at an excessively slow speed it lacked the vitality and the vigour that it required.

The Mozart was played beautifully and carefully as Jack Samaloff always plays the piano. The horn Concerto, a welcome composition on the program, was played by Mary Robb and all the orchestra.

The Conservatory Orchestra will find that improvement comes with more careful attention to the conductor whose technique would improve with more assurance and buoyancy of rhythm.

DOUBLE POINT WIN ADVANCES BLUES IN BIG FOUR RACE

Professor Plumtre to Conduct Series of Lectures at Cambridge

Committee Nominations

Elections for Hart House standing committees will take place on Wednesday, 4th March. Nominations open at 9 a.m. on Friday, 21st February and close at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, 26th February. Withdrawals will be permitted only until 6 p.m. on Thursday, 27th February.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Toronto: Corruption in county police circles was hinted by members of the York County board of police commissioners yesterday when it was charged that raids on local gambling houses failed in their object due to tip-offs allegedly given by police officers.

London: The privilege which British peers have enjoyed for centuries to be tried by their fellow peers in the House of Lords may be abolished. A vote of the Upper House yesterday to the effect that the practice had outlived its usefulness received a large majority.

Toronto: The jury in the ravine murder trial were excluded from the courtroom for four hours yesterday while the prosecution discussed the legality of using in the evidence statements made by O'Donnell to police officers shortly after his arrest.

London: Physicians here performed a miracle operation when they succeeded in giving the gift of sight to a 5-year-old boy by grafting small sections from his hip muscles into his eyelids to supply the place of those muscles which he had lacked from birth.

Geneva: A petroleum embargo against Mussolini was proposed here yesterday as an effective means of paralyzing Il Duce's mechanized war machine.

Will Give Ten Addresses on "Recent Monetary Developments in Dominions"

WILL RETURN TO TORONTO

Mr. A. F. W. Plumtre of the Economics Department, is leaving Toronto next month to deliver a series of lectures at Cambridge University. He has been invited to give ten lectures during the late spring on the topic "Recent Monetary Developments in the British Dominions." When he has concluded this series Mr. Plumtre intends to return to Toronto, resuming lectures in Economics next September.

After four years in the Political Science course Mr. Plumtre graduated in 1928. He then spent two years at Cambridge engaged in post graduate work. In 1931 he was appointed to the University of Toronto staff and for the past four years has been a lecturer in Money, Credit and Prices.

This Thursday night he will uphold the affirmative of the motion "That this house regrets the intrusion of professors into politics" at the Hart House debate. While at Cambridge as an undergraduate, Mr. Plumtre achieved considerable renown as a debater.

CONSERVATORY QUARTET TO PLAY RARE VIOLS AT FRIDAY CONCERT

Members of Hart House will have the opportunity of hearing the viols played by the Conservatory String Quartet at this week's recital at 5 p.m. in the Music Room. This is a rare event as these genuine old seventeenth century instruments are very difficult to play because of their six strings instead of the four strings of modern instruments.

In 1913 this consort of viols was brought to Vancouver from England and two years later was purchased by the Massey Foundation and several members of the Arts and Sciences.

PROFESSORS CLAIM SIXTEEN YEARS ENOUGH FOR COLLEGE ENTRANCE

Registrar Thinks Age Limit will not be Raised Here; Students Mature Enough

FEW YOUNGER APPLY

The average freshman at sixteen or seventeen is sufficiently mature to be put on his own and be trained as a responsible adult.

This is the opinion of several of the University officials questioned about the statement of President Lowell of Harvard University who in 1924 predicted that the "average age for entrance into college should and will drop as low as thirteen." Persons so precocious as to seek admittance to the University at such an age are very few in Toronto, it was agreed. The changing of the present age limit is an unlikely event.

Dean Mitchell of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering pointed out that School men averaged nineteen and a half years in the first year, which is somewhat higher than in other faculties. From S.P.S. they graduate at about twenty-three, when they are far from immature. "They learn a lot from us," laughed the Dean.

WIDE MARGIN SEEN FOR COLLEGE STORY BY UNDERGRADUATES

Women's Press Club Speaker Sees Style of Short Story Changing

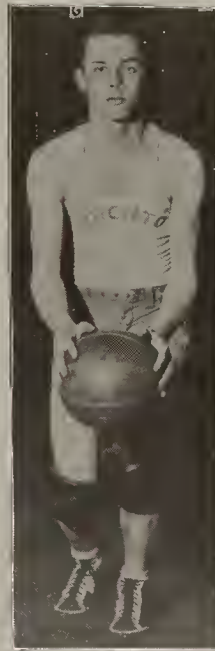

MRS. NORMA PHILIPS MUIR

Stresses Importance of Writing About Things Familiar to Author

In speaking to the Women's Press Club on Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Norma Philips Muir stated that there is the same vacillating style in short stories as in clothes, and stressed the fact which would be of particular interest to university students journalistically inclined, that at present there is a wide market for stories about university life. In this connection Mrs. Muir illustrated the importance of writing about things familiar to the author.

In the actual build-up of the story, for many writers the plot is built to the title; in any case it ought not to reveal the plot of the story but arouse the curiosity of the reader by holding forth a promise of horror, of love, of mystery, or the particular theme chosen by the author.

The introduction is perhaps more important in so far that the attention of the reader is either captured or lost; (Continued on Page 4)

Technical Awarded to Sullivan in Last Quarter Proves Turning Point

FINAL SCORE 34-33

Trio of Sullivan, Marks and Connelly Account for 25 Points

By George Vair

By virtue of a strong second half finish, which saw the Blues overcome a two-point deficit and at one time forge into an eight point lead, Warren Stevens' senior basketball club eked out a 34-33 win over Scoop Rennick's league leading Broadview team in a grueling game at Broadview "Y" last night before an average crowd of rabid supporters.

The enthusiastic crowd caused the downfall of their pride and joy when they refused to be quiet when Referee Irwin requested it, when McGregor was shooting two free throws and the official promptly awarded Varsity a technical. Neil Sullivan sunk it to make the one point difference although the incident occurred half way through the final period. The Broadview board of strategy almost went crazy at that point but strangely applauded when Irwin called two technicals (I went for a point) on Phil Gold, who inquired why a personal foul was called on him.

The victory gives Varsity four points and goes on the book as two losses for the Y squad since the students are only playing a three-game schedule with each team instead of the regular four games. Varsity are now in a commanding position in the league, having dropped two games to four for the eastern club, who are leading the race by virtue of more games played.

Coach Stevens elected Willis, Himel, T. Sullivan, Dempster and McGregor to start for the Blues and they got away to a flying start when a basket and a free throw by Dempster put them three points to the good. Rennick's crew began to click and with (Continued on Page 4)

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION DEPARTMENT SPONSORS ADMINISTRATION COURSE

Civic Officials from Ontario Centres Attending Lectures This Week

AT ECONOMICS BUILDING

More than seventy civic officials, from all over Ontario, are attending the new course in public administration which is being conducted every day this week in the Economics Building under the auspices of the University Extension Department and the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs.

The course is arranged especially for civic officials, and will take the form of lectures on municipal law and accounting, school law, public health and other such phases of government administration. Lecturers will include professors from the departments of political science, economics, law and hygiene as well as the Hon. David Croll, Minister of Municipal Affairs, Thomas Bradshaw, and R. C. Harris, Commissioner of Works for Toronto.

The "Students" were officially welcomed by Dr. H. J. Cody, for the University; the Hon. David Croll, and Alderman Laidlaw of the city of Toronto. The opening ceremonies were directed by Mr. W. J. Dunlop of the Extension Department of the University.

Prominent civic and provincial officers who are attending the class include Alderman Laidlaw, Mrs. H. P. Plumtre, and former Mayor W. J. Stewart of Toronto, and Dr. B. T. McGhie, Deputy Minister of Health of Ontario.

Howling winds in the neighbourhood of the Library yesterday played havoc with derbies and fedoras. Many a male was seen chasing his bounding lid across the campus. Students report being blown off the icy sidewalks.

Art Gallery Lecture

Mr. Peter Haworth will speak on "Decoration Applied to Buildings: Interior and Exterior" in the Gallery in Hart House at 5 p.m. today. His remarks will be illustrated by slides. All members of Hart House are invited to attend this lecture.

Alumni To Support University Drama

University College Executive Plans to Attend Production

The University Drama Committee was given a great boost last night, it was learned. The executive of the University College Alumni Association announced that they would take over the committee's production "The Inspector General", for the evening of Saturday, March the twentieth.

The U.C. Alumni, who have frequently supported University ventures, said that they would heartily support the University Drama Committee. The Alumni holds a theatre night annually, usually supporting a downtown theatre. This year, assured that the students would produce a play which would be well presented and well worth seeing, the executive decided unanimously to attend one evening of "The Inspector General". Hurried arrangements were made to secure the theatre and already the alumni are busy organizing the affair.

THE MODERN TREND IN HAIR

Hart House Barbers Give the Low-down on Students' Hair Cuts; Every Three Weeks Seems the Average Lapse Between Visits

MUSTACHES ADD THE PROFESSIONAL TOUCH

By John Springer

The barbers at Hart House are very congenial chaps. They can talk in the regulation barber style, if you are in the mood for it, but if a customer shows no inclination to carry on a conversation, the hair-cutters attend strictly to business. Feeling it was about high time that the Hart House barbers gave their views on student hair-and-haircut to the campus, the four tonsorial artists were given a brief interview yesterday, while they worked steadily on cutting hair and trimming mustaches all the time.

Mr. Mahood, the curly-haired young snipper at the far end, found the majority of students very tidy about their hair, coming in regularly when their hair got slightly shaggy. Mr. Morton, however, claimed they didn't come in often enough. Mr. Wiggins admitted that the average student kept himself looking "pretty slick", but he felt that the student ought to come in a little more often. Mr. Wilson, the head barber, estimated the average time between hair cuts at about three weeks. Mr. Wilson, however, could not agree with the other three as to the students' particularness. He found the majority of them were very particular about the way in which they wanted their sideburns trimmed and their hair parted. Mr. Mahood and Mr. Wiggins found them very considerate as did Mr. Morton, although this gentleman found a student every now and then who was as particular as a prima donna about his locks and their arrangement. So seldom that it is almost an event is there a call for a shave. Most of the students prefer to slice the whiskers and the skin from their own faces.

Mr. Morton credited the fact that few students are asking for hair tonics to hard times, but Irish Mr. Wiggins declared that if more tonics and less water were used on the hair there wouldn't be so much dandruff. There is only one in fifty students with the long, dandified, extended sideburns, but (Continued on Page 4)

Insufficient Appreciation

It seems a pity that the undergraduate members of Hart House should be so inclined to take that architectural and recreational centre so much for granted that they sometimes forget the immense benefits to the man himself to be derived from time spent therein. Truly we students of the University of Toronto are fortunate in this, our centre of life. Hart House can not possibly have a rival for architecture and design. The vastness of the Great Hall, the lofty rafters and the huge walls covered with the rows of gilded pictures are reminiscent of the dining halls of the castles in mediaeval days.

In view of the spirit of fraternity and good-will that seems to exist on the campus, and considering the use made by the men of the other services rendered by Hart House, we find it rather surprising that even more undergraduates fail to find their way to the Great Hall at luncheon time. An unsurpassed service and an excellent variety of fare, the opportunity of conversation with fellow students and the ever-increasing privileges that fall to the lot of those that do make use of this facility, should not fail to attract more and more of the student body. In a way we can almost compare the Hall to those now famous institutions of the great German universities where the spirit of the university found its feet in the general convocation of the meal-hour.

Being Looked Over By a Salesman

Editor's Note—We realize the following has no place in an editorial column but believe it possible that some may read a moral into it anyway and thus achieve the same purpose.

You may not have looked at yourself recently in the mirror, but if you think you will pass you must have a poor idea of the sensibilities of your fellow men. As a start in the way of your sartorial education look at yourself from the point of view of the salesman. A salesman is eternally dissatisfied with the world and spends his time in a constant flurry in his effort to improve it. As you are part of his world he must improve you. In fact you are the chief object of his efforts and the most difficult part of his task. As he delicately puts it, look at yourself. Of all the mouldy wrecks which walk about foolishly kidding themselves into thinking they are men, you are the limit. Considered item by item, your appearance is not only a failure, but judged by all reasonable standards it is a shocking example to young and old.

To get down to details, do you think that those crumpled bags which kap gloomily around your legs are a pair of trousers? Without being rude, is it not a fact that they never were respectable in their youth, a time which has long since vanished? Age has not enhanced their attraction. If you have a rag bag transport them thither without delay. Now observe this sample and you will see with some surprise what a real pair of trousers should look like. Note the delicate lines, the comfortable cut. No sensible man would wear what you are wearing if he could wear these. Take them away. The bill will follow.

Just a minute. Are you cherishing the illusion that you are wearing a tie? Your caveman ancestors would not deign to use that atrocity for a wash rag. Yet you are not wholly to blame for the condition and lack of aesthetic taste manifested in that tie. To appear dressed in such a cravat is beyond the might of man. Its colour, shape and condition all mitigate against it. You may still have illusions regarding its appeal, but the rest of the world has none. You owe it to yourself and your fellow men to appear suitably clad and only by wearing such ties as these samples can this be accomplished.

Well, that's much better—but what about that unusual thing perched on the top of your head? It's probably supposed to be a hat since that is what usually occupies that portion of a man's anatomy. But ten years is too long for any hat to serve in active service. Antiques have a value but it is in the museum. Just consider the bitter injustice you do to your own face by forcing it to parade perpetually underneath that mass of misshapen felt. Give yourself a chance. Allow your eyes to wander in an unprejudiced manner over these hats which will accentuate the difference between what a real hat should look like and that creation which you naively believe to be a suitable decoration for a gentleman's thinking centre. Now you are looking almost respectable. See if you don't feel better when you walk down the street.

But just a minute. How could anyone be so brave as to walk down the street with his feet clad in that colourless, shapeless, clumsy looking leather monstrosities which you fondly believe to be footwear? No man can stand squarely on his feet and fight his way in life unless his feet are suitably equipped. Even primitive savages would reject such footwear. But they would have less reason to reject it than yourself, as they have not the facilities to purchase such trim looking and reliable gear as is available here. Give yourself a chance in life. Be dressed like a man of the twentieth century must dress to cope with the problems of the twentieth century. Now some nail polish and tooth paste will just give you that necessary gloss so essential to the carelessly handsome man who is to succeed in business.

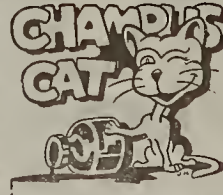

Well, you were somewhat of a wreck, now when the furniture salesman has your house suitably equipped and you possess a new automobile instead of that old wreck you are driving you can take your place in society. So will the salesmen who make the sales.

Editor's Note—Must it be a salesman?

This Business Of Freezing Ears

If there is one thing that a university can do for the world for which the world will thank it, it is the introduction of certain necessary reforms in dress (principally men's) for which there has long been a crying need. The most cogent matter of the moment is the business of wearing tuques, against which the age-old barriers of shyness of unconventionalality stand forth glaringly. The business world by its very nature cannot introduce such reforms—the natural freedom of college life offers a golden opportunity. Now if there is anything in creation that looks sillier than an ordinary man trying to shrivel his rabbit-like ears somewhere between a fedora rim and a coat-collar and being very unsuccessful about it all, then we would like to see what that sillier object is. The only thing that comes to mind is the sight of one of the thick-skulled, thighbraided species who sturdily refuse to even consider wearing head-covering. There are plenty of them about and they are a menace to the continued sanity of man.

Therefore, amongst the welter of campaigns, movements, referendums, etc., that flood the modern campus, we introduce one more—this time one that has the proud distinction of being able to stand on its own feet by reason of its merit. It is high time that undergraduates took the bull by winter by its icy horns and threw it to a cowering oblivion. A tuque is warm and comfortable. Many of them are worn. Now is the time for all good men, and so on—let us one and all come to our senses and wear the Canadian headwear—not just a mere ear-muff which is an invidious compromise, but a real honest-to-goodness tuque. —McGill Daily.

Now we are sorry we experimented with that free verse stuff, cause here is our old friend Asaph doing it too. Well, just another clever young man who had a bright future. However,—

What the hell
Makes a woman turn away her head
And turn away her eyes
And smile a slinky, lingering smile
As though she knew something she wouldn't tell
When you ask her for a date?

And why the hell
Does she take so long to answer
And seem to think it necessary
That she purse her lips
And elevate her eyebrows
And finally emit
A doubtful "Ye-es".
Or burst with radiant gaiety
Burst out "Why sure—I'd love to".

Why do women
Seek to impress us
With their worldly wisdom
By making casual reference
To the "facts of life"?
—When all they know is what they've heard
At Dr. Hilliard's lectures.

Why do women
Go for guys
Like the Muddy Yorker
Who is a funny-looking mug
If we ever saw one.
Or maybe,
He wrote that letter to himself.
I shouldn't wonder.

—Asaph.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Temple Theatre

Propaganda is sometimes in art and sometimes it is art. In "Peasant", now at the Temple Theatre, on Bathurst St., the producers have managed to give us both. The undeniable benefits of Russia's collectivized farming are clearly shown. And the new film art, which Soviet Russia produces, so outshines anything else seen around here that we can hardly remember Hollywood after the show.

"Peasants" is the story of the early stages of collectivized farming, which developed against such great odds as drought, inefficient management and, hardest of all, the sabotage of kulaks—those few people who could not forget that they, or their parents, once commanded the whole lives of a great number of the people with whom they were forced to co-operate. The plot centres around one of these kulaks, who has pretended to be one of the peasants but who is always fomenting trouble—an agitator we sometimes call them. Love, life and the Party organizer are able to straighten the crooked ways and we are shown how the collectivized farm must and does succeed.

The actual photography is amazingly fine—much better than in the previous Russian films seen here. The producing is at least straightforward enough to let the defects be noted. The Russians, if they can be fairly judged on "The Road to Life", "Chapayev" and this picture, are still over-emphasizing effect—long scenery shots, long close-ups, and incidental music. Perhaps in America we are a bit sophisticated, but this kind of artifice is remembered along with the melodramas of the nineteenth century. Granted, this affectation does not ruin the show or detract from what is good in it, but it is easily possible to imagine the power of this play with a more conservative technique. BLUE PUCKSTERS AGAIN DEFEATED BY TORONTO DUKES

Gain Stranglehold on First Place in Senior O.H.A.;
Blues Lead at Half-time

SCORE IS 6-3

By Frank Lamberti

The tri-coloured raiders, representing the Toronto Dukes, swept to a 6-3 triumph over the University of Toronto sextet last night at Varsity Arena to gain a stranglehold on first place in the Senior O.H.A. group standing. Showing several new faces on their line up, of whom Jack Drummond of the Junior B team was one, the Dukes finally overcame the 2-1 lead of Varsity in the second frame, from which point they were never headed. The fast breaking rushes of Charles Driscoll and the consistent good play of McClelland, McIlquham and Lenahan featured the Varsity attack while Shorty Robinson played a great game for the Dukes as the Torontos were short handed.

The opening minutes of play saw the Blues clad lads at their best as they crashed through the Duke defence on smooth combination play which netted them two counters as McIlquham and Lenahan put on the light behind Andy Goldie's citadel, with but one reply from the Dukes, when Duncanson beat Shipman from close in.

Facing a one goal deficit the Dukes went on the attack and within eight minutes of the second period brought the game to a tie and then went on to score three more goals, bringing up their total to six, while Varsity were hard pressed to score their final goal of the night as McIlquham split the Dukes' defence wide open to make a brilliant passing play to Normie McClelland, who parked the disc behind Goldie. Varsity had innumerable opportunities to score while the Dukes were short handed but their efforts were nullified as their rushes finished in the corner. The game lapsed at times into aimless puck chasing only enlivened by the frequent skirmishes around Horton Shipman in the Varsity nets, whose work kept the score down. The final goal found play in the Dukes' territory with the score reading Varsity 3, Dukes 6.

Toronto Dukes: Goal, Goldie; defence, Housley, Grant; centre, Robinson; wings, Duncanson, Adams; alternates, Boyle, McPham, Selkirk and Drummond.

Varsity: Goal, Shipman; defence, Charles, Driscoll; centre, McClelland; wings, McIlquham, Frenes; alternates, Jeffrey, Valiquette, Lenahan, Sissons.

Referee: Bruce Paul, Toronto.

Swimming Meeting

There will be a meeting of the Swimming Executive and college representatives in the Lillian Massey Building Physical Education office on Friday, February 7th at 5.30. There are several very important matters to be discussed. If you cannot be present please send a substitute.

BLUE BASKETEERS WILL MEET M'GILL

A Victory is Essential to the Toronto Team to Remain in Running

ON FRIDAY NIGHT

Warren Stevens' cagers will be on the spot Friday night when they open the intercollegiate season in Toronto against the red-trunked quintet from McGill.

After that disappointing one-point defeat by Western last week, the Blues need a win to keep them in the running. A similar situation in the camp of the Redmen promises an exciting contest replete with all the thrills that fast running, quick passing and close checking can produce, when the rival squads compare numbers on the Hart House floor this coming Friday night.

Western seem to be lucky when playing Varsity—remember how the Mustangs spoiled Varsity's perfect unbroken record a year ago by a fluke basket in the last four seconds of play. The Mustangs earned their victory but were quite evidently not the better team.

The Purple and White five were said to have been lucky the same way down in Londontown last Friday which means Varsity may have just as successful a basketball season as they had last year, although they have not as many star performers.

Western has lost two games, to Queen's by a 29-21 score and to McGill by a 23-25 count. In addition, Queen's have handed McGill a 39-14 walloping which puts the Tricolour at the top of the league. This sort of leaves it up to Varsity and McGill on Friday night to decide amongst themselves who will chase Queen's for the basketball honours. The Blues are really a mighty fine team and should be good enough to do the trick.

VIC AND TRINITY BATTLE FOR LEAD

Winner of Today's Waterpolo Game will Enter Playoffs for Eckhardt Trophy

DENTS AND SCHOOL PLAY

What promises to be one of the best games in the present intercollegiate waterpolo series is to be played this afternoon, Wednesday, at 4.30, when Victoria and Trinity play for the leadership of their group. When these teams met in the first game, the result was a tie score, 2-2. Victoria are leading their group at present, but have played one more game than the McCatty-coached team. The winner of today's match will enter the playoffs for the Eckhardt Trophy.

The second game at 5 o'clock brings together Dents and Junior S.P.S. and this also should be a close game, as Dents are anxious to have at least one win to their credit. Bob Beatty of U.C. will referee both games.

At 5.30 the fast-moving team from U.C. meet Sr. S.P.S. A win for U.C. will give them the leadership in the group, while a win for S.P.S. will give them a team in the playoff series. C. McCatty will referee this game.

Group standings—

GROUP A		Won	Lost	Tied
Victoria	2	0	1
Trinity	1	0	1

By W. A. Crackower

Ace Bailey and his Blue hockey squad are only sixty minutes away from the end of their O.H.A. troubles. The Senior puckchasers have one more O.H.A. game in their schedule and then it will be all over for another year. In bowing to Toronto Dukes up at the Arena last night the Varsity squad put up another one of the spirited displays they have given of late. Although defeated 6-3 the Blues made the powerful Dukes work for their victory and gave them many anxious moments. At the end of the first twenty minutes of play the score read 2-1 for Varsity and with a little bit of luck around the Toronto net the Blues might have ended up on the long side of the final count. Goalie Shipman was certainly on his best behaviour last night. The curly-haired Blue custodian turned aside many hard shots and performed like a veteran. Charlie Driscoll, on defence for Varsity, also showed marked improvement in all-round play. The pity of the thing is that these two lads are ineligible for intercollegiate competition and will be absent when Varsity tackles McGill in Montreal this Friday. Coach Bailey had a junior working on the starting line and although the lad worked hard it was quite evident that he was out of his company. He also showed a tendency to wander away from his wing. Normie McClelland was again the best Varsity puckster on the ice and won well-earned applause for his fighting play. He never gave up all night and caused Goldie a lot of anxiety.

On Friday night the Blue hockeyists invade Montreal to tackle the strong Red squad. Like the Varsity sextet the Redmen have two players ineligible for intercollegiate competition. Despite this handicap the McGill aggregation rate as a powerful club and Ace and the boys will no doubt have plenty to worry about on Friday night.

Despite the fact that the rugby season is long of the past Mr. Ted Reeve, Queen's rugby coach, and well-known newspaper columnist, is still at the old game of taking a verbal crack at Varsity in his daily column. In yesterday's masterpiece Mr. Reeve is so far off as to be ridiculous. Writing about yesterday's Broadview Y-Varsity basketball game he says "On the schedule this is Varsity's home game but apparently they can't get their own floor for the occasion. . . . Just what the U. of T. basketball floor is being used for at present we cannot say, but it seems rather odd that a team from such a large institution should have to play their home game on someone else's wooden gridiron. You would think they could postpone the wand drill or the junior prom or whatever the gym is being used for tonight to let the basketball team have the use of the building because if the basketballs lose to Broadview again they are going to have a hard time to make the playoffs." He continues in this strain and then indirectly takes a crack at the Athletic Directorate for having the nerve to consider Varsity's rugby team the best in the intercollegiate loop this past season. We hate to have to correct a celebrity like Mr. Reeve but here goes. At the beginning of the basketball season it was decided that the Big Four should operate on a double home and home series. This gave each team four games to play with each of the other three squads. The Ontario Basketball Association demanded a Toronto winner for the Ontario playoffs at an early date. Owing to Varsity's heavy basketball schedule it was impossible to complete the Big Four schedule in time to give the O.B.A. a Toronto winner at this early date. The Blue cagers then offered to drop one of their home games with each squad of the Big Four and play a double-point game with each. The Blues further agreed to play this double-point tilt on the opposition's floor. Last night's Broadview-Varsity game came under this double-point clause. We can't imagine where Reeve got his misinformation but we suppose that he believed he saw a good opportunity of taking another dig at Reeve Enemy No. 1 and took the leap before taking a good look.

Last night's victory for the Stevens' aggregation was certainly a pleasant one, as it was unexpected. The win put the Blues in a very favourable position as the Y basketballers now have four losses on their record while the Blues have only two. The game was very close all the way and the final score left Little Ab Rennick speechless with fury. It seems that a technical free throw was an important factor in the victory. McGregor of Varsity was given two free throws and the crowd, despite a warning from Referee Irwin, put up a loud clamour while the Blue cager was shooting the free throws. Irwin called a technical on Broadview for this unnecessary clamour and Neil Sullivan netted a single point. That single counter turned out to be a very important one.

Warren Stevens used a bit of strategy in last night's tilt. Instead of starting his first squad he used his substitutes at the outset while Rennick sent out his starting squad. When the Y crew looked tired Stevens put his stars on, with the result that the lads who had been checking the Blues into the floor in their two previous meetings were helpless to stem the tide.

After yesterday's pleasing victory the Blues will be all set for the McGill invasion on Friday. The present edition of Red cagers is not as powerful as of yore and Stevens' aggregation should have very little trouble in registering their first intercollegiate victory this season.

Greetings to Eugene "Gus" Greco, popular winner of the Johnny Copp Memorial, on his twenty-second birthday, which he is celebrating today.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS PRESENT COMIC SKIT AT JOINT MEETING

"La Dame Avocat", a comic skit, opened the joint meeting of the University College and Victoria French Clubs, held last evening at Wymilwood. The skit was played by the first year students of Victoria and dealt with the difficulties of a feminine lawyer at the outset of her career. Following the playlet, Mr. Lenschow, a German exchange student, read a paper on a visit to France.

TWO FOOTBALL STARS ARE PAVING THE WAY IN BASKETBALL SERIES

Those two dynamic figures representing Varsity so well in rugby are again paving the way in the basketball series as Joe Connelly has amassed a grand total of 83 points, while Hughie Marks has netted 71. In foul shots scored Hugh Marks leads Connelly. The University of Toronto quintet, although not of the same talent as last year's all star squad, have a well balanced club and are confident of improving as the season goes forward.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Last night's hockey game between U.C. and St. Hilda's was called off because the U.C. girls had to attend a banquet. It wasn't a very good night for a hockey game anyway, so the players were glad enough to have it postponed.

The basketball teams were practicing again last night, but there weren't many out for the intermediate practice. The prospective seniors had a good workout, and the forwards practised signals and trick plays. There will be a practice tonight from five to six in the Lillian Massey gym for these twelve girls.

Most of the swimmers are out practising these days. Phyl Haslem and Midge Murphy of Social Science have been plunging regularly, and Vi and Clara Ord of St. Hilda's were-up at the Lillian Massey a few days ago practising various things. This invitation meet with McMaster sounds to us like a good idea, and should be a good prelude to the interfaculty meet. Let's show the McMaster girls the best talent we have.

KNOX AND DENTALS ARE CAGE VICTORS

Tooth-men Swamp St. Mike's
27-15 After Early 8-point
Handicap

PRESBYTERIANS WIN 19-17

Two distinctly opposed types of basketball were exhibited in the upper gym at Hart House last night as Knox eked out a win over Wyckliffe 19-17 in a listless exhibition, while Dents trounced St. Mike's 27-15 in a well-played rough and tumble affair.

The first game, although extremely close, was a dull affair. It was only after five minutes that the first score was produced. Aimless passing and shooting were the rule. Wyckliffe took an early lead and at the interval had a 10-6 lead.

However, Knox came to life in the second half and led by Shaw, burly right guard, they drew up on even terms at 17-all with a minute and a half to play. Shaw then pocketed the winning basket from well out and Knox took home the victory. Shaw was the best player on the floor with 12 points, while Cardy and Ruch with 6 apiece led the Wyckliffe scorers. Knox scored 3 out of 6 foul shots attempted while Wyckliffe got only one in 3.

The second game was an extreme contrast to the first. It was a wide-open, rough game with plenty of action and excitement. St. Mike's started off in high gear and led 8-0 before Dents recovered from their surprise. But when they did, they fairly swamped the Irish, holding them to 7 points over the remainder of the route.

At half time the score was 8-all but from then on Dents scored basket after basket almost at will. Their work around the basket was sensational and in addition their luck held as the ball went right to the mark from centre and added to the total.

Andrews, Shukin, Kingsberg and Hurwitz were sensational for Dents

BLUES TAKE BROADVIEW IN BASKETBALL THRILLER

six minutes gone the score stood at 6-5 in their favour, the winners showing laxness in ball handling while Broadview took advantage of all mistakes. The lead see-sawed up to 9-all with Neil Sullivan tossing two beautiful hoops for Varsity on sporadic dashes and Samme and Breardon accounting for the losers' trio of counters.

Broadview again smashed their way to the front on two free throws by Bodrug and baskets by Stronach and Martin while Varsity missed three charity tosses and as many net shots. Neil Sullivan broke fast to wriggle through the entire Y team and bring the count to 15-11. The Red and Black added three additional points and then went into retirement for the remainder of the half while Varsity dropped in three hoops. Connelly started things when he eluded his shadow for the past two games (Samme) and threw a perfect hook. N. Sullivan ripped the twine seconds later and then Joe Connelly came through from nowhere to make the halftime score 19-17 for Broadview.

The opening five minutes of the second half saw the Blues go into a lead that was never relinquished. Evidently Steve pepped his charges up in the rest period. McGregor got his first basket after Bodrug sank 3 charities, one when two technicals were called on Phil Gold and the speedy Joe Connelly scored two baskets in his own unique and spectacular style to put his team ahead 23-22. Hughie Marks came into his own and slipped past his cheek for four points with McGregor boosting the total to 29. Each team added one via the free route and then came Laurie Irwin's technical on Broadview for "improper conduct of the audience".

Eight minutes of play remaining and Varsity up eight points, 31-23. The action was fast and the losers adopted forechecking tactics after the manner of Gorman's Maroons of hockey fame. Varsity took time out with the board reading 32-27. Gold was lost via the personal foul route. Bodrug secured possession when Varsity tried to stall and three points separated the teams. Marks broke through the checking tactics of Rennie's men and raised it to five points.

Two minutes to go and Martin sank a single which saw McGregor leave the floor via the foul route. Broadview gave everything they had but the students were equal to the task and held them to a single and one hoop to end the game 34-33.

Varsity deserved the victory for their speedy attack which at times baffled the Y men and their clearing tactics at their own end. Phil Gold was very effective at grabbing rebounds besides starting scoring plays and was ably assisted by Marks and McGregor. The latter played his best game in senior company and is particularly good when he gets his Irish up as the saying goes. N. Sullivan, Connelly and Marks dazzled the crowd with their speed and elusiveness, garnering 25 points. Bodrug starred for Broadview, scoring two baskets and five charities, which is undoubtedly his specialty.

hence it is of prime importance with regard to the acceptance or rejection of a story.

Editors reiterate that plots do not change; a new twist may be given to them, but essentially they are the same. Mrs. Muir disagreed, however. She showed that new situations and incidents have arisen owing to the changing social conditions. In business, in particular, wider fields have developed.

In actually building up the short story, care must be taken that description, dialogue, drama and characterization must be included and relation in perfect balance and proportion, so that the finished product presents a harmonious whole. Consistency of action and dialogue might be an important consideration and in every detail the stories must be authentic.

Mr. Wilson claimed that the average healthiness of the students' hair was very good, except that the showers had a tendency to dry it out. This could be corrected, said Mr. Morton, if the shower-takers would wear bathing caps. As a parting shot, Mr. Wilson made sure that the superior qualities of the Hart House barber shop—the latest style clippers, the latherizer, etc.—would be mentioned. He thought it rather absurd to consider thirteen as an entry age, the work being what it is. "Age has nothing to do with it," stated Professor Woodcock, Registrar of Trinity College. "It is a matter of maturity. Whether the student has experienced sufficient mental development depends on his previous education and his home training."

Mr. A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University, thought that the age limit was quite satisfactory. Raising it would delay too long those taking an Arts course as a preliminary to professional training. Freshman were sufficiently mature, he believed, to be trained as responsible adults.

SNOOPY NEIGHBORS SPOIL GIRLS' FUN IN FRATERNITIES

Have you ever stopped to figure out, all you little girls that don't belong to fraternities, just what goes on in their houses? We don't mean when their party manners are on but when—oh you know.

Rules and regulations are there for girls who live in and so on. Well, we can let you in on the secret. There are few, if any, rules because there are so few girls living in. There is only one rule we came across. "No men in the house before twelve noon", and that's all because of snoopy neighbours. But then you can't blame them. What would you think if you saw several men coming out of a women's frat house at about nine in the morning?

Things are so different down in the States. There, in most cases, the girls have to live in fraternity houses because of the lack of residences and when you get a gang of girls, anywhere from 10 to 40 in number, there really have to be rules. And the following list "from down Texas way" will give you a pretty good idea of what they don't do.

HOUSE REGULATIONS

1. Girls will please wear both stockings when entertaining gentleman callers, except on Sundays and holidays.
2. Girls are absolutely not to date ditch diggers, college boys or other riff-raff.
3. Don't run your hand through your boy-friend's hair and then wipe it on the wall paper. Even dogs have pretty hair.
4. Always turn the lights out at 9 o'clock even if your visitor doesn't leave. We must cut down expenses.
5. Don't sit on your date's lap. It puts wrinkles in your dress.

When did you say the next plane was leaving for Texas?

ART EXHIBITION WILL OPEN SDDN

The undergraduates' Art Exhibition in Hart House, which is second only in popularity to the recently terminated photographic show, will open on Monday, February 17th.

Any undergraduate with artistic tendencies is eligible to submit his work whether oils, water colours, pencil drawings or black and white. All exhibits must be in the Warden's office by 5 p.m. on Wednesday, February 12 and must be framed. PROFESSORS PLACE IN POLITICS TO BE DEBATED TO-NIGHT

MORGAN EXPECTS ROOSEVELT TO WIN COMING ELECTION

Results will Probably be Closer but President is

SITUATION COMPLEX

Dr. L. T. Morgan when interviewed yesterday regarding the coming American election, said he "would be very surprised if Roosevelt did not get in", though it was absolutely impossible for anyone as yet to predict exactly what would happen, as the situation was too complex.

The results, however, might be much closer than in the last elections, though Roosevelt possessed all the advantages. In the first place the Republicans have split their party by the recent nomination of Borah and Landow. These two men have such different opinions that they will have a very difficult time ever agreeing on a common platform. All they have to offer is criticism while Roosevelt has a definite plan for his party, though there may be some dis-

ST. MIKE'S JUNIORS TROUNCE VARSITY

Luck with the Irish Despite Valiant Blue Battle in Final Frame

LINOSAY AND METZ SCORE

The highly regarded St. Michael's junior O.H.A. sextet whipped Varsity by a 9 to 1 score at the Gardens last night. The blue and white kids counted the only goal of the first period but St. Mike's had all the fun in the final forty minutes.

Sixteen minutes after the opening whistle Lindsay Varsity skated down the right boards, circled in behind the right edge, and shoved the puck into the net between goalie Dunn's skates. The blue defence played heady hockey for the entire period as the team left the ice enjoying a one-goal lead.

St. Mike's raised the Gardens' Hydro bill by flashing the light six times in the second period. Five of the goals were scored on identical plays; a pass out from behind the net to an uncovered forward camped just inside the blue line. Metz counted twice when Langford, Varsity defenceman, was serving a term in the pen.

The blue squad battled continually during the final frame but luck was with the Irish as they tallied three more times.

Lindsay performed well for Varsity while Metz with four goals and Mitchell with two goals and a pair of assists were top men for St. Michael's.

Don Redman's Negro Band will Play Music

AT ROYAL YORK

The School of Science is importing Don Redman for its annual at-home, to be held this year in the banquet hall of the Royal York Hotel on Friday, February 21st. It is expected to be one of the highlights of the University formal season. Many distinguished School graduates from the United States and Canada, who are attending the convention in the afternoon, will give the affair an international character.

Dancing will be from nine until three. Supper will be served at midnight, or thereabouts in the Crystal Ballroom, with Gilbert Watson furnishing the music. The committee is planning to reserve a room in which the older graduates and those who do not care to dance may play bridge.

Redman's fourteen-piece orchestra will arrive from New York on a special bus Friday afternoon and will leave, probably for Detroit, on Saturday morning. The last time Redman appeared in Toronto was a year ago New Year's Eve, at the Maple Leaf Gardens. He is reputed to have the smoothest negro band on the continent, has done recordings for both Victor and Brunswick, appeared in several recent movie shorts and plays over a national network.

Tickets will be $5.00, and the number issued is limited. Lists will be opened on Monday.

VARSITY BEAVERS WIN FIRST GAME

Defeat Hinde and Dauche Squad in Arena Game by

MANY PENALTIES

The Varsity Beavers won their first game of the season when they defeated the Hinde and Dauche team to the tune of 4-2 at Varsity Arena last night. Despite the fact that the victory leaves the Seconds deep in the cellar position, it marks Varsity's initial win in hockey circles this season.

After a scoreless first period the Hinde and Dauche men went to the front with two goals in the middle stanza. While Edwards was in the cooler the Beavers put on a power play which rewarded them with a goal. Valiquette got credit for the play.

The final period saw an outbreak of penalties which paved the way for the Blue's win. After five minutes of play Sissons and Dunn were given major penalties. Stavart and Valiquette beat the meat packers' goalie in short order to put the Beavers in front 3-2. Seconds later the losers ran into a pair of penalties, leaving only three men on the ice. Valiquette, who starred for the Beavers, sewed the game up with minutes to play.

Candidates for Committee Are Urged to Take the Floor
Tonight

Students and professors will converge on Hart House tonight for what promises to be the most spectacular and explosive debate of the year when the motion "That this house regrets the intrusion of professors into politics" is discussed.

Two outstanding student-debaters and two professors will speak "on the paper". Mirvin Mirsky, a senior in Law, will speak for the affirmative, supported by Mr. A. F. W. Plumptre of the economics department. It is anticipated they will deplore the practical usefulness of the professor in the political field.

Mr. Plumptre, while an undergraduate at Cambridge, became noted for his witty, brilliant debating and is particularly famed for his defence of the motion "That this house would sooner spend their Sundays in Paris." He will return to Cambridge next month to give a series of lectures on monetary theory.

Residence girls are in great demand at the Date Bureau this week-end it was learned yesterday. Practically all applications from men for dates for this week-end specify, among other things, that the co-eds live in residence.

The largest single order, the operator said, has come from six of the eight members of second year Civil Engineers, who are holding a private party on Friday night. They demand, he said, that all be residence girls with late leaves. "They must be beautiful, excellent dancers, must not be quiet, and must know what the score is." All specified that the girls "have good teeth."

STUDENT RECITALS IN HART HOUSE HAVE WIDE INTEREST

At noon today in the east common room of Hart House the fourth of a new series of short recitals by undergraduates of the University will be given.

These recitals are in the nature of an experiment and are an attempt to provide an opportunity for undergraduates who play well to do so before a gathering. It was felt by the music committee of Hart House that there are many undergraduates with considerable ability who have no chance to perform in public, and these short recitals are intended to provide this opportunity. Their future will depend on whether

MEDICAL STUDENTS PLAN BIG PARTY

COLOURED MAN PARAOEO

They do not allow sandwich men on the campus. And especially coloured sandwich men.

Yesterday the medical students hired a negro lad to carry a huge sign around the campus advertising the Medical At-Home to be held at the Royal York this Friday night. They dressed him in a coon coat, set a top hat on his head and led him out on to the campus.

"Amos" strutted around with his sign for a few minutes until one of the campus policemen apprehended him and objected to his carrying the advertisement. So "Amos" had to return to the medical building and parade the balls there.

Next, the dance committee smuggled their sandwich man into Hart House and had him parading up and down the halls when the Warden saw the spectacle of a sandwich man in the halls. The matter was discussed and the coloured gent was ejected on a technicality. "He is obviously not a member of the House," the Warden was reported to have said.

So the negro lad was packed off again to parade the halls of the medical building in peace. Part of his sign was left as an advertisement in the lobby of Hart House.

NEW FEE PROPOSAL

One of the most momentous efforts to change the financial status of the undergraduate and other important institutions of the college was made last night at a meeting of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society. Inasmuch as the three dollar fee from the freshman year has been collected only with the greatest difficulty, the committee submitted the following suggestion.

"The committee is of the opinion that some means should be adopted of collecting the freshman fee from 100 per cent of the freshman class. The committee therefore recommends that the secretary of the society be authorized to petition the Council of University College to request the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto to enforce the payment of the freshman fee and to enforce the bursar to collect it." Although unanimously accepted, its final enforcement will be dependent on

Happy, hot and hilarious, The Varsity staff made whoopee last night somewhere over near Yonge Street. Karl Mueller and his Mules added some extra kick to the party. Forgetting for the nonce all worries of type and paper, verbs and nouns, the boys and girls who slave each week-day to bring you your daily paper threw their hoo's here and there in an almost perceptible rhythm in between trips here and there in no perceptible direction.

If one would simulate other society columnists one might be tempted to remark on the large emerald ring on that certain blonde's finger, or the easily appreciated lines in such and such's dress. And their partners: well you try and find out!

One lady, Miss Tookie Nisdale, was almost swish in black sat-in and her escort Mr. Viper was squiffed away. The Torenissistisist editor seemed to be also half there but his particular position was never accurately ascertained.

Just in Case You Must be Told Yesterday Was Mighty Cold

By Larry Gough

Yes, children, there is a spot on the campus that's colder than the reception room at Wymilwood. Yesterday afternoon in the midst of a proper gale, an investigation was carried out to find the most frigid place on an all-too-frigid campus and the Stadium wins.

In the top row of the bleachers the thermometer registered two degrees above zero at three o'clock. Except for a wind that was sharp enough to scalp a polar bear, it was quite comfortable in section W.

By the goal posts on Trinity's field, in a blazing (?) sun and a bitter breeze the mercury clung pretty close to nine degrees, but when shifted around the post and out of the sun, it slipped a couple of notches.

In front of Hart House it was comparatively warm with a mere ten degrees, but in the centre of the circle in front of U.C., the wind caused a drop of three points.

In that improvised wind-tunnel that's commonly known as "the archway" in the athletic wing of Hart House the liquid seemed to get tired because it skidded down the pole to number four.

Individual Attention A Necessity for Students

According to a professor at Northwestern University American universities have made great strides in the last decade towards individualizing higher education by weighing the needs and capacities of students. Curricula are now planned so that students may be regarded as individuals, their course of study varying according to their initiative and character.

To this end two major plans have been evolved, an advisory system that makes available opportunities for consultation with instructors, and a readjustment of the curriculum so that the peculiar abilities of each student may be discovered and given more free play in development.

Catering to individual needs if carried too far is not a desirable characteristic of a university, but some system of advising new students as to the course they should choose is an excellent idea. Theoretically we at Toronto have a month at the beginning of term in which to discuss matters with professors and if desirable, to change our courses. Actually, however, little good is served by it.

Most students arrive at the university with a preconceived idea of what course they are going to take, their choice being frequently based on very erratic reasoning. Either a teacher suggested a certain course, or someone said it was easy, or they were good in that at high school. It does not occur to them to talk the choice of a course over with the professors, they usually do not know to whom to go, and even if they do seek out someone it is likely to be fruitless. Students have difficulty in locating professors at the beginning of term and those who are available are so harassed with registration details that they have little time to devote to the consideration of individual cases.

An advisory committee with no duties but those of giving advice would be a great advantage to those students who have only a hazy idea of the difference in courses and of what each course actually entails. The University calendar is just a collection of hieroglyphics to a great many people before they arrive here and understand what its entries mean.

Such a proposal is worth considering. Certainly it would greatly reduce the number of people who after a year in Classics, for example, realize that they should have been in Moderns, but who, other than putting in an extra year at college, can do nothing about it.

Shorter Course An Aid to Medicals

The latest announcement from McGill University to the effect that the Medical course there is being reduced from five to four years, should afford a faint ray of hope to students contemplating a course in Medicine, or those at present in the first or second years of that course here.

The announcement elicited little interest in the Faculty of Medicine here except to draw forth the comment that "it is a step in the right direction".

It is a well-known fact that many brilliant students, fresh from high school, are prevented from entering the medical profession because the course as it exists here at present is too long and expensive. The loss to the medical profession because of this obstacle is beyond calculation. Our system of scholarships and bursaries is at present too inadequate to provide for even a small percentage of the brilliant but needy students who, if given the opportunity, would be a credit to the medical profession. Also it is obvious that the standards by which candidates are selected as the holders of scholarships, have little or no bearing on the potential value to humanity in that particular field of endeavour. A facility for translating Catullus or working deductions in Analytical Geometry, affords no grounds for the supposition that the particular individual so gifted will make a great surgeon or bequeath to the world any epoch-making discovery which will revolutionize the practice of medicine.

The situation here is inevitably tending toward that which has existed in the United States for many years. There the sons of the middle and lower middle classes have little chance of ever attaining to the degree of M.D. On the contrary the personnel of the profession is limited to the sons of rich men or the sons of doctors. In Canada it has long been our boast that our physicians have sprung from the soil or the ranks of the middle class. We can scarcely hope to maintain this reputation if the courses are made more difficult financially.

It seems well within the realm of possibility for the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Toronto to adopt a policy similar to the new one in force at McGill. By substituting four years of nine months' duration for five years of seven and a half months each, the way of the medical student at that university has been made much easier. The six-year course here, which includes one year pre-medical, corresponds to the old five-year course at McGill.

To our mind, unless steps are taken to compete with the new attractive course at McGill, it is quite conceivable that the finest talent will be attracted there and the reputation of the Faculty of Medicine will suffer accordingly.

Leap Year Applies To Finances

Once again Leap Year with its extra day rolls around. There is, as usual, a great deal of small talk about Leap Year being the time for the girls to take the initiative and do the proposing. As far as we can see, this has seldom got beyond the small talk stage, and it is used by a lot of elderly bachelor girls to console themselves with the thought that they had their chances in Leap Year, but they never found the right man or one who was good enough. In short the whole idea is, at present, merely an idea which has not the slightest practical value.

But this is no reason why it should remain in such a condition. Now is the time for all aspiring women to come to their own aid. This is the year of opportunity for the bashful, for the unsuccessful socially and the lovelorn. May we suggest that the women exert their prerogative by asking their male acquaintances to accompany them to parties, pictures and picnics. However, these invitations should be accompanied by the willingness to foot the bills.

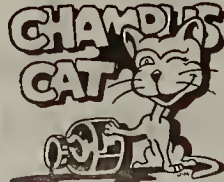

There are few women who realize the expense involved when they are taken out for an evening's entertainment. The young gallants who take their ladies to downtown hotels for an evening's dancing usually expect to spend anything from six dollars up. These same high prices prevail in the case of the college formals. Even the occasional evening at the pictures involves the outlay of a dollar or two. We wish to point this out to lady readers so that they will not be caught unaware if they follow our advice and ask the man of their dreams to go dancing some evening.

If the girls adopt the policy of asking the men to go out with them and follow it up by paying the bills, they will get a true perspective of the compliment paid them when asked out by some well-meaning youngster who has saved his hard-earned summer money for the winter week-ends.

Today too many women take being asked out for granted. They often look bored and are apt to be rude in this respect, even to the point of not thanking their escorts for the thoughtfulness and trouble involved in giving them an evening's pleasure. If these same girls were forced to ask the men out for a few months and pay the bills they would realize their privileged position.

If some of the "conventions" of being invited out were altered a little, the men would not be the ones to complain about "wasting their money on women" and the girls in turn would appreciate being asked out a great deal more than they do at the present time.

The fees in the School of Experience are always paid in advance.

Shortly after P.C. made his appearance in this dept. last week with a powerful drama of Toronto court life, we are told that someone in St. Mike's had a call from an uncle who is on the police force. "Those Varsity boys had better watch out," remarked the uncle in gruff constabular tones. "They're skating on thin ice!"

What say to a few more cracks?

"RESIDENCE REVELS"

"A man in the closet is worth two on the fire escape"

Scene: The common room in any University girls' residence, where an informal hop is in progress.

Time: Unknown. All the clocks in the residence have been stolen.

Curtain Rises.

GIRLS' CHORUS: (chanting dirge)
"Got forty-nine fellas, we only need one more . . ."

FREDA: Never mind gals, leave it to me! (Goes to doorway, shouts up stairs). Hey, Mary! Bring down that man that's in my closet.

VDICE (from above): I can't find any man!

FREDA: (Looks about room accusingly). Alright now, who swiped the guy that was hiding among my clothes?

VOICE (from crowd): Maybe he gave you the slip.

(Loud footsteps on stairs)
MARY: (Enters, pushing uniformed figure ahead of her): Here, is this him?

FREDA: No—can't you see that's a cop! What would I want with a cop in my boudoir?

THE GIRLS: A man's a man for a' that! On with the dance!

THE DON OF THE HOUSE (rushing forward): A policeman, did you say?

He's mine by the official regulations! (Grabs cop by arm, trotting him off to her office). The orders are that nothing of this nature is to be let out—everything must be a secret between us two! Isn't it thrilling?

FREDA: It will be again, just as soon as somebody comes across with my burglar. Why, I never thought the guy would hide behind a woman's skirt!

ALL: He wouldn't if you'd move over and let him through the door—he's right behind you.

BURGLAR: Hello stranger!

FREDA: Why Burgy, you old dear, where have you been?

BURGY: In the cellar. I got the lift up.

VDICE: (from crowd) Where'd you get the American cigarettes?

BURG: Out of a purse in your room.

VOICE: I was afraid of that.

(Enter Cop)

COP: (grabs burglar) You're under arrest—at last we've got this residence prowler. I'd hate to be in your shoes.

BURGLAR: Well they're my shoes, and that's something!

THE DON: (following cop in) Please give him a chance.

COP: Well, have you anything to say?

BURGLAR: Sure—play Don!

Music: "O'Shea, can I see you to-night?"

HARVARD INVITES SAVANTS
Cambridge, Mass.—Representatives from 757 universities and learned societies in nearly every country in the world have been invited to Harvard University's centenary celebration in September.

the action of the Board of Governors. The next meeting of the executive of the U.C. Lit. will be held shortly to nominate a candidate for the Moss Scholarship.

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisenrath addressed the society on the subject "Is Pacifism Possible?" He said,

"Unless we can solve this problem before us, all others fall into desuetude. The paramount problem of war and peace is pressing, and be it not solved first, then we are, I fear, doomed. I shall have to convince you through reason (for so must all theory today be tested) that pacifism is not only possible, but practical."

Rabbi Eisenrath then proceeded in his own forceful style to draw a picture of the world after the war and the gradual development of militarism. "Men saw a solution, a 'way of life', not in the potency of peace, but in the force of arms." A little later he said, "The ballot was being replaced by the bullet, and gradual evolution by revolution of the oppressed multitude."

After showing an aptitude and ability to present both sides of a difficult question, the rabbi concluded,

"The next war will not be a war to end war, or a war to prevent war, but a war to end the terrifying uncertainty of peace. Nor will the masses be protected. Again we shall see millions maimed, orphaned, widowed, and dragged to the depths of despair. Only pacifism can save us."

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

The McMaster-Varsity swimming meet we were telling you about is to be held in Hamilton, probably in the pool which was built for the British Empire games. This will probably give all the Varsity swimmers quite a thrill, because it's supposed to be an A-onest tank, and then it's always more fun going away from home to compete. The date is set tentatively for February 27. It is not yet certain how the team will be chosen.

The game between the Varsity seniors and McMaster has been set definitely for six-thirty on Friday in Hart House gym. The girls have been practising every day this week and are hoping to turn in a good account of themselves. McMaster had two good teams last year, and are no mean rivals. Their teams are picked during the autumn term, and the girls play a number of exhibition games with Hamilton teams.

Great preparations are being made for the week-end of February 21 and 22, when the Bronze Baby struggle is fought out. Lib Leitch, president of the Basketball Club, is hoping that the visiting teams will have a pleasant time here, and is busy with plans for their entertainment. The tickets will be on sale very soon.

VICTORIA REACHES WATERPOLO FINALS

Trinity Eliminated by Group
Rivals by a Score
of 3-1

SR. SCHOOL TAKES U.C.

As a result of the waterpolo games played last night in the Hart House pool, Vic, Jr. Meds and Sr. S.P.S. will fight it out for the interfaculty championship. Vic defeated their group rivals, Trinity, 3-1 in the afternoon's feature, to eliminate the red and black churners, while Sr. School clinched their group honours by upsetting U.C. by the same margin. Dents defaulted to Jr. School, as this game had no bearing on the group leadership. Jr. Meds having definitely displayed superiority in this section.

The Vic-Trinity game was a typical struggle between these two colleges. Play was close, with both teams displaying a powerful defense. Ed Fraser, defense stalwart for Trinity, opened the scoring, taking advantage of a Victoria penalty. Before the period ended Scott had notched one for Vic to tie the count.

In the second half Vic definitely displayed their superiority, getting two counters and holding the opposition scoreless. Scott and Malcolm were responsible for these two tallies. For Vic besides the scorers, Dalziel and Earle stood out, but there were no weaknesses in the team, which hopes to bring back the waterpolo championship to its present holders, Vic.

The second game was more of a splash ball game than the first one. Sr. School although they clearly outplayed U.C., did not flash any impressive form that warrants them being considered a serious menace to Vic's title. Zachanko opened the scoring for School with Miller on the sidelines due to a penalty. Gold evened it up for U.C. a moment later when his long shot evaded Thompson's flailing lunch-hooks. In the second half it was School

TRINITY LEADS TRACK COMPETITION

Conway Wins 440 YARD RACE with Delaney Taking Second Place

SANDLOS COPS HIGH JUMP

Trinity College established its hold more firmly on first place in the interfaculty track competition yesterday afternoon when Conway and Delaney took the first two berths in the 440 yard sprint, and Robinson captured second to Sandlos of Victoria in the high jump. However, Larry O'Connor will be clocked for the 440 this afternoon and may upset the results in that event. The tie-breaker between Harris of Meds and Ashenhurst of S.P.S. for the 220 yard sprint will also be run off at the same time.

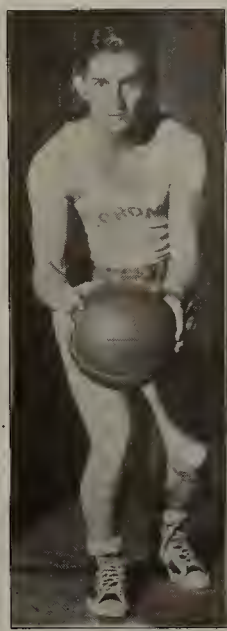

Dale of U.C. won the mile walk in 8.24.4 quite handily, the other three competitors being disqualified after the race. Victoria as a result of Sandlos, a first year man, being the only one of eight competitors to cross the bar at 5 ft 5 1/4 inches, was boosted into a second place tie with Meds.

Yesterday's results:

440—(1) Conway, Trin.; (2) Delaney, Trin.; (3) Forrest, Victoria. Time, 54.8.

1 Mile Walk: Dale, U.C. Time, 8.24.4.

High Jump: Sandlos, Vic; Robinson, Trin.; Hamilton, Dents. Height, 5 feet 5 1/4 inches.

JOE CONNELLY

Ace forward of Warren Stevens' senior basketball club who will be seen in action Friday night when Varsity meets McGill at Hart House in the first intercollegiate basketball game in Toronto.

Joe Connelly Is Leading Scorer

Statistics issued by the management of the University of Toronto basketball team show that Marks, Connelly and Gold are still the Big Three of the club both offensively and defensively. Joe Connelly leads the scorers with a total of 79 points in 11 games, while Marks follows close with 64 points. Neil Sullivan is next in line with 35 and Captain Phil Gold follows with 30 in 6 games. Marks and Connelly continue their "pat" act all the way down the statistics sheet. Hugh has played 407 minutes out of a possible of 440 while Joe has been in action 391. Connelly leads 24 to 22 in personal fouls and 27 to 23 in field goals. Marks takes the lead with 28 out of 50 foul shots scored while Joe trails badly with 26 out of 61. Phil Gold retains his honours as the bad man of the team with 19 personal fouls in 174 minutes of play. This is an average of one every nine minutes. Neil Sullivan follows closely with an average of one every nine and a half

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Frank Lamberti

Reports from Montreal show that steps are being taken to have a central location for the playing of basketball of such a nature as to accommodate cage enthusiasts, an idea worth adopting here.

Of all athletics receiving the least consideration both as a spectacle and as a game, basketball has more or less been in the background, even though the game has been played for years in Canada.

Last year eight basketball matches of the double bill variety attracted nearly 100,000 people to Madison Square Gardens. The answer there is quite obvious—the centralizing of the sport; a similar movement here would no doubt be crowned with success. It is rather peculiar that the basketball convenors have made no advance for the last few years, at which time the league promoted basketball down at Mutual St. Arena.

Friday night the U. of T. teams are both hosts and guests as the hockey team journeys to McGill while the Blue cagers meet the Redmen in Hart House. The outcome of both sports should prove highly interesting as the winless Varsity lads start on even footing in the hockey series, while the McGill Redmen have a win and a loss in the intercollegiate basketball series. The Blue team look like the best bet in the cage engagement, while in hockey—who knows? as the Frenchman would say. Poof, we have been ze game, poof—we haf lose!

To hear the managers of the budding white hopes in training for the Jack Dempsey heavyweight boxing tournament, one wonders how they all can win, as each manager thinks his lad is the best to the extent of providing many beefsteaks for the culinary delectation of their "white hopes", but our guess would be, "save some for the big night at Maple Leaf Gardens on February 19th" when the theme song will be "Dark Eyes".

As predicted some time ago in this column, waterpolo has for its ultimate champions a choice from Victoria, Senior S.P.S. and Meds.

These averages are not as good as those chalked up by last year's all-star team but the boys are confident of sweetening their averages in the remaining games on the schedule. The leaders expect a great night on Friday of this week when they meet McGill at Hart House. This game shapes up as a natural. McGill dominated the intercollegiate circle for five years and Varsity met several stinging defeats at their hands. This year, while McGill have a fair club, they should not prove too hard for Connelly, Marks and company. The game starts at 8.30 and will be followed by two hours of dancing which will be open to the spectators at the game.

SWIMMERS CONTEST INTERFACULTY CUP

McCatty Brothers Are Favourites but Field is Quite Open

COMPETITION KEEN

During the coming week the Varsity swimmers will hold forth in their annual struggle for the Durnan Cup. Competition is going to be keen this year, as a greater number of swimmers have been consistently training than has been the case in former years.

The cup is awarded on the basis of all-round swimming ability, which includes proficiency in every race and style of swimming as well as in diving.

The swimmer's time in each of the six events is taken and points are awarded on the basis of a certain standard which is the same for all of the swimmers.

The McCatty brothers and Dilworth are considered to be the favourites in this year's contest—although due to the variety of events, it is quite possible for any proficient swimmer to pull himself up into the leaders' class by exceptional talent in any one event.

Coach Roy Lowndes is conducting the meets; they will be held at the regular intercollegiate practice times. Tuesday at 5 p.m. the 50 and the 100 yard free style races will be run off. On Thursday the 100 yard breast and the 100 yard back stroke; Saturday noon the diving and the 1-4 mile free style event will finish up the week of competition.

The cup was donated several years ago by Bruce Durnan, a member of the famous Durnan aquatic family, who was on the staff of Hart House at that time. The contest is open to all men swimmers in the University of Toronto.

Charley Pocius, II St. Mike's, is Varsity's hope in the heavyweight boxing.

Charley is an even 6' high and he weighs 205 lbs. He packs one of the hardest wallops in Canada.

Coming to Varsity, he took up boxing for the first time a year ago last fall and has compensated for lack of experience with natural ability and haymakers. He should score a win in the intercollegiate.

Miss Cagney Mable was stunning in flowers, while her partner, Soggy Sight, was merely stunned. Miss Marble Stalker was most impressive in a chic Paris green creation and she was led around by Mr. Ross Gunrow in a lovely gray green greasy gondola. One of the most radical of the departures which took place was the advent of Miss Marini Spicks, assistant signer of the vouchers on which the staff of The Varsity depend for Beer and Skittles. agreement on how it should be administered.

Furthermore, no matter what happens in the near future Roosevelt is safe. If conditions improve he can attribute it to his New Deal; if they become worse he can blame it on the Senate for throwing out his bills.

Another advantage is that, as President, he has millions at his disposal which he can spend very judiciously before the elections. In fact, Dr. Morgan concluded, Roosevelt is a shrewd politician and has so many strings attached to his bow it is impossible to tell just what he will do, what point he will make an issue, till the time arrives.

Hither and Yon

The Saskatchewan Sheaf still does not think much of The Varsity apparently, as witness this front page editorial run as a news story: "On an inconspicuous corner of the front page of the Toronto Varsity, the editor, blushing, put a little note about two of the brilliant prodigy of the capital of smugness called 'Varsity' at Toronto, who were caught in the act of robbing the display cases of a local theatre there. The article very mildly suggests that the college students 'almost spent the night in jail.'"

The Sheaf doesn't explain how any part of The Varsity could possibly be inconspicuous, nor how they would suggest we treat such a story.

An official notice in the Daily Texan at the commencement of the spring term: "SUGGESTION TO STUDENTS: If you don't remember all of your second semester courses come now to the Registrar's Office and inquire; don't wait until the crowded days of the new semester are actually here."

And now, right here in Toronto, a group of professors have organized a society that would put the "Last Man Club" of the Civil War to shame. Dr.

C. H. Best, of the department of physiology and twenty-nine colleagues, have arranged to take tests of each other's condition regularly, and the last survivor will prepare a paper on the causes of the others' deaths.

The students of Southeastern University had a nude girl dance for them on the athletic field one night recently. An investigation followed, ending with the statement by the dean that he considered the incident closed until "further facts are laid bare".

The University of Rochester have a cheer which may be used either for approbation or to bestow a raspberry. It consists of the whole class snapping fingers in unison. It is reserved for classrooms and for social functions.

The public speaking department of the University of Minnesota subject their classes to microphone and recording tests. The speaker then has his speech played back to him to show his mistakes. Classes also are subjected to talks of stammerers, and other people with speech defects. It is said that this is very instructive.

These engineers, he continued, are reported on good authority to be "fine fellows", and will do everything in their power to insure an enjoyable evening. "Their dance," he said, "is to be held in a private home in a good residential district. A chaperon will be provided, and the party will be strictly a respectable affair. Good looks and ability to dance are the main qualifications necessary." The party will end up at Diana's, about 2.30 a.m. The engineers have volunteered to pay the girls' registration fee to the Date Bureau.

Mirvin Mirsky has been a consistent debater during his entire college career having spoken on many occasions in Hart House and been prime minister of the U.C. Parliamentary Club.

Wilfred Smith of University College and Prof. F. H. Underhill of the history department, will oppose the motion and laud the pedagogue in politics. Prof. Underhill is noted for his writing and interest in progressive political thinking and returns to debate in Hart House after an absence of several years.

At a meeting of the debates committee it was urged that undergraduates intending to run for the debates committee when the elections are held at the debate on February 26, should endeavour to speak at this debate tonight. A candidate must have spoken at least once from the floor of the house to be elected to the committee.

Wilfred Smith will be carried over from this year's committee, according to the custom of the debates committee, and seven members for next year's committee will be elected on February 26.

At the debate tonight Saul Rae will be speaker and Jack Graham will be clerk of the house.

NEW PLAZA HOTEL NEARLY COMPLETE

cold," said Mr. McMillan. There will also be a separate entrance for the tavern.

On the upper floors developments are rapidly taking place. Some rooms are almost completed. The walls, contrary to custom, are not papered, but painted in soft colours. A new idea is being tried in some of the rooms, by painting the walls two colours. For example, the walls on the north and west side are painted a sort of rosewood colour, those on the south and east are ivory. Then you place your living room furniture on the dark side and your bedroom furniture on the light side. It sounds funny but it's very effective. The radiators are all enclosed in the rooms and all in all the Park Plaza should, on completion, be one of the finest apartment hotels. Not only that, but on the first four floors some of Toronto's finest professional men's offices will be located.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Ottawa: The Speech from the Throne yesterday was characterized by a forceful appeal for and justification of the policy of governmental intervention in business, where private enterprise fails to act in the interests of society.

London: An Imperial Trade Conference is being planned for 1937, to coincide with the Coronation of King Edward and obviate the delegates' having to make separate trips to England for the two events.

FRUITS, SALADS POPULAR

To eat or not to eat. That is the question. The professors in this University have solved the problem in favour of the affirmative proposition.

The average University professor, while instilling into promising students the necessity of food for thought, is inclined to have considerable thought for food. Waiving principles of gastronomy which declare heavy meals and intellectual effort incompatible, they are inclined to eat a normal meal with a normal amount of gusto.

Of course there are exceptions to all rules. On enquiry we found that the occasional pedant eats like a bird, or forgets to eat at all in the face of a heated argument. But then this is not so important in the case of a tall man like Dr. —, for whom a little food goes a long way.

Then there are others who prefer salads, bowing to gastronomical evolution. We are informed that a greater percentage of professors than of students (Continued on Page 4)

SECURE GOLD MEDALLIST FOR WOMEN'S MUSICALES

Miss Margaret Parsons, L.T.C.M. gold medalist at the Toronto Conservatory of Music, has consented to be guest artist at the W.U.A. Musicales to be held in the Women's Union on Sunday.

Miss Parsons was formerly a student of Norman Wilkes and is now studying with Mona Bates. Last year she assisted the Tudor Singers directed by Dr. Healy Willan. At the last musicale of the W.U.A. Miss Parsons assisted Miss Jean McLachlan.

University College women are cordially invited and are asked to bring their friends to the musicale and tea which will be served after.

ALUMNI THEATRE NIGHT: CORRECTION IN DATE

Due to an unfortunate reportorial error, the date of the U.C. Alumni Association's theatre night was wrongly given in The Varsity on Wednesday. The date that the Alumni have taken over the University Drama Committee's production, The Inspector-General, is Saturday, March 14, in Hart House Theatre.

FICKLENESS A DRAWBACK

The U.C. Parliament yesterday defeated by a 17-13 vote, the redrafted motion "That this house is not in favour of women serving in the army."

The debate was preceded by a heated discussion on the constitutionality of the government's defeat at the last session. The Speaker ruled that the government was not legally removed from office a week ago because a quorum of members had not been present. The sitting government then became the opposition. Premier McCann assumed his office, attempted to resign, but was ruled out of order. With Jack Mirsky leading the opposition the debate commenced after the motion had been redrafted negatively.

The opposition leader stated that women, in demanding equal privileges with men, must also accept equal responsibilities in time of war. He pointed out the stamina of woman factory workers as qualities for soldiers. Con- (Continued on Page 4)

REALISM IS SEEN AS TRAGEDY'S BASE

"Dream World or Literary World" Out of Place in it,
Says Knight

That no great drama can be written without the use of poetic symbolism was the opinion of Professor G. Wilson Knight, expressed in a lecture on "Poetic Drama" at a meeting of the English and History Club held last night at the home of Playville Barrett.

"The essence of poetic tragedy is the projection of feeling into something beyond the human," said Mr. Knight. It need not be written in blank verse or even in the play form, but it must contain an element of universality. Through the use of symbols, natural or supernatural, the characters and action are put into relation with the widest issues of human existence. Mr. Knight declared. He read passages (Continued on Page 3)

PHARMACY GRAD BALL PROMISES HIGH GAIETY

Tonight the boys of the graduating year of the Ontario College of Pharmacy are holding their annual ball. Hugh Kohler, president of 376, seemed confident last night that this year's extravaganza would surpass anything which the Druggists had ever staged before. The executive are expecting in the neighbourhood of four hundred couples to attend.

A feature of the evening will be the distribution of favours to the ladies. The dance will be held in Eaton Auditorium with dancing from nine p.m. to two a.m. to the captivating music of Horace Lapp and his orchestra.

Among the distinguished guests expected to be present are Dean and Mrs. Heebner, Professor and Mrs. R. O. Hearst, Professor and Mrs. C. C. Clark and Dr. P. L. Scott.

Third Year Student Detected in Forgery

The following notice, posted in the University Library yesterday, has been brought to the attention of The Varsity:

"An undergraduate of the third year has been found guilty of stealing books from the University Library, by means of forging a false name to application blanks. The offender has been suspended from the use of the University Library for one month, and has incurred a fine of approximately sixty-five dollars, computed at the rate of fifty cents a day for every day that the stolen books were kept out of circulation."

It was understood last night that the severity of the penalty was calculated to warn off other would-be offenders. But serious misdemeanors of this calibre are few. It will be remembered that last year a first year student was expelled from the University for mutilation of library books, but these have been the only outstanding crimes against the Library in recent years.

LONG TERM CONTRACT PREVENTS DON REDMAN FROM PLAYING HERE

At a late hour last night the Engineering Society informed The Varsity that, contrary to their announced expectations, Don Redman and his famed coloured dance orchestra will not be able to fulfil their arrangement to play for the School At-Home on Friday, 21 February. The At-Home Committee had signed a contract with the understanding that Redman was available to play at the affair, but last night they were advised from New York that, just previous to receiving their engagement from Toronto, the band leader had signed a long term contract to play at Connie's Inn on Broadway.

The Committee is now making arrangements for another band.

TRINITY-VIC DEBATE ON DEMOCRACY ISSUE

Trinity College debaters will invade Victoria College next Wednesday night, February 12, to a debate on democracy with the Victoria undergraduates. The debate is to be held in Alumni Hall at 8 p.m., and the motion reads "That this House continues to believe in the democratic form of government."

For the affirmative the speakers will be G. A. Fallis of Victoria and Muriel Robertson of St. Hilda's. For the negative the speakers will be W. N. Turner of Trinity and Jessie Storrie of Vic.

The first game of the home and home series for the intercollegiate hockey supremacy will be played at McGill this evening as the University of Toronto shorts engage the Redmen. In so short a series past performances of the respective teams mean little or nothing and the Blues are anxious to hold Coach Bobby Bell's cohorts, with the view of creating an upset in the intercollegiate hockey circles.

The Blues will have a revamped lineup with Caswell in the Varsity nets and Frenies will be found on one of the wings. Although Varsity has not won a game in the O.H.A., the Big Blue team have always turned in consistently (Continued on Page 3)

VARSITY CHESS PLAYERS BATTLE TO 8-ALL DRAW AGAINST TORONTO CLUB

Last evening at the Toronto Chess Club, Varsity put up a valiant effort against a strong home team to score the necessary three points to draw the two match series—eight-all. At top board, the University champion, R. B. Hayes, scored a well-merited win over the Toronto stalwart S. W. Stock in the highlight of the evening. Prof. V. G. Smith put up a gallant losing battle against the veteran M. Sim. At the last moment J. Hvilitsky erred in a winning position to lose to A. E. Taylor. C. Morrison was routed by J. P. Erickson Brown. The game at board five between A. D. McConnell and F. W. Watson resulted in a draw by exhaustion at a late hour but at an early stage of the game. A. P. G. Joy lost easily to F. Blumberg in the first game completed. Prof. B. de F. Bayly won neatly from W. A. J. Case. The last game of the evening between A. L. Rubinoff and W. H. Despard is best contained in the title of a popular song, "I'm on a see-saw". The lead changed hands after each move and to the astonishment of all a natural draw resulted.

Aw, Now, Mr. Speaker!

Things we didn't know till yesterday: A subtle tribute to our mentors. "Professors can handle the pen but not the shovel." Mr. M. Mirsky, the one in the boiled shirt.

Now I ask you Mr. Speaker "And on his belly are pink political spots." Mr. Plumtree castigates Mr. Underhill in Biblical language.

Furthermore Mr. Speaker Mr. Underhill denies the dangers of political life. "Where the virginal purity of the scientific mind may be subject to indecent assault."

I submit Mr. Speaker "There are two kinds of Canadian economists, those who have served on Royal Commissions and those who hope to serve on them." The department of history takes a crack at the department of political economy.

I think Mr. Speaker There are three taboos for professors, according to Mr. Schaeffer. Never mention the C.C.F., the class struggle, or Marx. Mr. Bladen cannot conceive a university without marks.

FINE STORY-TELLER SEEN IN KIPLING

Dr. Locke Advocates Reading

"PORTRAYED HIS AGE"

"What keeps Kipling's stories alive is his essentially emotional and religious attitude to life and art," said Dr. G. H. Locke, Chief Librarian of the Toronto Public Library and vice-president of the Kipling Society of the Empire, in his speech on Kipling yesterday to the Women's Canadian Club. The meeting was arranged "in recognition of Rudyard Kipling and the contribution he has made to our literature."

Remembering Kipling when he spoke at McGill on his Canadian tour 30 years ago, Dr. Locke said "He was not impressive in appearance, yet the moment he spoke the audience sensed his genius." Dr. Locke went on to speak of Kipling's early career: "Back to India at seventeen, plunging into newspaper work, writing of India as he knew it, from the bare brown plains and the life of the common soldier, in the Mulvaney stories, to the green hills and exotic society of Simla, in the stories of Mrs. Hauksbee."

"Of Kipling as a story-teller one could speak for hours." Dr. Locke spoke briefly of his books, of the Jungle Books, "the greatest fairy-tales in English"; of Captains Courageous and The Light That Failed; and of Kim, of which Dr. Locke said, "do read Kim, and, like the lama in Kim, acquire merit."

Dr. Locke commented on the rhythm and music of Kipling's best poems, and quoted from several: The Song of the White Seal; Mandalay, so often "battered to make a radio holiday"; the famous Recessional; and If, "that (Continued on Page 4)

GREAT HALL'S CHAIRS TO ARRIVE SATURDAY

The much-heralded new chairs for the Great Hall in Hart House will arrive between nine and nine-thirty on Saturday morning, Comptroller J. R. Gilley said yesterday.

The new chairs are particularly suited to the needs of the Great Hall and will prove much handier and more comfortable than the present chairs being used. They are being made by a Canadian firm in Kitchener and much trouble has been taken to choose a design that will fit into the general atmosphere of the House.

"Hair Brain Trusts" of U.S.

By Ross Munro

The entry of professors into politics was sanctioned at the Hart House debate last night after a two and a half hour harangue in which undergraduates and professors forgot their conventional relationship and, without restraint, assailed and applauded the politician, faculty members with political ambitions, the C.C.F. and the philosopher Plato.

The motion "That this House regrets the intrusion of professors into politics," was defeated by a vote of 111 to 47. Prof. F. H. Underhill of the department of history and Wilfred Smith of University College successfully opposed the motion. Mr. A. F. W. Plumtree of the department of economics and Mirvin Mirsky of the law department upheld the affirmative.

The debate was marked by a spirit of controversy and antagonism emanating from the speeches of the debaters "on the paper". Faculty members turned out to the debate in unprecedented numbers and several spoke from the floor. (Continued on Page 3)

U.C. DOWNS VIC, 4-1 IN WOMEN'S HOCKEY

Marked Superiority Shown by Red and White Pucksters;
Vic Player Sick

The U.C. hockey team won a decided victory over Vic Seniors last night with a 4-1 count, in the women's interfaculty series. The action was nearly all at Vic's end of the ice and Maistic Cowan was kept busy trying to keep out a rain of shots from Jean Atkinson and "Chippy" Grant. Peg Snyder, though an inexperienced goalie, played a steady game in only letting one shot slip past.

The score was 0-0 at the end of the first period but U.C. had the best of the play and in the second period got off to a good start with Chippy Grant making a lone rush and putting in a neat tally. Ruth Leavens of Vic evened up the score but Jean Atkinson soon slammed another one in on the rebound, making it 2-1. In the third period Chippy and Jean repeated their performance of the previous period with another goal each, making the final score 4-1.

ASHENHURST SCORES WIN IN INDOOR TRACK MEET

Meds and School battled it out yesterday for the 220 yard honours in the weekly indoor track events at Hart House. Harris, running for the Medicals, was able to come home in front of Ashenhurst, the School competitor. The time in this event was 25.2 seconds.

Harry O'Connor covered the quarter-mile distance in 57.3 to gain third place in this race against time.

Please, Sirs, A Journalism Course!

Even in these years of depression the University goes ahead and establishes new courses. This is a sign of initiative on the part of our authorities, as it is by expansion of this sort that the University will maintain its position as a world-famous institution of learning. The new-come to our field of instruction is the Honour Course in Fine Arts which will be available next year. During the present academic year Fine Arts has been taught as a pass subject, and special consideration was given to those who wanted to switch into that instead of continuing some previously-chosen subjects.

While Fine Arts is probably an excellent subject to add to the curriculum, we who turn out The Varsity day after day desire to point out that we have repeatedly asked for a course in Journalism, and that course has always been refused. At the present time, those of our staff who "pass" with the editor have to do more work than is entailed by even a difficult subject. Our requests have never been extravagant, we expressed ourselves as being satisfied with any guidance which the professors might be willing to give in our endeavour to turn out a more interesting and well-written daily newspaper.

In this time of political confusion throughout the world the public are eager for, and dependent on, newspaper accounts for their information on world events. Woodrow Wilson goes down in history for his earnest fight to have the public know the truth concerning national and international affairs as a guaranty of stability and world peace.

The Spanish-American War was caused by an unjustifiable campaign in the yellow-journals of the United States. When the newspapers have such power for evil in the hands of the unqualified, it would seem to be of the utmost importance to a country to have her journalists trained in the Universities and thoroughly schooled in the ethics and responsibilities of the profession.

As there are over a hundred students turn up for The Varsity staff every year, and since there is no Journalism Course offered in the whole of Canada at the present time, there is every reason to believe that such a course, as extensive as the University could arrange, would be well-received by the student body. We might also point out that The Varsity has considerable equipment which might be put to even better use under Faculty guidance.

While the course in Fine Arts is a forward step, we feel that a course in Journalism would be even more to the credit of the University and earnestly commend this idea to the governing board.

No Need Now For Public Blunders

The new course in government administration which has just been inaugurated by the University Extension Department comes in answer to a long-felt need. Whether or not such a course can be made practical enough to serve the purpose for which it was intended yet remains to be seen. If it is successful a regular undergraduate course in municipal administration may be established in the near future.

So many civic officials, especially those in the smaller centres, arrive at more or less important administrative positions with an extremely sketchy idea of what their duties are or how to go about performing them. The blunders they make during their period of apprenticeship often have unfortunate results for the public. If the new course does anything towards clarifying the problems of these people it will justify its existence.

Furthermore, lectures on such subjects as the intricacies of the laws applying to schools and other municipal institutions would prove enlightening not only to those actually engaged in administration. The fact that already over seventy people have enrolled in the course indicates that there is a real need of information on such points and that people are anxious to avail themselves of the opportunity to acquire it.

The work done by the University Extension is most valuable and when it extends to practical everyday problems it is indeed to be commended.

Turn Tables On Failure!

By now many students will have learned of failure in one respect or another in the University. Perhaps you failed to make as many friends, to read as many good books, to settle as many problems, or to answer as many questions as you thought you would have by February 1936. Or you have failed one course if not all of them to a greater or less degree.

Perhaps you just feel whipped. You have decided your University education has meant nothing to you. Maybe you came here expecting too much. You were told that in these days a person must have a "university education" to get along; so you came here to let the University prepare you for life.

There is one thing fairly certain. If you are one of these fellows, through the proper attitude you can make the University do more for you than for someone who has been getting along rosily. You can make up your mind now that you will never amount to a hill of beans unless you learn to overcome defeat. Better that educational defeat should have come to you now while you are young and with a chance to improve and succeed. Strong men don't get that way without straining. "Before a man can achieve excellency, the gods have ordained he shall sweat."

Disposal Of The Proposal

The average short story which is published in the middle class magazines and periodicals is very much lacking in literary value. A survey of most magazines printed for the American family and designed to meet the tastes of every member of the family, would reveal a monotony of treatment of a subject which by now should have been so thoroughly analyzed and exploited as to prohibit further exposition. That subject is the marriage proposal.

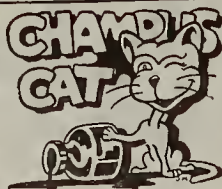

The technique of the short story of these magazines is to bring two people of opposite sex into speaking distance of each other, have them discover that each is divinely beautiful and very romantic, have them quarrel or misunderstand an ambiguous circumstance, and bring them together again. The stories end as the movies usually end, with the lovers locked in each other's arms, engaged, and living happily ever after. So seldom is it that the two people of these stories actually get married, that it is no small wonder that their race continues, since apparently there is no offspring which may be used to provide characters for subsequent narration.

The reason for the predominance of this subject matter is probably that there must be some romance brought to those women and men of the American family who are not yet married, and who, by putting themselves in the shoes of the people of the story, get a vicarious satisfaction from becoming temporarily engaged at someone else's expense. The false sentiment with which this very popular form of modern writing is impregnated results in a pseudo-romantic tone to the stories which disqualifies them immediately from any consideration as a contribution to our modern letters.

Youth faces a new world, Chancellor Lindley pointed out to the Kansas University students the other day. Perhaps so, but the students will find that the only way to keep the smoke going up the chimney permanently is to hustle firewood.

—Topeka Daily State Journal.

In a letter in Collier's Weekly, Roy O'Brien of Webster City, Pa., recently said: "... if you have a good candidate and a poor platform play up the candidate; if you have a good platform and a poor candidate play up the platform; but if you have neither, stand on the constitution and wave the flag."—Stanford Daily.

Rose of the Rancho, now playing at the Uptown, can be classified as one of the more successful efforts to emanate from the California film centre. A musical production unhampered by any intricacies of plot, the picture rates high in entertainment value.

Gladys Swarthout and John Boles combine in several catchy tunes, the pick of which are If I Should Lose You and the title number. The comedy scenes on the whole are above the average. The settings are picturesque and a faithful reproduction of California in the middle of the last century. The blending of these factors produces an extremely pleasing result.

The short subjects are skillfully varied but the honours go unchallenged to the inimitable favourite "Poppye". Taken as a whole, the Uptown this week presents one of the most well balanced shows seen this year. K.B.

The U.C. hockey team played a great game last night when they defeated Vic Seniors, interfaculty title-holders for the last three years. Vic played a defensive game and Maisie Cowan did some nice work in the nets keeping the score down. The first period ended with no score, but U.C. soon settled down to work and Jean Atkinson and Chippy Grant scored two goals each with the rest of the team behind them all the time. Vic fought hard and Ruth Leavens managed to score once but U.C. had a slight edge on their opponents the whole time.

Tonight the McMaster basketball team play the Varsity sextette in the Hart House gym at 6.30. This should be a very exciting game, so why not come out and encourage the team? There is quite a lot of fresh material this year as well as several of last year's players and they promise to make a very good team.

U.C. and St. Hilda's are playing off their badminton tournaments and it looks as if the teams will soon be picked. There are some very good players this year and it looks as if the interfaculty matches were going to be very exciting.

according to Mr. Knight. "One always feels that the tragic ending is the right ending. Tragedy is never negative; it is a creative sacrifice, not a failure or a retreat."

"Realism is the starting point of tragedy, not a dream world or a literary one," concluded Mr. Knight. He expressed the opinion that the future of poetic drama lay rather in the use of jazz rhythms and colloquialism than classic choruses. Modern intelligence is not in sympathy with tragedy; moreover "No one who has a faith in immortality can write tragedy." Sweeney Agonistes by T. S. Eliot was praised by Mr. Knight as an experiment in poetic tragedy based on modern rhythms.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Jim Tiller

All hail the hard-working Beavers, who finally broke into the credit column on Wednesday night. Now if only Lady Luck and the law of averages can get together for sixty minutes, we may yet see the first team knock off a victory in the O.H.A.—they have one more chance (with Toronto Dukes next Tuesday) and here's hopin'. And Oh Boy, if they win, are we gonna have a front page, are we gonna have a front page.

Right now, the McGill Redmen are causing the Bailey-coached unit more worries than the Toronto Dukes, and the Blue squad will be going all-out against McGill in Montreal this week-end. The feeling seems to be that McGill's long tenure of the intercollegiate hockey title is in grave danger of being broken this year. We hope so. A win for Varsity in college hockey would be mighty sweet for the Blue-clad pucksters, who so far have received more sympathy than cheers.

At the first of the Olympic Games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen yesterday, the Canadian entry went to the Poles, which they took 8-1. Only 300 spectators turned out to see the Canadians skate circles around the Poles. What the heck, the Varsity team does better than that.

Warren Steven's eagles are all set for forty fast minutes of basketball with the McGill quintet in Hart House tonight. The Blues have been working hard all week after that unfortunate one-point loss to Western, who succumbed to McGill by the same margin, and get the call to out-speed and out-score the Redmen. Any team with veterans like Connelly, Marks and Gold who are not only sensational but also dependable and steady is of necessity a good team. Furthermore, Neil Sullivan has crashed into stardom this season and now the Blues have four positively first-rate performers. The rest of the squad are all good players, make no mistake, and so we think Varsity should come through with a win in the basketball. McGill has always had a good squad of basketballers, and tonight's contest promises to be a spectacle of the eage-gamc as it should be played.

The fast-travelling Varsity II's take on the McMaster basketballers in the curtain-raiser. The odds favour Mac MacCutcheon's crew. When the basketball is over, an orchestra addicted to jazz will provide rhythm and harmony for two solid hours. The Management have made preparations to produce a slippery floor, we understand.

good performances and in the intercollegiate competition they are always at their best. Reports from McGill show that the Redmen have a smooth skating outfit capable of taking advantage of every break, a department in which the Blues are woefully weak.

In the games against American colleges McGill have a better record than the Blues, but that should spur the Blue men on to greater efforts. If Varsity can keep within hailing distance of the Redmen the return game should be a natural.

Basketball—

University of Toronto basketball fans have a splendid treat in store tonight when McGill's Redmen trot out on the Hart House floor to tangle with Warren Stevens' Blue and White basketballers. In a preliminary tilt Mac MacCutcheon's Varsity Seconds engage the McMaster quintet in an intercollegiate intermediate tussle. To top off the evening's program dancing will begin promptly at 10 p.m. so as to give the fans two full hours of dancing.

The senior tilt will mark the opening of the intercollegiate basketball season in Toronto, although both McGill and Varsity have already opened their intercollegiate schedule. McGill has a win over Western and a loss to Queen's. Varsity lost a one-point decision against Western last Saturday night.

As in their previous games Varsity's hopes will rest on the scoring prowess of the veterans Gold, Connelly and Marks. Neil Sullivan has taken a new lease on life of late and after his splendid performance against Broadview on Tuesday night he is expected to be in the van of the scorers tonight. McGill's Redmen have been powerful factors in the intercollegiate race in the past few years but although their squad still has a few veterans of repute in its make-up the Montreal quintet is not expected to be at the top of the league when the final whistle blows. However the Redmen can always be counted upon to furnish enough opposition to make their basketball tilts interesting.

In the intercollegiate intermediate tussle Coach MacCutcheon's squad will face stiff opposition as McMaster's basketballers are always well drilled and hard to take on any floor. Mac will start the team which soundly trounced Western last week-end with big Nelson Hogg leading the parade of scoring threats.

As this week has been named Dr. Naismith Week in honour of the founder of basketball, the University of Toronto will contribute one cent of every paid admission. This sum is going to the fund which is being set aside to send Dr. and Mrs. Naismith to the Olympic Games this summer.

HART HOUSE DEBATE

"I am not particularly sorry for myself for being a politician," declared Prof. Underhill, in opening his speech, which assumed the proportions of a tirade against the "growing intolerance" apparent in this continent as the landmarks of security begin to disappear.

He indicated that the intrusion of professors into politics in Britain goes back to the Reform Bill of 1832. "It is a long standing tradition," he commented, "and this has made the British universities a breeding ground for statesmen rather than a breeding ground for Ph.D's."

He stated that agnosticism and compromise among members of the faculty was a danger to which academics were vulnerable.

Underhill, urged that professors be kept at the universities instead of "prattling over in Queen's Park."

"If we are to have freedom and tolerance it must emanate from the universities," he said. "The one man who has done more than anyone else to foster this spirit in Canada is not at Ottawa or Queen's Park but he is the Warden of Hart House."

Mr. Plumptre threw verbal vitriol at the C.C.F. and considered the group in the University of Toronto who supported the party "laughable and lamentable".

Mervin Minsky, first speaker for the affirmative, feared that the professor would be made the scapegoat of the political fight. He referred to "hair-brain trusts" in the United States as one example in politics which was a menace. "The professor lacks practical knowledge and cannot indulge in the rough and tumble of election fights," he added.

"As long as we go on leaving government to low-down types of politicians the country is going to be in a mess," commented Wilfred Smith in his speech for the negative.

Lyndon Smith of Trinity College faculty pleaded that politics be made a hobby, and then he provided the House with a thumb nail sketch of world history in a little over three minutes.

Speakers for the affirmative included William Curry, F. Colborne, Perry Millar and George Fallis. For the negative Bernie Shaffer, A. R. Hicks, Marvin Gelber, J. Dewey and Ed. Shortt spoke.

Prof. E. W. McInnis proposed two motions in private business expressing the sympathy to Queen Mary and the members of the Royal family in their great loss and urged that the Speaker convey the tribute of loyalty of the House to the new King Edward VIII.

We read with particular zest the news that the Park Plaza Hotel is doggedly and at long last approaching completion. Since the day it was but a tiny tot, in fact since the moment it cut its first sod, we have been one of the massive Plaza's most tender and helpful friends. We have known it as a gangling youth with but little flesh on its towering frame; we watched it fill out to attain its present splendid stature, and have since been an understanding sympathizer while it has lingered fretfully in its years of adolescence.

We like to feel that from time to time we have been of some small comfort to the Plaza, in our own modest way. A friendly nod in passing, the occasional word of consolation at some discouraging delay in the brickwork or perhaps, more recently, an annoying hold up in the sandblasting. After all, these are the things that count.

Somehow we know that the Plaza appreciates our humble concern for it and it's great affairs. And now that the giant edifice is about to open its doors and become the friend of countless thousands who will go hurrying through its lobby, soaring into its comfortable apartment quarters, and diving into its taverns, we like to think that the Plaza will allow us to retain the small but intimate corner we have found in its heart.

A white elephant never forgets.

Opening her program with an opera group from Mozart, Miss Pons sang the lovely Chebruno's Aria, from Mariage de Figaro. Then the lilting La Capinera, to a birdlike flute accompaniment, followed by a French group which included the sprightly La Bonheur est Chose Legere by Saint-Saens.

A modern group included an interesting work by Gershwin in the American idiom (for which Miss Pons is not particularly suited), and the program closed with Variations by Proch, a showy but nevertheless pleasing work. Miss Pons sang numerous encores which best displayed her charming personality.

Marcel Hubert, cellist, formed an unexpected addition to the program. Mr. Hubert played two groups, which exhibited his exceptionally fine artistry. T.D.N.

French Club Play

Ces Dames aux Chapeaux Verts was presented by the French Society of University College last night. Its success was assured from the first; at last they have achieved the supposedly impossible—the excellent combination of good French and good acting.

The laurel for the best combination of these essentials goes to Anita Faessler—her performance did not flag once, nor did her accent wear thin. Freddie Chapman as the invalid (Rosalie) made the most of her few lines and achieved an excellent characterization by pantomime—a droop, a limp, and a handkerchief. Stan Aquarone as M. Ulysses Hyacinthe was a close second to Miss Faessler, his French was a joy and his acting excellent; his effective use of white gloves was not the least of his histrionic achievements in the part. John McEachern as M. le grand Doyen was very good, although he did not allow his sense of humour sufficient scope. Miss Huston, as Jeanne, and Miss Saint Aubin, as Ernestine, were both excellent. Mr. Yarrill was slightly stiff, but his diction was good. Mr. Medcalf and Mr. Luscombe played very well, although the former might have made more of his part. Arlette was played very creditably by Miss Gillespie; her movements, which were a little stiff, were more than compensated for by her excellent voice, and her long difficult speeches never became

The attention to details was perfect, except for the fatal mistake which Arlette permitted in putting her hand through the French windows—a fact which the audience magnanimously overlooked. The costuming and the settings were good. The audience enjoyed itself hugely and feasted on gum-drops and bon-bons in the intermissions, while regretting the folly of those who should have occupied the last few rows, and did not. E. R. Shortt, a government supporter, pointed out that the last war had slaughtered the best men in the world. With the entrance of women into the army there would be only a second-rate population left to propagate the race.

Successing speakers for the government attempted to show the general ineffectiveness of women soldiers. Other opposition members said that women in Russian armies were good sharpshooters and cited the fact as an indication of a woman's ability to wage warfare.

BLUES TIE FOR SECOND PLACE WITH VICTORY OVER MCGILL

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

London, Feb. 9: May, 1937, has been set as the probable time for the coronation of Edward VIII. There will be an Imperial Conference very shortly before or after, also in London.

Elstree, Feb. 9: Two British film companies suffered a combined loss of over two million dollars when fire gutted their studios here.

Toronto: Morley Callaghan, local author, defended the scheme of having police constables censor books on the basis that it will give an author a chance to defend himself in court. Dr. Edgar and Sir Charles G. D. Roberts voiced strong protests, however.

Toronto: Mr. Frank Regan, defence counsel in the O'Donnell trial, attacked the police for "unfair secretiveness" at the preliminary hearing in regards to a wrench alleged to have been found at the scene of the crime.

The Varsity seniors suffered defeat in the first exhibition game they have played this season, when they handed the McMaster co-eds a win by a score of 14-11 on Friday night at Hart House. The visiting squad had the edge on their opponents throughout the entire encounter, but their lead was seriously menaced during the final half.

In the opening period play was uneven, but ranged mostly within the garnet and grey territory, due to the superior ball-handling of the visitors. The Varsity checks, however, effectively prevented them from piling up a high tally.

Although the time allotted to the second half was cut almost in two, the homesters made a decidedly better showing than they did in the previous period. In the first few minutes of play, Kay Brown, Varsity's star forward, went in for a pretty shot which

FINES SERVE AS WARNINGS

Type of Book Taken Said to Narrow Field of Investigation

Peculiarities of handwriting were responsible for the apprehension of the undergraduate who was found guilty of stealing books from the University library, it was revealed by Professor W. S. Wallace, librarian of the University. Even when the handwriting is disguised there are generally involuntary peculiarities which make identification possible, he said.

The type of book taken limits the suspects, since it is known which texts are used in the various years. Intensive study of the book slips results in a further elimination, because of handwriting characteristics, and practical certainty of the guilty party follows.

Such occurrences are infrequent, and are confined to cases where a criminal tendency exists. Professor Wallace stated. The heavy fine imposed in this instance is expected to deter any would-be offenders. Mutilation of books also occurs very seldom, there being only one example of it since the expulsion of a first year student for this offence last year.

SEVEN HUNOREO SWAY TO COLOURED RHYTHM AT MEDICALS' AT-HOME

Rhythm and melody ran riot at the Royal York Hotel Friday night when the medical students of the University threw their formal party of the year, the Meds At-Home.

The coloured band made a hit with the 700 dancers who attended and W. MacIsaac, the chairman and other members of the dance committee, were applauded at the end of the function for providing probably the most distinctive dance the medics have ever held.

The coloured orchestra played everything from sleepy melodies of the cotton fields to the hotcha rhythm of the metropolis. There was a drummer with a flashing smile like a calcium lamp.

A skeleton dangling gruesomely from the south wall against a black backdrop added a medical touch to the atmosphere. An elaborate supper was served at midnight and balloons and paper hats contributed to the merriment of the evening.

CANAOA DIFFERS FROM U.S.

"Complete mastery of a given field of knowledge is essential in education," declared Principal M. W. Wallace of University College, in an interview with The Varsity on the subject of broad general education versus specialization in the University of Toronto.

Recently President Conant of Harvard put into operation a plan for "unification of study," affecting both students and faculty, in order to counteract over-specialization and co-ordinate the various departments of the University.

Of the new plan, Principal Wallace remarked, "If you rove from field to field, you have little chance of achieving success in any of them."

Possible Danger

"Specialization is not carried to an extreme in this university," said Dr. W. A. Kirkwood, Dean of the Faculty of Arts at Trinity College. "It has grown considerably in recent years, and there is a danger in that direction." Referring to departmental divisions, Dr. Kirkwood pointed out that there is a movement in the Honour departments towards lessening the number of Pass subjects taken by an Honour student.

Changes will be introduced in the Great Hall today in appearance and in menu. The changed appearance will be due to the luxurious chairs presented by the Massey Foundation; in the menu, owing to extended hours for meals, and increased choice of food. The latter applies to the Tuck Shop as well as to the Great Hall.

With the change in the Great Hall a year ago, the original benches were withdrawn and ordinary chairs from other parts of the House substituted. The Massey Foundation then offered to present new chairs for the Hall, thus evincing continued interest in the life of the House. The Board of Stewards and the House Committee consulted with Mr. and Mrs. Massey regarding a design for the chairs which would be in keeping with the dignity of the Great Hall.

The one selected, from which the chairs have been made, was of quarter-oak stained dark to match the legs of the long tables. During the summer the table tops will be stained to match. The seats are of heraldic red leather to match the coats of arms at each end of the hall, and are fitted with Dunlopillo cushioning, the most comfortable possible. The chairs are reinforced

COMPACTS AS SOUVENIRS

A new high in the realm of graduation dances was reached on Friday night at Eaton Auditorium when the class of 316 of the Ontario College of Pharmacy forgot for the nonce all such mundane things as pills, ointments and the terrors of the Chemistry Lab.

Some three hundred and fifty carefree couples disported themselves with all the abandon and joie de vivre characteristic of this annual classic. Horace Lapp and his band of peerless syncretists provided toe-tlingling music and joined in the festive spirit of the occasion by leading a snake-dance, instruments and all, around and around the glass-like floor of the ballroom.

At intermission the gay revellers were treated to a tasty supper featuring an ice cream dessert with a decidedly St. Valentine's motif. The boys from Pharmacy won the hearts of all the ladies by the munificence which they exhibited in distributing compact, in a modernistic design, one to each and every female present.

The committee with Edward Foxton as chairman and Hugh L. Kohler and Harold A. Medcalf, president and secretary of the graduating year, are to be commended for staging a swell party.

MCGILL PUCKSTERS TAN BLUE TEAM

LEAVES BIG JOB AHEAD

By Frank Lomberti
(Special to The Varsity)

Montreal, Feb. 8.—The blazing headlong rushes, and consistent forechecking of a powerful Red hockey machine brought a brilliant 5-0 victory over a completely disrupted University of Toronto hockey squad which floundered dismally before the onslaughts of a hard hitting McGill sextet in the first game of the intercollegiate series played at the Forum last night. The result of the victory duplicated the feat of last year as the game progressed through a session of scraggy hockey. The McGill sextet demonstrated their superiority by maintaining a close checking, fast breaking offensive threat which had the Blue men hemmed in the Varsity goal area for two periods. Outside of a few goalward thrusts by the Varsity squad the McGill hockey team had the game well in hand and they overworked Campbell in the Blue citadel. Although a little shaky in the first two periods when four flashing drives of the McGill snipers found the twine Campbell turned in a good exhibition of goal-tending as the Redmen shot from all angles.

The sterling play of the night was made as Paul Pidcock of the second line picked up a loose puck on the right boards to skate with lightning-like speed which carried him through a dumbfounded Varsity team right into the Varsity goal area where he neatly swerved to the side and flipped the puck into an empty Blue net as Campbell went sprawling out on the ice. On Friday night the Varsity senior basketball club thoroughly trounced the McGill Redmen at Hart House by a 34-18 score and sent them tumbling to the cellar position in the intercollegiate race for cage honours. The win leaves Queen's on the top rung with Toronto and Western tied for second place.

The presence of two officials tended to slow up the game considerably in the first half and undoubtedly affected the playing of both teams. The whistle-blowers were wide awake and handed out seven charities in the first five minutes of play with two points going to each squad, which incidentally were the only counters registered. Marty Bowes, veteran guard of past Montreal court fives, incurred three fouls before he had time even to get his bearings.

The Blue cagers had possession of the ball for the greater part of the initial session but experienced tough luck around the basket while the visitors were right on with their set shots and kept on even terms with the pace setters, holding them to 13-all at half time. After the rest period Stevens' campaigners found their feet and a constant barrage of shots found results before the disorganized McGill defence could find their feet. Neil Sullivan

SILCOX TO LECTURE ABOUT MODERN WORLD

"The Nature of Conflict in the Modern World" will be the topic of an address to the Sociology Club by Dr. Edwin Silcox at the Women's Union on Wednesday, February 12 at 8.15. Dr. Silcox is a general secretary of the Social Service Council of Canada and a prominent worker on national and international problems. He is at present engaged on a study of Canadian and American relations for the Carnegie Endowment for the Advancement of International Peace.

The Reverend Claris Edwin Silcox, M.A., S.T.B., was at one time a member of the editorial staff of The Varsity and at that time composed "The Blue and White". He was editor of Torontoensis in 1908, and throughout his undergraduate days occupied important offices in University and University College societies. Since graduation he has been prominent in sociological affairs in Canada.

SUN AFTER ICE IS A YEARLY RULE

By Larry Gough and Harold Freeman

"Oh Wind, if Winter comes, Cau Spring be far behind?"
—Shelley.

The question is "Shelley go out to see what the weather is like or Shelley not?" He Shell, so out he goes, skip-cap and all. It has definitely been determined that Winter has arrived, so now all that remains to be done is to inquire of the Wind, according to the above formula, whether Spring can be far behind. Oh joy, oh rapture, we have discovered that,

Spring is coming soon.

The weatherman bears us out in our statement. Official information reveals that the present cold snap will be snapped in two or three days.

Spring is coming soon.

Down in Kentucky, the crocuses are out in bloom in all their glory. Glory bel up in North Bay, snowdrops and ice-plants may be seen in profusion. What better proof can be given that, Spring is coming soon.

Hopes were raised to a high level yesterday, when observers reported a robin red-breast in front of Simcoe Hall. Unfortunately, it turned out to be a penguin with a wind-blown chest. However, we still insist that, Spring is coming soon.

Down in the Bay, the ice is melting fast. Shipping activities are on the increase, and many old tubs are stowing away a good cargo. What Bay? Why, the Babloo. It is taken as a sure sign that,

COLD AS A FROG IN A FROZEN POOL

By Robert Allen

Fortitude is no word for it! Talk about your cold showers or winter bathing—this beats them both.

O—O

They dared him to do it. "Half a buck you won't!" Cheers and jeers. Shouts: "Half a buck."

O—O

He fooled them. Grinningly: "Sure." So they had to find the money.

O—O

"Ten cents to see it, folks. Only a dime. We need five dimes, boys. Who's going to hand out?"

O—O

Five dimes appeared from nowhere. He had to go through with it.

O—O

So he stripped to a bathing suit, a scarf and a hat. Out through the portals of Trinity College he stepped bravely, followed by a hooting mob of undergrads. The wintry winds did blow, but was he dismayed? A thousand NOs. Ne'er did his steady stride falter, nor his wide smile wane. Dute into the cold cruel world . . .

O—O

From Trinity College to Hart House . . . Walking, not running . . . In a swimming pool . . . And the wintry winds . . .

Chats at Concerts May Spoil Performance

One of the many pleasant privileges which the undergraduates of Hart House enjoy is the Sunday evening concerts. These concerts are thoroughly enjoyable and most of the students recognize the convenience of hearing these excellent artists and conduct themselves accordingly.

However, there are a few who appear to be not duly appreciative of this opportunity. They are the few who arrive late or insist upon holding a private little chat while the program is in progress. It is, of course, usually thoughtlessness on the part of the offenders which permits this to occur, but it is a fault which they should remedy.

The Sunday evening concerts are a treat for the students. But it is the concert itself which should have the appeal more than the friend who happens to be present. The concert should get the attention rather than the friend.

This consideration is due to everyone who attends the concerts. However, the mere mention of the fact should insure against its recurrence.

Journalism Offered At University of Toronto

(Submitted)

Many students recognize the need for a university course in journalism here. An advocate of the idea voiced his opinion through this column in last Friday's issue. We are heartily in accord with the general idea, but take exception to a statement used in the course of the argument, namely, "... there is no journalism course offered in the whole of Canada at the present time."

The statement is unfair to the Department of Extension in this University which offers a three year course, available through attending night classes.

We are aware that the writer of that editorial is expressing, consciously or otherwise, an attitude prevalent among students here who are interested in journalism. They are inclined to disregard the course now being offered; possibly in the hope of obtaining one fashioned more favourably.

There are 187 students enrolled in the night classes held in University College. Classes are held four evenings a week. The course extends over three years. Besides business men and women there are undergraduates and graduates of this university and men employed by downtown papers. The lecturer, besides being widely experienced in practical journalism, is an author and a man of the highest literary tastes. The course involves a study of literature just as extensive as that of the average Arts course. It also demands as much work and more initiative than a regular subject in the university.

It cannot be said, in face of these facts, that there is no journalism course in Canada. In fact, if the Board of Governors decide to inaugurate a regular study of the subject it will undoubtedly be along the lines already laid down. In the meantime, students forming an opinion with regard to the present course would do well to acquaint themselves with the available facts.

Leacock Leaves McGill University

Recently the Trustees of McGill University announced the retirement of four professors to be made effective at the end of this term. These four gentlemen have, or will have, reached by this time, the ripe old age of sixty-five, at which age, the trustees maintain, they are not capable of lecturing to the youth of the country. Three of these gentlemen appear to be perfectly content with the arrangements made; but the fourth, one Stephen Leacock, humorist, author and economist of no mean ability, resents the forced resignation and makes no bones about it.

Professor Leacock has lectured at McGill for over twenty-five years. During this time he has served his university faithfully. In addition he has spread the name McGill across the continent, for his articles are widely read in the United States as well as Canada. In short, he is an internationally known personage, a figure who would add lustre to whatever institution his presence might grace.

True, Leacock is sixty-five years old. But this fact alone should not prevent him from holding a position for it is common knowledge that a man is as old as he feels and thinks, and Leacock today has a mind as keen as to be the envy of many a younger man. He feels that he is still capable of lecturing, and he still wants to lecture. Further, students all over Canada hold him in so high regard that they would be only too glad to attend his lectures.

The McGill trustees, in self defence, state that they have a general rule that all professors are to be relieved at the age of sixty-five, and they do not intend to make any exception in the case of Leacock. This is indeed excellent reasoning. The root of the evil, however, lies in the rule itself. If a man is capable of fulfilling his duties as well as, nay better than others, why must he be deprived of office simply because he is committing the perfectly natural function of getting along in years.

Unfortunately, it seems at present likely that Leacock's statements will not affect the hearts of the McGill trustees to any degree, and next May will, in all probability, find him—along with thousands of undergraduates—among the unemployed, that is if he is not hired by some large American university in the meantime. It is indeed, quite probable that this will happen for at least one large university has signified a willingness to add the "cast-off" to their payroll.

Surely Canada is not so well stocked with men of ability that she can afford to let them slip through her fingers in such a manner.

—The Brunswickian.

A Peace Objective

Dear Editor—

A national conference of students was held at Toronto on December 30th and 31st of last year at which the "Canadian Student Peace Movement" was formed. The object of the new organization is to co-ordinate the activities of students throughout Canada in their efforts towards world peace. At this conference were present delegates from universities in Eastern Canada and as far west as the University of Manitoba.

Our immediate objectives for the remainder of the session are—

- (i) to set up Student Peace Movements on all Canadian campuses, or co-operate with bodies already existing for such a purpose.
- (ii) to prepare for a National Peace Hour for students to be held in March.
- (iii) to publish a monthly bulletin containing information pertaining to the Movement.
- (iv) to send as large a delegation as possible to the annual meeting of the League of Nations Society at Ottawa in May.
- (v) to send a representative Canadian delegation to Geneva this summer for the World Youth Conference on Peace.

In order to attain these ends we need the full support of Canadian students in all parts of the Dominion, and in particular of those in whose hands are the organs which express student opinion. We welcome suggestions and criticisms from students individually and in organized groups. To this end, we would greatly appreciate publication of this letter.

Cordially yours,

Wesley H. Bradley,
National Secretary.

When students are late to classes at the University of Akron, they are fined five cents. The money is then put in a fund to buy benches on which students may sit during leisure hours.

In these days of strict rules binding sorority women to the past, it is interesting to learn that, in 1898, women students at Duke College had but one restriction—"You are a lady; remember it." Or, is that a restriction? Not any more.

The poorest way to face life is to face it with a sneer.—Theodore Roosevelt.

Vocational Guidance

SHILLING SELLERS: A large field for graduates who are more interested in the little dramas that go on around us than in making a fortune. Every grande dame who wishes to cut off her son or nephew with a shilling is a potential customer.

INTELLECTUALS: Requisites—lofty brow, angular nose, sloppy dresser. Rent yourself out to hostesses during cocktail hour. Pay good but drinks lousy. Candidates for this profession are advised to incorporate with it occupation No. three in order to offset the links in back developed from resting in modernistic furniture.

MANHOLE PEEPER DOWN: Designed for students who do not accept things at face value. Big Money. 80 per cent of the students who took my advice last year are now living off the motorists who struck them in the midst of their investigations.

DIRECTION ASKER: Help the police forget. Keep them busy. A really noble occupation.

SUCCESS SALESMAN: Everyone buys books on how to make a million. Chorus girls are sure customers.

FACULTY GAG MAN: Professors vie for popularity. Sell your gags to the faculty. Also can work as a class room claqueur.

BATHROOM HOLDER: Any inmate of boarding houses is willing to pay you if you will get up and hold the bathroom until he is ready to use it.

CENTURY PLANT KEEPER: A job with a future for graduates with weak constitution.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Canadian Grand Opera

The Canadian Grand Opera Association has made a most promising beginning in their series of opera productions, and it is reasonable to suppose that, with experience, when they have acquired an operatic savoir-faire, they will become an excellent and dependable opera company. The group have, thus far, played to capacity audiences, and if subsequent productions maintain even the present standard, they will continue to do so.

Last Saturday they presented Carmen, the second of their series. Aside from a slightly heavy first act, the performance was extremely interesting. The exciting tavern scene, the dramatic, ominous third act, and even the finale achieved an effect of reality (a difficult feat for an opera) which was marred only by the audience's deplorable custom of applauding at every climax in the drama. Incidentally, there are two things that an opera audience should (and rarely does) realize: first, that the orchestral overture is part of the opera; second, that it is rather embarrassing, even for an opera star, when in the midst of a romantic love scene, to acknowledge applause.

The whole company is to be commended for their excellent work, beginning with the veteran Dr. Hageman, who so capably handled the delicate task of synchronizing singers and orchestra. Elythe Shuttleworth, as Carmen, turned in a performance almost worthy of a seasoned prima donna, and with an added freshness of outlook. James Flucker made a breezy Toreador and the dancer in the tavern scene was exceptionally good. The guest artists, Ruth Miller and Sydney Rayner, lent a touch of experience, with splendid interpretations of their respective roles.

The confusion in languages, presumably accidental, was perhaps fortunate, in that it illustrated the infinite superiority of the native language: it was the English which sounded inappropriate. It is futile to translate the mere words of an opera into English without translating the scene, the mood, the music—in fact, the whole nationality—into English too. And as a matter of fact the words are almost superfluous, being only a medium for the music.

VARSITY WRESTLERS WIN; FENCERS

Combined Results Duplicate Meet Held Here Last Week

Buffalo Squad Victorious in Fois, Epee and Sabre Bouts

By W. A. Crocker

Buffalo, Feb. 8.—University of Toronto wrestlers displaying the same good form which easily carried them to a victory over the University of Buffalo squirmers last week, easily walked off with nearly all the honours in the return match held at the beautiful Norton Union in Buffalo on Saturday night. While the wrestlers were being trounced the B.U. fencers again handed the Toronto squad a reverse thus making the combined results of the meet a duplicate of last week's.

The Toronto Varsity fencers were severely handicapped by the limited target under which the fencing bouts were conducted as the Canadian intercollegiate rules, like the Olympic ones, allow an unlimited target. In the foil bouts where the Varsity squad was expected to make a good showing the Bees chalked up a 5-4 advantage. In the epee bouts the Buffalo squad were good enough for a 3-1 advantage while with the sabre the Buffalonians took all the bouts. Tushingham was very impressive for Varsity, getting the Toronto squad's only win with the epee.

The Varsity wrestlers seemed to have a very clear margin in every bout winning four out of the five scheduled bouts and also taking two exhibition matches in rather easy fashion.

Results—
135 lbs.: C. Robertson (T) defeated J. Benny (B), decision.
145 lbs.: B. Houle (T) defeated J. Swarthout, one fall in 33 seconds.
155 lbs.: S. Pusteri (B) defeated J. Carrol (T), one fall in 47 seconds.
165 lbs.: A. B. Scott (T) defeated W. Noshay (B), decision.
Heavyweight: D. Lahrop (T) defeated E. Wesp, one fall in 3 minutes and 58 seconds.
Exhibition—

TRINITY CAGERS DEFEATED BY U.C. SENIOR SQUAD

Grant for Trinity; Humenick, Casson and Damsky for U.C., Star

U.C.'s senior basketball team swamped the Trinity squad Friday afternoon in an interfaculty game played in the upper gym at Hart House by a score of 33 to 11.

The speedy red and white crew ran away with the Trinity team to pile up an overwhelming score while Trinity's team were only able to score two baskets with their other seven points being on foul shots.

Grant was the best man on the Trinity team, scoring 6 of their eleven points. He had a perfect average on foul shots with four baskets out of four shots.

The high scorers of the U.C. squad were Damsky, Humenick and Casson with eight points apiece.

DENTS DEFEAT PHARMACY IN BASEBALL TUSSLE

Druggists' Lead Overcome by Stirring Last Period Rally

The Dental softball team emerged victorious from a close struggle with the Pharmacy squad, which took place Friday afternoon in the Hart House gym.

The Pharmacy team had the game sewed up until the last inning when the Dental team ran wild and scored six runs with every man on the team getting a hit.

Axmith, pitching for the Pharmacy team, held the Dentists to 5 hits in the first four innings but went to pieces in the last inning of the five inning game.

BLUE INTERMEDIATES WIN IN CAGE TILT

McMaster Quintet Lack the Smoothness and Finish of the Homestears

FINAL SCORE 37-19

The fast travelling Varsity intermediate basketball quintet won their second straight victory in the intercollegiate series by defeating the McMaster cagers by the convincing score of 37-19. The game was played as the preliminary to the Varsity-McGill senior game. On the first play of the game the Blue tam scored and from then on they were always in command of the situation. The game started out to be a class exhibition of the winter pastime but Varsity closed in on the defence and the McMaster combination was throttled.

The first half produced plenty of scoring, with the Varsity attack looking much more impressive than that of the visitors who seemed to lack an organized offense. This faulty play of the visitors stood out in sharp contrast to the smooth passing plays of Mac MacCutcheon's pets. Hogg, whose (Continued on Page 4) broke the ice with a perfect set shot, then Joe Connelly boosted his total with three quick hoops, two coming from short shots and one from a cut-in on a pass from Gold. After a McGill time-out Gormley and Schofield ripped the twine for their team's two lone baskets of the last period.

With eight minutes to play and the score at 24-17 the Blues were in the proverbial drivers' seat and forced the visitors to shoot from well out and at the same time increased their own score. Hughie Marks aided the one-sided lean to the already top-heavy score by constantly eluding his check and rapping in four consecutive baskets. T. Sullivan made it 34 and Rutherford finished the scoring with a free throw.

The game was one of the cleanest we have watched this season, with no one getting the gate via the personal foul route, although Boves, McGregor and Marks were the next thing to it with three. A new low of 25 fouls was called, 13 against McGill and 12 against Varsity. The losers enjoyed a better average in this department, sinking six to four for Toronto.

Neil Sullivan continues to make things hot for the Marks and Connelly high scoring combination and deserves four star rating for his five baskets which gave him ten points to tie with Marks for offensive honours or have you a better term? "Sullie" elicited a trio of hoops in the first half to keep the boys up and in there. He adopts the "Connelly" cut-in style, is tops on set shots and better than average from the foul line.

Marks and Connelly scored a total of 18 points (10 and 8) and remain the iron men of the team with the latter performing for the full time while Hughie took a two minute rest. Phil Gold played a nice defensive game, incurred but one personal, scored three points and was valuable on the offensive. Captain Gormley of the Redmen tallied five points as a result of two hoops and a charity, but Hunter, playing his first season in major company, took top honours with seven points.

Varsity (34): Connelly 8; N. Sullivan 10; Marks 10; Gold 3; McGregor 1; T. Sullivan 2; Bedford, Willis and Dempster.

McGill (18): Gormley 5; Scrivner 2; Brown 1; Boves; Rutherford 1; Greenblatt; Schofield 2; Hunter 7; DeMartini.

Referee: "Hec" Creighton, "Laurie" Irwin.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Frank Lamberti

The vibrant motivating force of any sport spectacle is generally the crowd atmosphere, and what a contrast this is when on the one hand you have good sportsmen, and on the other a conceited know-it-all, ready to throw brickbats, verbal or otherwise, who, sinks to despicable depths by jecring the opposing athletes, especially in intercollegiate sports.

Last Friday night as McGill and Varsity clashed in an intercollegiate senior hockey fixture many spectators sitting behind the Blue players' bench made themselves conspicuous by their inane laughter at a baffling Blue team who were unfamiliar with the resiliency of the backboards at Forum rink and failed to reach the puck as they followed in for rebounds, breaks on which McGill capitalized immensely to the ludicrous delight of said sports morons.

To maintain full amateur interest in competition, in the Big Four senior rugby series, a capital idea would be to have each club post a bond as their guarantee of conducting football activities legitimately, which could be declared forfeit as soon as the club was involved in any shady dealing. Several of these high and mighty moguls would then constantly refresh their memories as to the inside workings of their club.

The intercollegiate hockey board which will convene soon on the question of allotting places in the international intercollegiate loop would do well to look into the reasons why several of the colleges wish to enter the Canadian series and govern themselves accordingly. For the last four years with an exception or so the intercollegiate senior loop has consisted of only two teams, McGill and Varsity.

While still on the hockey subject, it was our good fortune to view the University of Montreal play R.M.C. and the smooth working combination of the flying French-Canadian lads was a treat to watch as their fast clicking plays gained twelve counters against a lone goal of the military hockeyists. The University of Montreal lead the intermediate college series and their hockey playing ability is of senior calibre.

The odd scene of a bespectacled goal tender was a source of amazement to McGill hockey fans as Campbell, Varsity citadel guardian took his place between the posts and he received a warning ovation on several good saves.

The intercollegiate senior basketball group is gradually drawing to a race between Queen's and Varsity with the tri-coloured squad out in front. The traditional rivalry will be renewed next Friday night as they clash for top honours with Varsity journeying to Kingston and McGill on successive nights.

By gaining victory over McMaster the intermediate Varsity squad forged out in front in their series and should lead the way home as they have power and smooth co-ordination which is often lacking in the intermediate loop.

The dynamite duo of Marks and Connelly in basketball has been finally added to, as Neil Sullivan has gained for himself a niche in the top flight of senior cagers, being the second highest scorer on the club.

HART HOUSE CHANGES

throughout with steel rods to withstand the long hard usage to which the Hart House furniture is inevitably subjected. Darnell rubber cushion slides have been installed to ensure quiet when the chairs are being moved. The Krug Manufacturing Company of Kitchener was selected to build the chairs.

The design is one of monastic severity, embodying considerable comfort together with simplicity of line in keeping with the architecture of the Hall, and having ruggedness and solidity of construction. They were designed by the Hall Committee together with Mathers and Haldenby, architects.

The changes in meals consist of allowing the choice of soup as an alternative to dessert in the evening meal, and in extending the time in which breakfast may be obtained to the time from 8.15 until 9.30, in order to allow those without nine o'clock lectures to catch a little more sleep without missing a meal.

In the Tuck Shop, a variety of doughnuts will now be carried in stock. They will be obtained fresh daily and will include all the types of doughnuts known to epicures of the powdered ring. Already the change has been popular enough to move the assistant-controller of Hart House to compose the following little ditty:

"The Hall Committee no longer says 'Do Not'.

The Board of Stewards agrees to 'Do-Nuts'.

So now the Tuck Shop serves Doughnuts."

It is suggested on good authority that the Tuck Shop service is to be expanded gradually, if popularity warrants. During the autumn, coffee was added to the list of refreshments to be had there, and now doughnuts will also be served. The next step, which may be in the near future, will be to introduce the sale of "hot dogs" in the Tuck Shop.

McGILL TANS TORONTO

Varsity plays lacked co-ordination as often the Blue puck carrier either failed to pass the rubber or waited too long to make his move, resulting in the rush being blocked by the McGill defence.

Scarcely had the bell sounded when Lenahan let drive a shot on the McGill nets that had McHugh beaten but just stopped on the line, from which point the McGill team took the play into the Blue territory and on a clever fast passing play Rollie Lamb scored the first tally of the night on a pass from Morse. Crosby duplicated this feat within a few minutes on a pass from Dickenson. These two rapid-fire goals practically wrote finis to the Varsity squad as they relied in an attempt to stave off further counters and Campbell spent anxious moments in the nets.

Fred Wigle, whose work on the McGill defence smashed Varsity attacks into the ice, scored a smashing goal as he broke away from his blue line with the momentum of an express to split the Varsity defence, shooting the puck waist high past Campbell. The steady, hard-hitting Jean Elie was a constant worry to the Varsity lines as he broke up their attempts to get out of their own defence area and his pass sent Pidcock on his way to score the most spectacular goal of the night.

The forward line of Crutchfield, Lamb and Morse showed signs of wear in the third period as the Varsity squad began worrying the McGill defence and it was Crosby who got his second goal of the night as he eluded his check after accepting the pass from Morse. In vain attempts to gain a single goal Varsity were continually repulsed by the defence pair of Melkjohn and Elie, who did their chores so well the Varsity lines had only three shots on goal which Hollie McHugh handled easily.

McClelland went well in spots and it was the line of Lenahan, Valiquette and Staver who did well while McHugh did some effective covering up. However, the Varsity passing plays failed to click throughout the entire fixture which ultimately spelled the 5-0 and becoming used to one another's playing. However, there's no getting away from the fact that McMaster have a good team and deserved their win. They didn't fool at all, but went out on the floor and played their hardest and best from the starting whistle, with the result that they had a considerable lead by half-time. Perhaps a few more wins like this, and the Big Four teams will realize that McMaster is worthy of being admitted to the Bronze Baby series.

The Varsity team will play its next game Tuesday night at eight o'clock in Hart House against the St. Stephen's Church team. In order to brush up on mistakes and perfect plays, there will be a practice from six to seven-thirty tonight in the O.C.E. gym.

The McMaster team had two very famous girls on it. Betty Taylor, a member of the team, is the Canadian champion hurdler, and was on the Olympic team of 1932 and the British Empire team of 1934. Catherine Miller is another track and field star, specializing in high jumping and hurdling, and was in six events in the Canadian championship meet held in Montreal last summer. The two girls are now studying up in Hamilton, and proving themselves as able to play good basketball, as to scintillate on track and field at home and abroad.

A game has been arranged for the Varsity hockey team with Toronto Ladies this Friday at the Royal Canadian Arena. This means that all who wish to play on the team must turn out to the practice on Wednesday, as there is a great deal to be done.

debadle and the return game next Saturday will find the Blue clad warriors facing an almost unsurmountable task of evening up the count.

Hart House Theatre

The Newcastle Players gave three performances of H. F. Maltby's The Rotters for reasons best known to themselves. While the acting in a few instances compared favourably with several local troupes, seldom has anyone the temerity to present such a pile of rubbish in three acts to a Hart House audience. If there is one kind of play that ages more rapidly than another it is farce, and The Rotters was bowed down by the weight of its years long before it attained its majority in 1936.

If, again, there is one kind of English humour that displeases North Americans, it is heavy-handed satire of the nouveau riches. Has it never occurred to the multitude of English writers who concern themselves with the evils of snobbery that they dwell in glass houses? Luckily there has been a decline of this distasteful attitude, even in the pages of Punch.

The play was directed by A. B. Mainwaring, who also played Charles, a chauffeur of irresistible charm. He was by all odds the most capable player. Olga Gibson, as Mrs. Clugston, had a little reminiscent of Mary Boland, had her moments. Most of the players were badly hampered by attempts to superimpose the defects of vulgar English speech upon ordinary Ontario voices. It is a common enough mistake to imagine that a dropped h here and a prefixed h there can suggest the rich variety of English vulgarism. Seldom has this been better demonstrated.

It is to be hoped that these enterprising players from Newcastle-down-the-Lake will come back in a few years in a play of some merit and with more finished technique.

G.H.R.

The first production in Toronto by the Actors' Colony Theatre will be remembered for acting rather than as a play. "The Show-Off", written by George Kelly, was a flimsy vehicle for Mr. Holden's company. It was the acting of Jane Mallett and John Holden, along with a strong supporting cast that made the presentation a success.

When it was first presented in New York "The Show-Off" was mentioned for the Pulitzer Prize. After seeing it on Saturday night one wonders again just what constitutes the best in American drama. The play is overloaded with stock tricks and gags and at times even the sympathetic audience began to cough.

Frank Hemingway, the director, was fortunate in having at his disposal so much talented and experienced material. The mother of the family was skillfully played by Jane Mallett. Her encounters with John Holden in the role of Aubrey Piper, a latter day Falstaff, were the highlights of the show. Added to this fine work were the interpretations given by such competent performers as H. E. Hitchman, Babs Hitchman and Dick Fonger in minor roles.

The audience's approval augurs well for the group's ambition to form a

and this further dissociating the two courses.

"The best products of Canadian universities are its specialists," commented Dean J. G. Althouse, of the Ontario College of Education. The situation in Canada as far as specialization is concerned differs in two respects from that in American high schools and universities, according to Dean Althouse. First—our high school courses are broader than American ones, comprising a larger number of subjects and containing a core of compulsory ones for entrance into any Canadian university. "American students become specialists at a much earlier age. The Canadian starts with a broader basis." Secondly, undergraduates at the University of Toronto do work that is considered post-graduate in most of the American colleges, especially in the Honour Science courses. These two factors account for our devotion to specialized courses. "There is a definite place for high school teachers with a broader range of information. Nevertheless the graduates coming to us from specialized courses are always more certain of getting a certificate," Dean Althouse concluded.

play has been below form in the last few games, found his eye in this encounter, displaying a pair of very hot hands and netted four baskets to lead the blue onslaught on McMaster's cinder. Peters, the stratospherer centred, netted three field shots and one gift throw. McLaughlin continued his brilliant play of the last few games, passing faultlessly and chalking up four points.

There was not so much scoring in the second half but Varsity still maintained their margin in this respect, as well as in territorial play. The Blues garnered fourteen points in the twenty minutes of ball tossing, while the Hamiltonians' feeble reply was five. Hogg and Peters again shared the spotlight, when the points were being tallied, but the playing of Dougherty and Singer was just as effective. Cooper went through the evening without netting the ball once but he displayed the same aggressive style that has made him the standout guard of the team.

McMaster: Young 4, Fletcher 6, Haist 4, Connor, Lowe 4, Atherton 1, McNeil, Coome.

Let's Go Places

The team of Cagney-O'Brien make their latest appearance in Ceiling Zero. A story which is better suited to their needs than a good many in which they have appeared. For Jimmy Cagney and Patrick O'Brien are definitely one of Hollywood's stock combinations which require a vehicle in which their particular form of buddy-stuff, wisecracking and love-making will be effectively displayed. There's no altering their style to suit the picture.

Ceiling Zero is flying parance for fog everywhere and nowhere a spot to "sit down" in. Modern science has largely overcome this difficulty by the use of two-way radio communication between planes and the ground, but for the sake of this story the transmitting equipment in the air mail fleet of Federal Air Lines has the embarrassing tendency to go dead at critical moments.

Cagney's irrepressible self-confidence and conceited clowning is this time responsible, among other minor calamities, for the death of the third of the trio of flying pals, played by Stuart Erwin, whose good-natured drawl and pleasant complaisance is reminiscent of the Will Rogers manner. But whereas in former films Jimmy redeems himself and is forgiven for everything, in Ceiling Zero he takes his unfortunate self out to a hero's death in the fog. This is a step in the right direction: we now have hopes of seeing Cagney play the louse and squirm off to a louse's death under somebody's heel. Loving a guy for his cheeky effrontery is a tough job.

We wish the orchestral presentation at the Imperial could be jumped up to a four-a-day schedule. It is very disappointing to miss the opening number of the 2.14 show and then realize there will be no repeat of the pit entertainment till 6.45 or some such time. Moreover, that first evening show is a bit early for the satisfactory digestion of one's supper. Cherniavsky has another good half hour's entertainment for you this week, with Harvey Doney showing considerable improvement in his stage manner over last week.

stock company in this city. They have abundant talent and in their next play, "The Wind and The Rain" they will have better material to work with than the "Show-Off". N.C.P.

Toronto Symphony

Viggo Kihl, guest artist with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra at Saturday's concert, received one of the most splendid ovations ever accorded any artist this season, after his playing of Chopin's First Concerto, in E Minor. He was recalled time after time by the enthusiastic audience, delighted again by the amazing clarity and virtuosity of his touch, which made even the first movement interesting. This movement is characterized chiefly by the advanced technique necessary for its rendition, but is too long and too much in one set of keys. The piano enters most effectively in the first and second themes, which are characteristically pianistic, and they were treated by Mr. Kihl with all the charm, delicacy and brilliance they required.

The orchestral part of the program opened with the "Barber of Seville" overture by Rossini. This music is a delightful example of Rossini in his gayest and merriest mood, and the orchestra was eminently satisfying in it. Of the national dances which included music by Brahms, Dale, Moussorgsky, and Dvorak—the barbaric Russian dance by Moussorgsky from the opera "Boris Godunov" and the delightful English dance by Benjamin Dale, were the most outstanding.

Sir Ernest MacMillan's own concert overture completed the program. This is a most interesting orchestral composition, more or less on the conventional lines of the sonata, with particularly outstanding treatment by the string section of the orchestra throughout.

COLOURS FEATURE VENETIAN ART

Lisner Stresses Appreciation of Beauty as Source of Inspiration

HUMANISM EVIOENT

Colours — bright, gorgeous reds, golden yellows, radiant living colours, are what we owe to Venetian art. Mr. Arthur Lisner in his lecture last night at the Art Gallery, emphasized the expression of the actual appreciation of life as each artistic Venetian of the 15th century saw it in his everyday life.

The art of Venice can only be understood when we picture to ourselves the background of its origin. Imagine for a moment beautiful romantic Venice—moonlight over gently sloping hills, gondolas, rippling water, dark mysterious lagoons, golden sunsets, and a touch of the romantic echo of former glory—and you can understand why the Venetian artists had to burst forth with their discoveries of depth and warm vibrant colours, colours pulsing with life, breathing of real life in and around (Continued on Page 4)

McGILL DAILY FROM THE INSIDE

We wandered into the Daily office in the McGill Union Saturday morning. Nice offices too—a half dozen typewriters and telephones and a switchboard all their own 'n everything.

We came across this touching little notice, stuck on the wall in an inconspicuous corner, where reporters could see it, and visitors couldn't. It was taken from the Want Ad section of the Montreal Star. WANTED—Reporter-Editor for small weekly paper. Experienced men only need apply. McGill Daily experience not considered.

The Daily, by the way, is celebrating its 25th birthday this year. It claims to be the smallest daily in Canada with the largest staff. The circulation is 2,700, and the staff numbers over 80. The sports editor told us in confidence, however, that the only time the full staff is around is at the annual banquet at the end of the year. The rest of the time, about a dozen people do 3-4 of the work. It must happen everywhere.

We had a chat with Lloyd Davis, who holds the tobaggan record on the Park Side on Mount Royal. His officially clocked speed was 89 miles an hour, which is plenty fast on anything. His favourite story is about the time he took a chinaman down. When they got back up to the top of the chute

New Party in Quebec Plans Reform Program

Organizer Interviewed; Tells of Plans to Smash Old

LEO BY PAUL GOVIN

By Harold Freeman
Montreal, Feb. 9.—There's a new party in the political warfare in old Quebec. It is composed of eager young men, restrained by the sagacity of a few experienced politicians. It is called L'Action Libérale Nationale, and it is led by Paul Gouin, 37-year-old French-Canadian.

Mr. F. A. Monk, organizer for the District of Montreal, told of the origins and aims of the new party in an interview yesterday. Their aims can easily be summed up: they want to smash the Taschereau regime, a regime which has lasted for 15 years, and which, says Mr. Monk, "Makes Tammany Hall look like a Sunday School picnic."

Against Agent

A threatened disaster to the Medical At-Home of last Friday evening was narrowly averted by the untiring efforts of two members of the dance committee of that body, it was learned last night. Twenty-four hours before the dance a wire was received telling of an automobile accident to Leroy Smith and his band who were booked to play at the annual Medical At-Home in the Royal York Hotel last Friday.

Al Williams and Wilf McIsaac, who received the wire at 7 p.m. Thursday evening left at midnight for Buffalo where after considerable trouble and at a greater expense they engaged the services of one of the most outstanding bands in New York State. They were back in Toronto late the following afternoon with a band which was superior to the original and which enabled the annual dance to achieve its most outstanding success in many years.

There were insistent rumours over the week-end that Smith's band did not play at the dance in the Royal York but the matter was not cleared up till last night when the dance committee which looked after all arrangements for the dance voluntarily made public the circumstances which forced them to import another band from Buffalo. They had intended to make an announcement at the dance but it was found to be nearly impossible. The band which did play made a decided hit with the dancers.

GUIDANCE GROUPS COMMENCE AT VICTORIA

Canon Cody Opens New Series of Discussions on Various Vocations

The Vocational Guidance Groups arranged by the Victoria Alumni Society each year for the benefit of undergraduates, will commence this afternoon, when President Cody will address the opening meeting. At this first meeting, which will be held at 5 o'clock in Room 18, Victoria College, the full course groups will be outlined and all who are interested may sign up for the subjects upon which they desire vocational information.

The groups themselves will get under way a week from today, Tuesday, Feb. 18th. The choice of subjects includes talks from Victoria graduates now established in many professions and businesses, on such vocations as law, teaching, industrial research, the various aspects of finance, advertising, journalism, insurance, the ministry, and many others. There will be but a single meeting for each group, and the time table is being arranged so that no two groups which will attract the interest of the same students will conflict.

All male students of the University are welcome to attend, and those interested are urged to be present at this afternoon's opening meeting, when full details of the groups to be conducted will be explained.

Libraries Keep Banned Books
Hidden for Special

The new duties of inspecting lending libraries for "salacious" literature would certainly make life more interesting for the city police, was the first opinion expressed by Professor Davis of the English Department. These duties constitute Mayor McBride's first step in a city-wide drive against the circulation of literature considered unfit for the public.

It will certainly brighten up their day, Mr. Davis went on, but actually the idea is stupid. What do they know about it? he queried. And why should they object to comparatively harmless books when at every corner, in every news stand, they have such stuff as "Hush" in front of their faces. The Mayor should look to things published in Toronto before starting on outside things, he suggested.

The whole idea does not meet with the approval of Mr. Davis. He does not think that it will have much effect, since those whose lending libraries contain books banned by the censors will certainly not put them on the shelves but keep them well hidden to be brought (Continued on Page 3)

DATE BUREAU TO HOLO FIRST CELEBRATION

Operator to Appear in Person at the Inaugural Dance

One week from today will see the inauguration of the much heralded Date Bureau Parties. Tuesday, February 18 has been set as a definite inauguration for the latest innovation of the new Date Bureau Operator, who has been working overtime making final arrangements for a gala evening.

Every person registered in the Date Bureau files will be telephoned before Thursday evening and asked to attend. Each person will be allowed to come singly, or to bring a partner of their own choice. There will be an equal number of men and women at the party, so that each person will be assured of a partner.

The object of the Date Bureau parties is to overcome the disadvantages of single dates. Instead of being paired off with one particular member of the opposite sex, those attending will be able to dance and become acquainted with a number of people, and so have a chance for variety in acquaintances.

It is expected that there will be an orchestra in attendance, provided that there is adequate support for the party. It will be held in one of the small restaurants in the vicinity of the campus, and every effort will be made to provide a pleasant evening of variety entertainment. The Date Bureau Operator will appear in person for the first time since the origin of the Bureau in the autumn of 1934.

Silberstein Upholds His Theory That Einstein Equation Wrong

Singularity of Silberstein's

Relativity Theory Must be Revamped Since Space not Empty

By Robert Allen

Dr. Ludwig Silberstein, lecturer in mathematical physics whose criticisms suggest the fallacy of Einstein's theory of relativity, yesterday refuted the statement Einstein is reported to have made at Princeton that his conclusion "was based on an error".

Dr. Silberstein claimed that Prof. Einstein was invoking a hair-splitting excuse, in objecting to the little singularities in Dr. Silberstein's solution, when he was quite lenient to Schwartzchild's, used by all relativists.

It is quite possible that reporters have distorted Einstein's statement, Dr. Silberstein thought, "as they certainly have distorted or exaggerated some of mine".

The two savants have been engaging in correspondence on the matter. The dispute resolves itself into this:

Dr. Silberstein charged that Prof. Einstein's complete field equations are correct only in empty space, and that is nowhere, for there is no empty space. He concluded a letter to Prof. Einstein "by saying with sincere regret that your whole 'general relativity' theory must be remodelled".

Einstein maintained that Silberstein's solution of his equations contained a singularity which could not be discounted, making void the denial of the relativity theory.

Dr. Silberstein admitted the singularity, but cited the Schwartzschild solution for one centre, which has a (Continued on Page 4)

BANQUET AND DANCE HELD LAST NIGHT BY PAN-HELLENIC

Over two hundred couples attended the Pan-Hellenic Association dance in the Crystal Ballroom of the Royal York Hotel last night and danced to the music of Karl Mueller and his augmented orchestra. Previous to the dance a banquet was held for all the sororities on the campus.

From nine thirty to after two the sorority sisters and their male guests tripped the light fantastic to the melodious rhythm and listened to the new blues singer in Mueller's band.

WHEEL OF FORTUNE, ROUND IT GOES

"Wanted—Performers for the German Club amateur hour. Prizes offered, $3 cash and a free trip on Eaton's Inter-store Service." Is there some individual roaming about the campus who likes playing jokes on the bulletin board or has the German Club gone a little (—)ier?

Your reporter did a little "snooping" and found, as expected, that it was the latter. Investigating about the campus she came upon members of the executive huddled in a circle emitting strange sounds, heaving deep sighs, making terrible faces. According to the president of the club, but contrary to the belief of the reporter, there was nothing wrong with them. They were just "übersetzend" some English popular songs into German for the next meeting and the amateur hour. And according to the president again, they are a wow! The whole program is a wow, even though Major Bowes is to be represented by a mistress (1) of ceremonies who is a better athletic enthusiast than a German student.

"There is no mystery about the $3," declared the president emphatically. "And the bus ticket has been a cherished possession for the past three months. It will be awarded to the most deserving one," the president said, "and we are still open for more contributors."

Let the audience should not survive the program they will have their strength renewed by something called "liverwurst".

Meds Committee Avert Disaster

Some of the courageous qualities which made Al Williams one of the University's outstanding football players were manifested last Friday when he and Wilf McIsaac, members of the committee of the Medical At-Home made a desperate effort to save the annual dance from failure.

The two men received a wire late Thursday evening informing them of the inability of Leroy Smith to keep his engagement at the At-Home, which was scheduled for the following evening at the Royal York. McIsaac and Williams drove to Buffalo and succeeded in engaging a band of such a quality as to adequately substitute for that of Leroy Smith.

Returning to Toronto late the day of the dance it was decided by the entire body to make an announcement during the dance regarding the identity of the orchestra. There was nothing to gain by announcing the fact before the party as all the advertising was done and no one knew of the change in the schedule and the subsequent efforts of the committee. The party was such a success that it was deemed advisable by the committee to let the matter rest until the following day. The men themselves made the announcement last night. The actions of the men leave no room for criticism. The dance was scheduled. The orchestra had been advertised. What good could be accomplished by disappointing the patrons who were enjoying the dance?

The committee decided to say nothing of the matter until it was over. Lest any rumour of the real situation should start and develop unpleasant tendencies they even informed the officials of the University that all was going as per schedule. It was an unpleasant situation for an undergraduate but under the circumstances they had no alternative.

The party was a success. Their efforts made this possible. What more need be said?

Toronto Course Preferable to McGill

Of the many complaints heard on the campus, the one which perhaps makes its appearance the most often comes from the Faculty of Medicine, or perhaps campaigners for the Faculty. The complaint is to the effect that the heaviness of the course must exclude other forms of activity. This fact has been obvious. Medical students have been conspicuously absent from the Hart House debates and other activities for some time. They are very prominent in sports, however, but the fact does remain that they must exclude many forms of social activities if they wish to ensure themselves of much success in the course.

The answer to this problem is one which is difficult to find. Their course is heavy, but it could in no way be lightened without injury to itself. The hours could be shortened, but that in turn would necessitate lengthening the number of years of the course.

It has been pointed out that McGill has a four year course instead of a five year course such as is given at the University of Toronto. However, there has been nothing to indicate the change has been for the better. Nor has there been anything to indicate that the nature of the course is preferable to the one given at the University of Toronto.

McGill has a four year course instead of a five. However, their students attend the University almost two months per year longer than medical students attend the University of Toronto. All educational experiments indicate that students can reach the saturation point in the matter of studies. There is every reason to believe that a seven month course for five years would be more beneficial than a nine month course for four years. It is very doubtful if the McGill students gain in any way from increasing the yearly time of attendance and decreasing the number of years of the course. Aside from the advantage the shorter term offers for concentrated study, it also offers the medical students an opportunity to earn some money during the summer holidays. A student who has spent nine months at college would feel little like stepping into a job for the additional three months before returning to college. The seven month course would be an advantage in this regard.

In the matter of fees the University of Toronto students fare very well when compared to the McGill students. The Montreal students pay approximately $425.00 per year in fees. In four years this amounts to $1,700.00. The fees for the five years at the University of Toronto are approximately $275.00 per year, which at the end of five years amounts to $1,375.00, a difference of about $200.00, in favour of the Toronto students. These figures do not indicate any particular advantage for the four year course at McGill as compared to the five year course at Toronto.

However, it does seem that they are excluded from many educational activities owing to the demands the course makes on their time and any relief which this situation could be given without injuring the course itself would be beneficial to the students.

Early to College Makes You--What?

An eighteen or nineteen year old freshman, if he goes to a graduate school, may never complete his formal education until he is twenty-seven, old enough to be vice-president of a First National Bank. Dean Leighton, after proving beyond all argument that seventeen year olds do quite as well as their elders in the freshman class, suggests that the age level of graduates from preparatory schools, especially private schools, be lowered.

This, of course, is much the most logical solution to the age problem. But it will take more than perfect logic to convince the private schools to give up their boys a year earlier; they have a vested interest, backed by all the weight of tradition, in that seventeenth year, and will not quickly give it up.

If the schools continue to graduate their boys at 18 and 19, the pressure on the college will be great to make a three year college course available to larger and larger numbers. Already the "progressive" universities, under the leadership of Chicago, have made it easier for students to cut the length of their courses, even in some cases to two years. If Harvard cannot induce or cajole the schools to send their men here at an earlier age, she will be forced gradually to make a shorter course easier for future graduate scholars.

This alternative between getting freshmen at an earlier age, and devising a three year course, boils down to a choice between a year at a school and a year at college around the age of seventeen. Which of the two is preferable? Dean Leighton assumes, and proves negatively, that the year at college is preferable at seventeen. If so, it is extremely important that during the next few years Harvard should break down the resistance of the schools, and progressively lower the age level of their graduates. This solution seems far better than cutting the length and fullness of the college course.

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

I take pleasure in thanking you for publishing my letter in the editorial page (issue of the 4th of this month). Quite an honour!

But I wish to correct an error which was made quite unintentionally I am sure.

According to your paper I would be a Montreal University law student, graduating this year, but in reality I am a Laval University (Quebec City, capital of Quebec Province) law student who will graduate in 1938.

Will you please make this correction in your paper in order to do justice to both Montreal U. and Laval U.

Thanking you in advance, I am

Yours sincerely,

Hollywood—

The horror film of this series of French movies is over and we gratefully thank whatever gods there be. We do not say that the film did not have its good points; it was beautifully directed and acted and cast and probably the most horrible and impossible rubbish ever to see a projection room.

Les Mysteres de Paris is a classic by Eugene Sue in a rampant romanticist style. Why it was not left as a novel, unless to show young students just how impossible that style at its worst can be, we could not ascertain. Certainly, the best French actresses, and actors were included in the cast, without whom we might have mistaken the production for farce or Grand Guignol. With all due deference to Madeleine Ozeray, we dislike anemic blondes and above all the emaciated righteous type that was Fleur-de-Marie. She seemed to be saying "Circumstances are against me but still I retain my purity and shed little rays of sunshine among these poor dear souls, among whom I am forced to live. I show filles de joie the folly of their ways and they appreciate my thoughtfulness." After her sweetness melts one villain's heart and she is saved from vitriol, she is also saved from drowning and turns out, oh surprise! surprise! to be a long lost princess.

There is plenty of action but the transitions were just too, too, utterly impossible to suit our matter-of-fact mind. The nightmarish underworld types, Maitre d'Ecole, and La Chutee, were first cousins to Ivasimodo and (Continued on Page 4)

LAST CHANCE FOR SR. BLUES AGAINST TIGERS TO-NIGHT

VARSITY WINDS UP O.H.A. SCHEDULE TACKLING BENGALS FOR INITIAL WIN

High-Powered Hamiltonians Promise Blues a Neat Hockey Tussle

"CAN THE BLUES WIN?"

The hard hitting, fast travelling Hamilton Tigers pay their last visit of the Senior O.H.A. tonight when they engage the lowly Varsity senior sextet in a scheduled fixture at Varsity Arena. The winless Blue clad hockeyists will have a gargantuan task before them as the Bengals have always been able to cope with the offensive drives of the Varsity squad, by token of their high powered attack.

The scoring records of the O.H.A. senior group show Mackie and Apps still in the top flight of goal getters and these lads have always shown up well in Varsity-Hamilton tilt. However, the last game of the local senior season should produce better hockey from the Blue puckchasers, whose goal getting activities of late have been few and far between. The senior O.H.A. trail has been only a series of hard fought tussles for the Varsity squad who either rose to heights for several periods or failed to show any real form by floundering helplessly before the enemy attacks. With but a single point to show for their hockey campaign the Blues should have enjoyed a few more points in the current season and tonight the Blues will extend themselves to the limit in an effort to finish the season with a better average. The question is, Can the Blues win? As records stand they have a chance, but Steve Brodie took a chance and look what happened to him.

HOCKEY VICTORY GOES TO WYCLIFFE

Hard-Fought Game in Bitter
Weather Leaves Knox
Down 3-2

Last night on the open cushion at Varsity Stadium, Knox College went down to a 3-2 defeat at the hands of Wycliffe, which, incidentally, is the high spot of the latter's career, this season at least. The game was hard-fought but the players were handicapped by the extreme cold and hard ice. Several players suffered frost-bitten ears. Warren started the scoring after the first four minutes with a tally for Knox. Four minutes later Mallion added another. Campbell took a penalty, and a little later Cardy scored for Wycliffe. The period ended with Knox leading 2-1.

The second half saw a little better hockey, but the puck went from one end to the other as each side made a rush. About half way through Kibblewhite raised one to the corner, and right after Fairweather banged in the winning goal during a scramble around the Knox net. Both Kibblewhite and Fairweather

VICTORIA HOCKEYISTS DOWN ST. HILDA'S 2-0

Ruth Leavens, Gladys Wagg
Score, as Saints Suffer First Defeat

St. Hilda's hockeyists suffered their first defeat of the season when Vic Seniors scored a shutout game against them, 2-0, last night on the Vic hockey cushion. The first period was not particularly interesting for either the players or the spectators, and no goals were scored until Ruth Leavens of Vic pushed the rubber into the twine at the end of the second period. Gladys Wagg, who played a sterling game all through, followed her teammate's example, and scored at the opening of the third period. After that both teams were held scoreless, although the Saints tried hard to break into the score-sheet. Elaine Knight was outstanding for them and Maisie Cowan made some sensational saves as the Vic goalie.

Vic Seniors: Maisie Cowan, Gladys Wagg, Joy Brownlee, Mildred McGinnis, Sarah Merrick, Fern Kennedy, Elva Bobier, Ruth Leavens, Grace Workman, Marguerite McArthur.
St. Hilda's: Elaine Knight, Desiree Seale, Marg McDonald, Edith Ardagh, Isobel Wallbridge, Sheila Bull, Gladys Carvolth, Betty Kirk, Shirley Fleming.

Durnan Cup Meet

The first Durnan Cup meet takes place in the Hart House pool at five o'clock this afternoon. Two events will be run off, the 50 and 100 yard free style races. A large number of swimmers are expected to compete today—these are the races which present the liveliest competition in Varsity swimming circles.

There will be two more meets this week, one Thursday afternoon and one Saturday noon.

Knox: Weir, Doug Campbell, Don Campbell, Macdonald, Warren, Graham, Mallion.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George Vair

Tomorrow night at 8 o'clock the annual senior assault gets under way when the preliminaries will be run off with the finals scheduled for Thursday night. This year's meet bids fair to be one of the best on record and it is more than probable that the Davidson Cup now held by Meds will change hands. After glancing over the entry lists this department picks S.P.S. to come out on top. The engineers have seven good men and true entered in the wrestling division while Freddy Smith, Millson and Piggott, also from the little red schoolhouse, should top their weights in the boxing bouts. The fencers, well as ever we are in the dark as to who is who in the foils game.

Mel Glionna is still appearing regularly in the boxing room and if you want a few pointers on the game just drop in for a round or so. Glionna is the iron man of the hempen square, taking on opponents as fast as they climb through the ropes. "Frankie" Brown even went a round with him last night. Split decision!

Of late professional boxing around Toronto has brought nothing but nightmares to local promoters but we predict that Jack Dempsey's heavyweight elimination tournament, scheduled for Feb. 19th at Maple Leaf Gardens, will be a big success. In other words they should pack 'em in. There are well over thirty bouts to be run off and a winner selected the same night. The heavies are always crowd pleasers since when they hit the opposition usually hits the floor and how Mr. Fan loves the blood and thunder style. The students will have a representative to yell for since a law student from Montreal is entered and according to reports he can both give and take. Better keep next Wednesday open, boys.

A slip of the pencil; pardon us, two slips, cost Mac McCutcheon's intermediates the game out at West End last Saturday night. When the final whistle went the two scoreboards read 25-all but a check of the official cards gave the victory to West End 25-24. A quick check up revealed that a foul sunk by Cooper had not been counted but the official refused to recognize what wasn't in black and white. A tough break for the Blues since they were particularly keen on trouncing the league leaders on their own floor. At half time they led by three points, increased it to six and then the winners scored ten straight points without incurring one foul throughout, despite the fact that the seconds had possession a number of times while the homesters were on the offensive. Either the official closed his eyes or the Y men are perfect defensively.

Varsity's intermediate volleyball team are out to defend their provincial honours won last season. The semi-finals are scheduled for the last of February at Central Y.M.C.A. while it is expected that the finals will be played in Hart House early in March. The team has not been chosen so here is a chance for all you star "spikers" on inter-faculty squads to bring honour to the family name by seeing Mr. MacCutcheon, who is handling the team. How about retaining that provincial championship? The cupboards in Hart House aren't nearly full.

Some people have the idea that Varsity's hockey clubs will default their remaining games since they are not sitting on top of their respective leagues. A coach of a certain junior team thought so but he has different ideas after calling the person who controls such things. With the University all athletics are definitely amateur and sport is played for sport's sake and not for what you get out of it. If this spirit prevailed off the campus sport would benefit materially.

Congratulations to Lew Hayman, popular rugby coach, who has been appointed coach of the Argo senior football club for the next two seasons. Argos plan a strictly all-Canadian club for next season.

With pitcher Cam Cowan displaying a bewildering change of pace, mixing up steamers and suckers in confusing style, Jr. Meds scored a brilliant 9-0 win over Jr. S.P.S. in Hart House yesterday afternoon.

The Medicals went on a scoring rampage in the first inning, sending five men across the plate, and again in the sixth and last when they counted four times. The Engineers put a man on third more than once but never got him home. The Doctors all played a nice game in the field.

Jr. Meds: King, Jaffe, Horenbad, Milne, Wheaton, Moriarty, Philpott, Fisher, Gibson, Robinson.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Vic Seniors handed St. Hilda's their first defeat when they held the Saints scoreless in their encounter last night on the Vic hockey cushion. The Vic girls were evidently out to redeem themselves for their loss to U.C. last week. Gladys Wagg was out of the infirmary, and proved that she is an invaluable player to the team, scoring the second and final goal of the evening. As usual Elaine Knight was outstanding for the Saints.

All girls who want to play on the Varsity hockey team simply must turn out to the practice tomorrow in Varsity Arena. The turnout for the last few weeks has been very disappointing, and Normie McClelland would like to see a big crowd out. The team must be picked tomorrow, since the game with Toronto Ladies is this Friday night. All the plays must be worked out, uniforms given out, and eligibility slips signed as soon as possible, so if you want to make the team be out on the ice sharp at one o'clock tomorrow.

McMaster are planning to give Varsity some real opposition in the inter-collegiate swimming meet in Hamilton on February 27. They have some pretty good swimmers, and are entering Helen Hardy and Eileen Jamieson in the free style and back, and Janet Ward in the breaststroke. The Varsity team hasn't been chosen yet, but we expect that Phil Haslem, Midge Murphy, Kay Brown and Vi Ord will be members of it. The meet is being held in the Municipal pool, where the British Empire swimmers did their stuff.

There will be a meeting of the Basketball Club executive and all who are working for the Bronze Baby tournament in Room 82, U.C., at 5 o'clock today. A full attendance is requested.

Don't forget about the basketball game between Varsity and St. Stephen's Church at eight o'clock tonight in Hart House. The girls are out to play better basketball than they did last Friday, and with Betty Jenkinson on the guard line tonight, should break through early and play more steadily throughout the whole game.

The general consensus of opinion is that the police who patrol beats know very little about literature and one might even "confiscate the Bible if he had never heard of it before". Professor Will of the French Department, has expressed this opinion in the past, adding an anecdote of his own about a friend of his who owned a book shop. A policeman on entering picked up a French classic and remarked, "Hot stuff! Can't sell this, you know!"

Ringside Chatter

By J. L. T.

Johnnie Millson, IV S.P.S., is Varsity's No. 1 boxer. He holds Varsity's only intercollegiate title in the mitt-game and hasn't lost a bout in open competition in two years, except one last fall to the great Mel Glionna, and then he was fighting above his weight class.

Johnnie stands 5' 7" in his sock feet and his fighting weight is 118 lbs. His prowess in the ring may best be described by telling how he stood up to Glionna and how he took the decision from a ranking 130 lb. opponent down at the Maple Leaf Gardens last fall.

Johnnie hails from the town of Orono but didn't do any boxing until he came to Varsity. He won the junior assault a year ago and defeated opponents from Syracuse and Cornell, knocked off the senior inter-faculty and climaxed it with an intercollegiate crown, which he will retain this year barring the biggest upset in sportsdom since the Baer-Braddock fight.

He will be seen in action in Hart House Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week in the senior inter-faculty assault.

NEW PARTY IN QUEBEC
PLANS REFORM PROGRAM

united by the common desire to smash the old system; six of the 12 still remain, the nucleus of the new party. In the recent provincial elections they joined forces in a temporary union with the Conservatives to avoid three-cornered fights, and in the briefest of campaigns they presented their platform to the electorate.

It is a comprehensive program, constructive as well as destructive and covering the fields of reform in agriculture, industry, finance, and politics. The main object is to break the hold of the industrialists, and raise the condition of the common people; and the main weapon is education. The party wants, says its leaders, to raise the living standards of the French-Canadian habitants, not that they may compete with the English, but that they might co-operate better for the welfare and advancement of Canada.

With no money, no background of tradition, and little newspaper support, the new party threw its challenge to the Taschereau regime. Whatever the government thought of them, there could be no doubt of the approval of the people. In one of the greatest surprise landings in Quebec political history, 42 seats went to the new party while their rivals gleaned 47 where for many years they had been used to 70 or 80. After a brief campaign, the new party had become the most formidable opposition ever faced by the present government in Quebec.

What about the future? Mr. Monk claims that it is very bright. Others in the party predict that when parliament meets, a few more wavering government members will join the new party, giving them control. Mr. Monk, with American Federation of Musicians and up to this time has had a reputation as a reliable booking agent for Canadian theatres and night clubs.

Last January 14, the agent arranged with the Medical Society to bring Leroy Smith to Toronto for the one night stand. He produced the contract with Smith's signature which the Medicos signed, paying $100 down.

Last Thursday night, 24 hours before the dance, the agent wired that Smith's band had met with an automobile accident east of Buffalo and would not be able to play.

Several members of the dance committee drove to Buffalo immediately but were unable to contact either the orchestra agent or Maestro Smith. They heard a famous coloured band playing at the Vendome Club and were able to arrange for the orchestra from the club to come to Toronto for the medical party.

A considerably larger price had to be paid for its services than Smith supposedly asked for through his agent in Buffalo.

VENETIAN ART

The Venetians were not interested in interpreting Latin or theological literature, but the actual enjoyment of real life. Here for the first time the artist was really free and natural, restoring the body as an expression of sense with the revival of painting not relating to sculpture or architecture in any way.

Venetian art was a manifestation of Greek sculpture in glowing colours, and when they made the great discovery of applying their glowing colours with a full brush to gain magnificent results we can fully understand the tremendous strides which the Venetians made toward realistic art.

greater singularity, but is used by all relativists. He wrote to Einstein: "If we apply to two stars (his solution) the same leniency as you applied to a single star (Schwartzschild's solution), we must admit my solution and confess that your field equations misrepresent facts of experience."

Silberstein is awaiting the reply of Einstein.

Meanwhile he is writing the book "Discrete Spacetime", after having delivered five lectures on the subject at the University of Toronto recently. He explained that discrete is the antithesis of continuous. Dr. Silberstein is attempting to substitute discrete manifolds for the ancient conceptions of continuous space and continuous time. This notion is applicable to the atom, which everyday physics has failed to explain.

Hans Plisande and have no equals in English literature.

The film was probably an education to those students reading Hugo and early nineteenth century novels. The rest of us rejoice that it is over, and that next week will bring us Stradivarius, another of the musical films that the French studios do so well.

D.H.C.

Loew's—

In other hands, Loew's current feature, "Whipsaw", might be just a very average, and a slightly boring little melodrama. Because it has the merit of Myrna Loy's charm, Spencer Tracy's personality and the quality of not taking itself seriously for an instant, it becomes a picture which is as entertaining as it is unimportant and unpretentious. The story is obviously remarkable in no way, another G-man picture, the without the usual bloodshed this time. It deals with pearl thieves and none of the situations will cause the audience any great amount of suspense.

But because the picture is in the capable hands of Miss Loy back after a too-prolonged absence, and of Spencer Tracy, who is probably the most natural actor on the screen, and because both of these actors have a facility of making the dullest of dialogue sound bright and amusing, "Whipsaw" has entertainment value. The picture, by the way, does not deal with lumber mills, "whipsaw" being a slang expression which has long since passed out of use. Harvey Stephens, suaveest of the younger movie menaces, and John Qualen, in an especially good bit, are the only important supporting players. Qualen is now playing Papa Dionne in Fox's "Country Doctor" but in "Whipsaw", he only becomes the proud father of twins. The lady behind us guffawed loudly at this point and thought the whole picture was too delightful and Miss Loy very sweet.

She also thought the Our Gang Comedy was "darling". If you like precocious youngsters, maybe you will also. Personally, the spectacle of three comely misses of about three, all dancing the hula, left us cold. There is, however, an entertaining featurette, "West Point of the South". The lady wasn't too enthusiastic about it, however, so maybe it won't appeal to you.

DR. CODY CRITICIZES UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE

NOTE OF SOLEMNITY REIGNS AT OPENING OF PARLIAMENT

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Ottawa: Premier King declared that Canada's refusal to back sanctions recently averted war in Europe, in an address in the Commons.

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany: Canada lost to England in an Olympic hockey game yesterday by a score of 2-1. It was the first defeat for Canada in sixteen years.

London, Ont.: Mr. Justice McTague yesterday dismissed the case against Henry Walker of St. Thomas of demanding money from Premier Hepburn. Two other cases against him will go to the Ontario Supreme Court jury.

Toronto: Dr. Frederick Zeidler, defense expert in the O'Donnell case, flatly contradicted evidence of the prosecution's experts in yesterday's session.

DUNCAN DISCUSSES WELDING PROCESSES

Describes Part Played in Industry by Oxy-Acetylene Flame

LECTURE ILLUSTRATED

The methods and uses of welding was the subject of an address by Mr. W. A. Duncan of the Dominion Oxygen Co., to a large audience of Engineers yesterday afternoon. First explaining the process of welding, he stated that the most useful flame for welding is the oxy-acetylene, which is made by burning a mixture of oxygen and acetylene gases. This flame is also used for cutting metals. In this case the flame itself does not cut, but is used to bring the temperature of the metal to the desired high degree. Then an auxiliary stream of oxygen forced against the hot metal causes such rapid oxidation that the metal breaks apart. Many machines have been devised to use this method of cutting, and they range in size from small table models that reproduce perfectly intricate patterns to large machines that split huge steel beams lengthwise.

"Most people don't realize how much and how widely welding is used," said Mr. Duncan, giving as an example the

DRAGOONS IN ATTENDANCE

Vote of Sympathy for Members of Royal Family is Passed

Marked by the absence of customary splendour, due to the death of the late king, the Nineteenth Legislature of Ontario commenced its second session yesterday.

The important features of the afternoon were the arrival of Lieut. Governor Bruce, the speech from the throne, a resolution of sympathy to the royal family, and the first reading of an act respecting the taxing of incomes.

With a detachment of Dragoons drawn up to greet the Hon. Herbert A. Bruce, the members assembled in the house sharply at 2:45 p.m. In respect for the royal mourning the members wore dark suits and black ties. The Speaker's gallery also lacked the usual colourful evening gowns. The only signs

TRINITY AND VICTORIA TO DEBATE TONIGHT

Tonight Trinity College and Victoria College will hold a joint debate in Alumni Hall of the latter college. The problem of democracy will be debated with the motion reading "That this House continues to believe in the democratic form of government."

G. A. Fallis of Victoria College and Mariel Robertson of St. Hilda's will speak for the affirmative and W. N. Turner of Trinity and Jessie Storrie of Victoria, speaking for the negative.

Undergraduates will speak from the floor in the customary parliamentary style.

Poster Competition

Contestants in the prize poster competition for "The Inspector General" are reminded that since the winning poster will be reproduced by hand they should aim at a simple design in not more than three colours. The winner, who receives the five dollar prize offered by the University Drama Committee, will be given the opportunity, if he so wishes, of earning more by making a certain number of copies of his poster for publicity purposes.

BRADSHAW FLAYS LONG TERM LOANS

Increasing Debt Structure Tamed Serious Menace to Municipalities

AT COMMERCE CLUB

"The municipal debt of Canada has reached the total of $1,290 million or 22 per cent of the domestic debt," stated Thos. Bradshaw, in an address on Municipal Finance to the Commerce Club at Hart House last night. While the increasing debt structure involved a serious menace, the speaker indicated some hope for the future through the new Ontario Municipal Finance Act.

During the last nine years in Ontario the municipal debt has increased by 18 per cent, while total assessment has increased only 11 per cent, and population 13 per cent. "You may well ask," he said, "how long we can go on at this pace." The difficulties are increased by the fact that there are 940 units in Ontario capable of establishing debts.

Mr. Bradshaw enumerated some of the provisions of the Ontario Municipal Act which would improve the future debt structure. Municipalities would be required to submit their proposals for a bond issue to a Board which would inquire into the nature of the construction work to be done. This Board would have to pass on the detailed plans and have them approved by a competent authority. The present debt obligations of the municipality and the effect of the increased burden would also be examined.

ST. MIKE'S TO HOLD ANNUAL ARTS BANQUET

St. Michael's College is to hold its 26th annual Arts Banquet in the college dining room this coming Thursday, February 13, 7 p.m. These affairs have been among the college highlights in the past, and the executive board promises that this present banquet will be the most novel and interesting of them all. The ticket sale has been the largest of any year so far.

The college orchestra and glee club will be present and there will be several brief speeches, by prominent guest speakers. Among these are Professor E. H. Urwick of the department of Economics at the University of Toronto and M. Jacques Maritain, world famous philosopher, who is now lecturing at the Medieval Institute of St. Michael's College. Prominent men about the campus are to be guests at the banquet.

PETITION IGNORED AT DENTAL COLLEGE

Time-Tables will not be Altered this Year, Says Acting Dean, Dr. Mason

STILL BEFORE FACULTY

The changes in time-tables for which students at the Dental College have asked will not be granted this year, Dr. A. D. A. Mason told The Varsity last night. It is also extremely doubtful if changes will be made at any future date. It was learned from a reliable source, however, that commencing in the very near future, classes will end at five p.m. instead of five-thirty as now.

The petition of the students is still before the Faculty for consideration, but any action which may be taken by that body will not go into effect before next year, Dr. Mason intimated. "The time-tables for the rest of this year are drawn up and will not be altered," he said. He expressed doubt as to the possibility of lessening the school hours at any time in the future.

W. M. Twible, president of the Cabinet of the Students' Parliament, was not aware that any decision had

PRESS CLUB MEETING SCHEDULED FOR TONIGHT

Refreshments and informal discussion under the leadership of "Shark Hewitt," writer for the Northern Miner, will make up the agenda when the members of the men's Press Club gather around the fireplace at 724 Spadina Avenue this evening.

Hewitt, who will speak briefly and conduct the discussion, is well known in financial circles for his wide knowledge of Canadian conditions, and will discuss these conditions and their relation to newspaper work. All members of the Press Club are expected to attend this, the first informal round-table discussion and stag social of the year.

SHORT STORY CONTEST SPONSORED BY WOMEN

The privilege of submitting a short story to the "Short Story Contest" sponsored by the Women's Press Club, is granted to any female member of the undergraduate body. However, the usual participants in this annual contest are the club members themselves as one of the aims of the club is to give the members practice in writing. The chance of winning a prize is also an additional stimulus.

For this contest, the topics have not been specified, but it is expected that many of the stories will deal with campus life. Two well-known writers will act as judges for this contest, and one of them this year is Mrs. Norma Phillips Muir. All stories must be in by the next meeting of the Press Club which is on February 18, in order to be eligible for a prize.

VICTORIA AT-HOME ADDS FLOOR SHOW

Guest Stars from Other Colleges to Aid in Jolliffe's Revue

TICKET SALES HEAVY

St. Valentine's Day and the Victoria College At-Home coincide once again this year to ensure the folks on the north-east sector of Queen's Park a fitting combination of atmosphere and entertainment for their annual formal dance, this Friday evening at Hart House.

In an interview with Dick Jolliffe, Social Director of the V.C.U., The Varsity yesterday learned that the chief aim of this year's committee will be to maintain the At-Home at its long established high level, without attempting to introduce any new or sensational features. The ticket lists posted in the College Hall already indicate the usual heavy demands for reservations from those who have come to count on the Vic At-Home as an annual event of particular and dependable enjoyment.

New to the At-Home tradition, however, will be the presentation of a floor show, between the two supper intermissions. Dick Jolliffe, who is himself arranging the floor entertainment, hints that the show will strike a novel interfacuity note with the importation of "guest stars" of campus-wide acclaim from at least two other colleges or departments in the University.

Stan St. John will once more preside over the orchestral activities in person, directing his full complement of dance musicians in the fancifully decorated Hart House gymnasium.

CANADA'S FUTURE BRIGHT

Stresses Import of Arts Course in Instilling a Sense of Values

One of the greatest evils of modern life is universal suffrage, was the opinion of Dr. H. J. Cody, speaking to the organization meeting of the Vocational Guidance groups at Victoria College yesterday.

Dr. Cody said that although he realized he might be termed "old fashioned" for such a statement, and although he realized it was one of the necessary disadvantages of a democracy, it was unfortunate that merely because a person is over twenty-one years of age he should have a part in solving the most serious problems which face a country.

He stressed the importance of university men taking active part in the governing of this country. "You must not just look on, you must vote, and if necessary take office," were his words in part.

Reckless Drivers Need Severe Penalties

No problem is more acute, or more vexing in modern life than that of highway casualties. People no longer die by plague and famine but the number of lives lost through the carelessness of the average human being is a disgrace to a civilized country.

As has been pointed out it is not the criminally reckless, drunken or wilfully negligent driver who is the greatest danger to highway safety. It is relatively easy to legislate against him. The great problem is presented by the thousands of so-called good drivers, who qualify highly in driving tests but who are selfishly inconsiderate of others.

In this group are to be found most of the hit-and-run drivers. When an accident occurs they are terrified by the result of their own carelessness and their first impulse is flight. A horrible example is furnished by a recent fatality on the Belleville highway. A young man was struck by a passing car and due to the loss of blood caused by lying unattended on the roadside for hours in wintry weather, died soon after being found. That hit-and-run driver is guilty not of manslaughter but of murder. If he had had the courage to try to make amends for his crime by giving aid to his victim the man would probably have lived.

Motorists have frequently been accused and convicted of manslaughter in cases in which they were not entirely at fault. Perhaps a little more leniency shown to the man who is honest about his mistakes and greater severity to the hit-and-run driver would do something to eliminate the evil. If failure to stop after an accident were considered attempted murder, hit-and-run fatalities might be greatly reduced.

Public Operations Not An Advantage

We are pleased to notice that our Medical Faculty has expressed its disapproval of the innovation which is being considered at Queen's University of permitting students of all faculties to observe surgical operations. The purpose, as the Queen's people see it, is "the stimulation of greater appreciation of the operative science of medicine."

The information is said to come from an authoritative source, but it is difficult to credit any body of intelligent men with believing in the educational value of such a measure. Public operations appear to us in the same category as public hangings. The latter might even be defended on the ground of their educational value.

A major operation would have as much significance for a non-medically minded person as an essay in Hottentot. We have no doubt that a great many students would avail themselves of the opportunity out of mere curiosity, but imagine the feelings of the patient who knows he is about to become exhibit number one. The thought is revolting in the extreme.

Moreover, quite apart from its desirability, the idea is highly impracticable if an unlimited number of students is to be admitted. A special amphitheatre would have to be constructed to accommodate the audience. Nor do we imagine that a large audience would have a particularly calming effect on the nerves of the surgeon about to perform a delicate operation. A curiosity seeking crowd is never remarkable for its quietness and attentiveness. We hope that the whole thing is merely a rumour, or else that, if it is really being seriously considered, general opinion will vote it down.

Censorship of Books Must be Intelligent

The question of censorship is always with us. Periodically, a respectable community gets uneasy about the type of books its younger members are reading, and raises cries of "Filth! Obscenity! Protect our children!" Here in Toronto it seems that we are in for another attack of this peculiar kind of moral stomach-ache—this time a more serious one than usual. Mayor McBride, egged on by various public welfare bodies, has ordained a city-wide drive on public rental libraries, starting Monday. Every policeman in Toronto is to have the power to inspect the books on the shelves of two-and-three cent day libraries on his beat, and should he find thereon any books which he deems to be "obscene", it is his duty to bring the offender to court through the public morality department. How is the policeman to tell whether a book is obscene? Well, it is probable that he will be provided with a nice little manual, a sort of "Child's Guide to Pornography", containing fool-proof rules for the detection of dirt.

Personally, we haven't any objection to a little healthy obscenity. Almost every vital book—even the Bible itself—contains phrases which would surely bring the blush of modesty to the cheek of any sensitive policeman. What is popularly known as "obscenity" is part of life—it cannot be overlooked by even the most spiritual of mortals. If any author refers to it, for an artistic purpose, in order to lend vitality and reality to his work, he is within his rights in so doing. Immorality is quite another thing. The subtle twisting of values—the obsession and preoccupation—the glorification of the rotten and degrading—the dirt for dirt's sake, without humour or intelligence—the endless repetition of phrases and words merely because of their association, that is not only dangerous and insidious, but also extremely boring. Such a book as Joseph Hergesheimer's "The Party Dress", though it contains hardly a scene or phrase that might be regarded as obscene in the popular sense, is immoral in tone, and falling into the hands of an adolescent would be evil in its influence. Ernest Hemingway's "Farewell to Arms" on the other hand, is full of dirty words, but it is not necessarily immoral.

But by far the most serious aspect of the question lies in the selection of the police force as book-critics. Are the tastes of the average policeman to be the criterion of literature? Are all our books to be chosen on the basis of suitability for 15- and 16-year-old minds? The answer to these questions appears to be "Yes" from Monday on; and Toronto, the refined and bloodless Athens of Canada, will retain her literary purity intact. The only trouble is that all the Morley Callaghans will have to move to the States, to keep her that way.

Miss Macphail Canadian Envoy

With the wars—present, past, and future—occupying current headlines, the subject of the Austin Open Forum's first lecturer is of timely interest. In lecturing on the topic, "Should the American Continent Keep Out of European War?" Miss Agnes Macphail will undoubtedly bring in the Canadian attitude, at this time reported to be fairly equally divided. And the attitude of Canada is no small item in the consideration of the future security of the United States.

Being the only woman member of the Canadian House of Commons, Miss Macphail has gained fame as a speaker of dynamic personality and mental alertness. She has represented her district continuously in Parliament for more than a dozen years.

Dr. W. E. Gettys, president of the forum, has invited University students to attend and take part in the general discussion that will follow Miss Macphail's lecture. That this and future Austin Open Forum meetings will be a success depends largely upon the interest of the public in the individual speakers and the subjects under discussion. In this instance, the forum has both—with timeliness and importance setting the talk apart as one of paramount interest.

Government, economics, and journalism students will learn a good deal from Miss Macphail.

Yorker's note. The rats in the building at 69 St. George St., as you will recall, are being educated, but contrary to our earlier note on this subject, it is the rats and not the students who are in a maze. It seems that's the way these rats make their living, dodging about in curvilinear passages to test the intelligence of their kind. The other day one little rodent strayed over to Hart House during his afternoon off to have a look at the latest Esquire, but wandered into The Varsity office by mistake, where he was cornered by Hal Taylor, this department's demon interviewer.

Interview with a highly educated rat—
The Varsity: Hello.

The Rat: Hello.

The Varsity: What subjects are you taking in your particular field?

The Rat: I never get a chance to get in a field. I run a bunch of mazes all day. I'm enrolled in vivisection in Meds, but they sent me over to Psychology 2a because I've got a nice pair of legs.

The Varsity: How do you find your work this year?

The Rat: Oh I just run in this little hole where the cheese is and there it is.

The Varsity: I understand that you are a pretty good maze runner.

The Rat: I'm not bad. I hold the course record for the first year pass maze, and I can still get around the third year runs in about 10 seconds flat.

The Varsity: Are any of your brothers and sisters psychological sprinters like yourself?

The Rat: No, but I've got a cousin Minnie in Hollywood doing a picture, and three brothers who all went to pieces at the Banting Institute. There is one other brother whom we simply never talk about. He's the black sheep of the family. He was caught by the Humane Society swiping cheese out of a mouse trap, the dirty rat.

The Varsity: Do they treat you rats well around the psychology labs?

Hart House Theatre

Sinclair Lewis focused the public spotlight on a peculiar American phenomena, the money-loving capitalist slave driver, when he wrote Babbitt. It is only natural to suspect that Babbitt eventually acquired a wife and family, and this granted, to speculate as to the nature of his son and heir. Babbitt's Boy, by Glenn Hughes, very entertainingly suggests that the heir to capitalist millions was sent off to college and returned home a socialist and an intellectual.

Under the direction of Arthur Jessup this one-act play was given an exceedingly satisfactory production in Hart House Theatre on Monday afternoon. Physically speaking, there are two types of Babbitt—the short, portly and complacent individual, and the slim, aggressive go-getter. Maurice McKuhan, of necessity portraying the latter variety, gave the part the high-tensioned, staccato performance called for, Merdo McKinnon as the son, paraded the high-brow manner with fine boredom, but also managed to impart an idea that perhaps Babbitt's boy would find a medium between the two extremes of his home and college life, and achieve a broader view of things than that of his father.

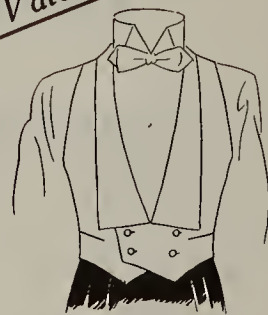

One of the better one-acts yet produced, although weakened by a certain amount of line-bungling.

ROARING TIGERS VICTORS OVER GAME SENIOR BLUES

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

The Varsity team certainly redeemed themselves last night when they defeated the St. Stephen's Church team 39-9. Even so, the play was very sloppy most of the time, and Phil Griffiths and Marion Henderson, the referees, had to blow their whistles frequently. The St. Stephen's girls were baffled at first by the size of the Hart House floor, but became accustomed to it by the second half. They looked very smart in their black shorts and red blouses.

Incidentally their team is tops right now in the Church league, and this was the first game they have lost. So Varsity should feel a bit encouraged by their win.

The tickets for the big intercollegiate series have now been distributed, so rally round and sell or buy as many as you can. The Bronze Baby comes here but once in four years, and the reputation of the university rests upon its success, so let's put it over in a big way.

The U.C. hockey team had a field day yesterday when they trounced Vic juniors 8-0. Jean Atkinson scored four of the U.C. goals, mostly by standing on the blue line, and swinging at the puck when it came her way. The puck was down at the Vic end most of the time, and only the good work of Edith Lewis in the Vic goal, saved the Scarlet and Gold team from a worse fate.

Don't forget that all who want to play intercollegiate hockey must be at the practice at Varsity Stadium from one to two today. There is also a practice for the basketball team from five to six in the Lillian Massey gym, and all the girls who have been practising must turn out.

SENIOR GIRL CAGERS ARE VICTORS 39-9

St. Stephen's Church Sextette
Prove no Match for Blue

PODRLY PLAYED GAME

Last night at Hart House, the women's senior basketball team thoroughly trounced the St. Stephen's Church sextet by a 39-9 score. Although the Blue and White squad showed greatly improved form over last Friday's exhibition, play throughout the entire tussle was sloppy and high-schoolish. It is expected, however, that the co-eds will soon display the style which will make them a serious competitor in the forthcoming Bronze Baby tournament.

The Blue eagles had possession of the ball for the greater part of the initial session, but had tough luck around the basket. Alice Elshout opened the scoring for Varsity, after which shots in quick succession by Kay Brown, and Erna Laing, brought the Varsity total up to six, while the visitors had to be content with free shots scored by Helen Bryant. A foul shot by Kay Brown and a basket by Marge Leslie completed the homesters scoring for the period, and the church lassies managed to sink the ball once before the end of the half, making the score 11-4 in favour of the students.

In the final half the Blue and White ran wild to pile up an insurmountable lead over their rivals. Ellen Wilson, who has hitherto been playing on the defense line, was switched to the position of forward, and made a very creditable showing, piling up 9 points after the rest period. Doreen Compton and Iris Tye of St. Stephen's both made nice loops, but the visiting squad was allowed only one more point (a free throw by Helen Bryant), due to the fine checking of the Varsity defence. Kay Brown went on a scoring spree all her own towards the end of the

Varsity Squad Crippled by Penalties and Injury to Valquette

STIRRING LAST QUARTER

By Frank Lambert

Buffeted about by the battering, bruising Hamilton Tigers, a game University of Toronto senior hockey squad went down to an 8-4 defeat in the last game of the local senior O.H.A. season at Varsity Arena last night. Crippled by penalties, several of the doubtful variety, the hard working Varsity sextet had to fight an uphill battle to keep the score down. The opening seconds of play saw Wilbur Valquette painfully injured as Hoch crashed him into the boards, and the fast skating Valquette was forced to retire for the rest of the game.

Both teams showed a desire to mix it throughout the fixture and Referee Armstrong had great difficulty keeping his decisions straight. The first two periods were featured by fast breaking rushes on the opposing citadel guardians and the Hamilton Tigers went ahead with a vengeance on scores by Hastie, Mackie and Williamson while Varsity scored a peculiar goal as McClelland shot the puck at Teno as Driscoll barely deflected it into the Bengal nets.

The final session resulted in a high scoring spree as Hamilton smashed home five counters while Varsity in their goal getting activities notched three more. The best goal of the night came as Bruce Charles, stellar Blue defenceman, eluded the Hamilton front line and, tricking the Hamilton defencemen, coasted in on Teno, who fanned at the puck as it hit the twine behind him. McClelland finally broke his jinx of the night as he accepted Jeffrey's pass to score the final goal of the night and the score read 8-4 as the teams skated off the ice at the final gong.

EXPECT SMART DISPLAY AT SENIOR ASSAULT

Winners in Interfaculty Bouts Assured of Place on Intercollegiate Team

The Senior Interfaculty Assault, scheduled for Thursday in Hart House, gives much evidence for predicting a first class display of wrestling and boxing skill. The winners of these events will represent Varsity at the coming intercollegiate meets.

In boxing, Tom Powell at 145 lbs., remains undisputed champion in his class. Milson and Pocius in the 118 and heavy classes, respectively, will probably again take their places on the team.

In the 135 and 155 lb. divisions there are a number of very likely prospects. J. J. Pigott, with an enviable record in Hamilton, is one of Varsity's best hopes for a 175 lb. intercollegiate champion. G. C. Johnstone, intercollegiate wrestling champion last year at 155 lbs., is the most likely winner of his division.

All entrants will be required to weigh in at the medical office between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. today, after which a draw will assign opponents.

DENTS AND SR. SCHDDL TOP SR. MEDS-ST. MIKE'S

Dents defeated St. Mike's and Sr. School whipped Sr. Meds in two fast interfaculty hockey fixtures played yesterday afternoon on the open rink at Varsity Stadium.

A superior Dental team took the decision from St. Mike's squad in the first game by a score of 2-0.

Sr. School took a decisive victory from the Sr. Medical team by the score of 4-0. Meds were no match for School, who with two fast passing forward lines skated circles around the Medical team.

RDVER SCOUT CREW TO HOLD DINNER

The U. of T. Rover Scout Crew with the provincial association, have arranged a dinner for all scouts in the university, to be held in the Great Hall, Hart House, on Thursday, Feb. 13, at 7 p.m.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crochower

Last night's Hamilton-Varsity tilt was the poorest refereed game that we've ever seen up at the Arena. Referee Armstrong, who we understand is looking forward to working in the N.H.L., was as inconsistent as he could possibly be. It seems that the last time the Blue fans were treated to the same sort of spectacle was the time this same official was in charge of a game up at the Arena some years ago. The Tigers' first and third goals should have been disallowed as Shipman had two Hamiltonians camped right in front of him on both occasions. However, no amount of arguing could convince the official and the goals were allowed.

With the strong McGill squad coming here next Saturday Varsity's chances of making a good showing were seriously impaired when Wilbur Valquette received a serious injury in last night's tilt. "Val" was sailing down the left boards at a pretty good rate and as he reached the Hamilton blue line Wilf Hoch gave him the hip and the Blue winger literally flew into the boards. A hasty examination showed that a muscle in his back was probably torn and as a result the useful hockeyist will be an absentee on Saturday.

The senior interfaculty assault gets under way today with places on Varsity's intercollegiate B. W. and F. team at stake. As in the past few years Varsity's main strength will be with the wrestling team but should the Blue boxers come to life down in Montreal on the 22nd of this month the Blue and White squad will take enough honours to take the title. Down in Buffalo last Saturday night Johnny Carroll, Varsity's chief hope in the 155 lb. wrestling class, received an injury to his knee which will keep him out of the intercollegiate assault. However, the remaining lads of the wrestling squad are at top form just now and if they continue their fine work they should clean up in their division in the coming assault at McGill.

The University of Toronto will be represented in the coming Ontario bonspiel when a team of four Western Canada lads take the ice representing Varsity. The four lads are Hancheroff, Buchanan, Sask., Partridge of Carnduff, Sask., and Buchanan and Brown of Winnipeg, Man.

Plenty of Action Predicted During "White Hope Series"

By Frank Lambert

The amazing propensities of the huge lumbering men seeking honours and glory in the realm of fistiana, will be uncovered when the Jack Dempsey heavyweight boxing tournament takes place on the night of Feb. 19. This "white hope" series promises many a laugh, as a large number of the lads, unskilled in ring warfare, will attempt to commit unmitigated mayhem without the necessary formalities.

A view of a scene at Apex Club is typical. Tall, rugged, broad shouldered knights of the realm of swat, daily unravel their bag of Sunday punches as they shadow box. Here in this corner you have a lumberjack, an experienced wood chopper cleaving the air with ardent drives; miners, dishwashers, farmers and all types of classes are represented. From undoubtedly tough, well-seasoned men of hand to hand conflict with raw nature, to the quiet, refined, smooth groomed Adonises who easily step through their daily training chores, the entries are representative.

As a certain professional wrestler put it when asked to make an entry under an assumed name in the tournament. "Who, me, listen boys, that's no place for an experienced performer of ring warfare. Why these birds don't know when to quit, boxing in their unorthodox manner as they do, some long looping punches may write fairs to the most ardent boxer. No sir, that's no place for an expert, those lads in the boxing tournament have that knockout instinct developed to the nth degree."

The other day as the pitter patter of the boxers skipping echoed in the gym, a powerful well-built youth became exasperated as he continually became entangled in the skipping and finally hurled the rope away with the remark, "I came here to fight not to practise ballet work." Amongst the many letters of description about their qualifications one gathers many amusing anecdotes. From Sunningdale, Sask., one reads, "I am a little fat, but I've got solid muscles, heavy bones, and strong nerves." As our friend Tommy McClure, press man, would say, "Well as long as he isn't solid between the ears, he'll do."

This elimination heavyweight tournament is the only one to be held in Canada and the Maple Leaf Gardens should see a packed house. Of all the professional matches, the Jack Dempsey heavyweight tournament has evinced the greatest Canadian newspaper interest in the last ten years, and there is small wonder.

O.C.E., SENIOR MEDS TAKE CAGE TILTS

St. Mike's and Pharmacy Lose in Listless Games, Last Game Rough

TEACHERS WELL-TRAINED

Four interfaculty basketball teams entertained in two listless encounters in the upper gym, Hart House, yesterday afternoon, which resulted in O.C.E. trouncing St. Mike's 31-22 and Senior Meds squeezing out a win over a luckless Pharmacy squad 20-18.

In the first game a well trained O.C.E. team combined a very shifty passing attack which completely tricked St. Mike's defense with some accurate shooting and won going away 31-22. The Teachers took the lead from the start and were never headed. Once in the driver's seat they took the wheel, adding basket after basket with comparative ease. At half time they led 12-7 and increased their lead easily in the second canto.

The second game, won by Sr. Meds 20-18, was a much more interesting encounter than the first game, but the basketball was just as poor.

TRINITY TRACK MEN WIN WEEKLY MEET

Conway Defeats Forrest of Victoria in Close 2-mile Run

NEXT IS LAST MEET

Eleven more points were added to the score of Trinity College in the second last of the weekly track meets held yesterday afternoon, to advance their lead still further in the interfaculty race for the Toronto Cricket Club cup. Conway added to his long list of wins the two-mile race, covering the distance in the fast time of 10:19.2, while Trinity's six man team captured first place in the half mile relay.

Forrest of Vic set the pace for twenty two laps of the two mile race but Al Conway hung on his heels until two laps from the finish when he pulled out in front to lead the Vic man to the tape, making this his fourth win in as many races. Of eight starters only three succeeded in finishing the course, Haight of Trinity taking third place.

SLUGGING TEACHERS WIN BASEBALL TILT

A fighting band of sluggers from O.C.E. won an extremely well-played baseball game from Sr. U.C. in the big gym, Hart House, yesterday afternoon by 5-4.

O.C.E. began the scoring by bunching 2 hits, a passed ball, and a U.C. error in the last of the second inning, for 2 runs. Sr. U.C., however, tied it up in the first half of the third and again in the fourth, after O.C.E. had secured another two run lead in the last of the third.

The game went on over the 5 o'clock deadline and Coulter of O.C.E., singled, stole second, went to third on another single and scored the winning run a moment later on Corzi's infield out.

O.C.E.: Pollock, Oulday, Corzi, Langdon, Darbyshire, Fletcher, Book, Griffiths, Milloy, Beare, Coulter.

Sr. U.C.: Cole, Laskin, Gluskin, Ganz, Molson, Vanek, Woodrow, Kerner, Kriger, Bryden, Sepman.

VICTORIA GIRLS LOSE TO U.C. PUCKSTERS

Losers Are Snowed Under to Lose Game by Score
of 8-0

The U.C. pucksters definitely out-classed Vic juniors at Vic rink last night in a speedy tussle which ended with an 8-0 score in favour of U.C.

The play was in the Vic zone all through the game and Vic was unable to get a single shot on the U.C. nets.

In spite of the absence of Charity Grant, who forms a vital part of U.C.'s defence, the University College girls played snappy hockey and lost the puck only when the harassed juniors managed to shoot it down the ice.

Jean Atkinson played outstanding hockey for U.C. and scored 4 of their 8 points. She was ably assisted in this line by Bunty Lang, Cis Taylor and Betty Guest.

Edith Lewis, Vic goalie, saved her team from an even worse fate by her good work in the nets.

WATERPOLO SEMIFINALS TD BEGIN TONIGHT

Jr. Meds will meet Sr. School in the first game of the interfaculty water polo semi-finals this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Hart House tank. Both Meds and School have very strong water polo clubs and this semi-final series should provide fast and interesting games. At times the campus is hardly big enough to hold these two "neighbours" so when they are both confined in a swimming pool anything might happen. The second game will be played on Friday afternoon, goals to count on the round.

CHANGES INAUGURATED IN U.C. FORUM CLUB

Various changes, intended to stimulate interest in the Forum Club, were made at the regular meeting yesterday in University College. At present the membership is confined to twenty-five. Henceforth members of the fourth year will not be included in this number, but will be honorary members with attendance optional. In the future, speakers will be chosen in rotation and the absence of any speaker will be regarded seriously by the executive.

The Forum Club was founded five years ago to "foster the art of self-expression". Each member must stand before the club and then receive criticism as to his manner, delivery and general ability as an orator. Similarly he must act as chairman at a meeting and again face criticism. The results of this experience are evident in that members of the club are prominent in the U.C. Parliamentary Club and in the Hart House debates.

 ined along with the proposed method of financing and repayment.
 The speaker mentioned several principles of municipal finance which should be considered in any capital works program. The work should be absolutely necessary and the plans drawn up in detail beforehand. The plan of finance should be "sound and economical". And the term of the debentures should not exceed the expected life of the asset.
 "The future generations," he said, "will have enough to do to look after their own debts, without paying for our extravagances."

SOLEMNITY MARKS OPENING OF SESSION

 of impending activity were the pages dashing about with messages for the members.
 The speech from the throne outlined the government's progress in the past year and predicted legislation on income tax, fumigation laws, and on "more adequate distribution of taxes levied for educational purposes."

When the royal representative left the chamber, Hon. H. C. Nixon, acting Premier in the absence of Mr. Hepburn, tabled a resolution of sympathy with the royal family in their recent bereavement. The Conservative leader, Hon. G. S. Henry, seconded the resolution. There followed a succession of tributes to the late king's reign. The entire house and gallery observed two minutes of silence.

The Income Tax Bill was given first reading and during the brief discussion prior to its passage, Hon. H. C. Nixon stated the Premier would be present for tomorrow's session.

CABINET'S PETITION NOT TO BE GRANTED

 been reached by the Faculty. The Cabinet had received no information from the Faculty regarding the matter, he said. "As far as we know, it is still in their hands for consideration."

Two weeks ago, following an editorial in The Varsity, which drew attention to the long hours dental students work, the Cabinet asked the various ways to submit to them reports regarding changes which they would like to make in their hours. The Cabinet then petitioned the Faculty for changes which included lectures that begin at 9 a.m. instead of 8.30 a.m. or an alternative of one half day off each week.

The petition had almost unanimous support from the undergraduate body of the Dental College, as was evidenced by the survey conducted in the college by this paper following its editorial.

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE CALLED GREAT EVIL

 While pointing out the inherent disadvantages that stand in the way of her rapid growth, Dr. Cody expressed the belief that Canada, under proper guidance, has a great future. "We are in a country that cannot stand still," he said later. "Its progress can be blocked only by its own stupidity."

Dr. Cody claimed arts courses to be the most important because it is now concerned with turning out men with "trained intelligences". "Too many people can't come to university if appreciation is their first aim," he said in refutation of the argument that there are too many students in this country.

Dr. Cody stressed the importance of being fully capable in this now complex world. "The day of slipshod performance is gone," he said. He listed the important qualities of the man of tomorrow as health, energy, persistence, thoroughness, technical training and social sense, and adaptability.

Hither and Yon

A newspaper woman is not a woman! That, at any rate, is the opinion of a fraternity at the University of Manitoba. Apparently a girl reporter for the Manitoban was sent to cover a frat house story, but bumped right into the University's strictly-enforced ruling that women must not enter a fraternity building. After a quick huddle, the men came to the above decision and decided that she would be allowed to enter as a reporter.

When the Saskatchewan Gateway makes an apology, a thorough job is done of it. Recently an independent organization calling itself the Gooseberry Club was allowed to take out an issue. They were supposed to be humorous, but confined themselves to making a libellous remark about one R. J. Samuels. The next issue of the Gateway carried a streamer apologizing. The type used was 92 point, or about an inch and a quarter in height.

noted Dutch-American composer, former "Met" director and at present the director of the Chicago Civic Opera. The production will be presented on Saturday evening, February 15th.

The opera, written by Giuseppe Verdi founded on Victor Hugo's play, "Le Roi s'Amuse", was written in forty days, yet achieved undying popularity. Its rich score replete with gems for every part, has made an admirable vehicle for many celebrated singers.

DEMOCRACY UPHELD IN THE VICTORIA-TRINITY DEBATE

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Garmish-Partenkirchen: Due to a ruling which may prevent them from playing England in the finals, the Canadian Olympic hockey team have threatened to withdraw from the competition. A final decision is expected today.

Toronto: A motion against the proposed Income Tax Bill was defeated by a vote of 56-16. One clause, however, was dropped from the bill.

London, England: A terrific gale accompanied by snowstorms and icy temperatures now sweeping Europe has caused scores of deaths and has disrupted all modes of transportation.

Paris, France: Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin of France warned Germany yesterday that France would not allow an armed German occupation of the demilitarized Rhineland.

Tokio, Japan: Eight Japanese were killed in a clash along the Manchukuo border according to reports from the Japanese headquarters there. The clash has increased the tension in the Russo-Japanese situation.

PRESS ENCOUNTER IS HECTIC AFFAIR

News and Sports Boys Battle it Out on Varsity Arena Ice

Within the confines of the ice surface at Varsity Arena The Varsity journalists played an inter-staff game which ended in a 6-6 deadlock after sixty minutes of anxious toiling, with no time out for rests.

The news satellites blazed three goals into the sports' nets before the Knights of the Sport-pens realized there was a game on. After that, however, the latter pulled together and after many rushes succeeded in pushing over their first corner.

Then a torrid battle ensued as players, sweat streaming down their faces, dashed along the boards, only stopping for breath when the backboards came out to meet them (so they say), or when they became better acquainted with the ice by adopting the prone method of introduction viz; clearing the ice of shredded ice-flakes caused by swerving, glistening skates.

The teams were willing, but the skates were tall. Throughout it all, however, the tall, fast-moving A.M. & D. Editor stood as a bulwark of strength between the newsmen's goal posts. His performance was of a four-star nature as he gallantly kicked, blocked and fought, to keep the puck out.

Nominations Made For Scholarship

Moss Scholarship Only One Where Students Nominate Candidates

ALL-ROUNDNESS STRESSED

Nominations are now being made for the Moss Scholarship, which is awarded annually to the best all-round man or woman student in his final year. This is the only scholarship at the University for which the students make the nominations.

Candidates are nominated by students in their final year, in each of the four Arts colleges. Preparations are being made for the selection of representatives. Today seniors of University College are meeting in the West Hall at 12 noon to make their choice.

The scholarship was founded by the late Chief Justice Thomas Moss and it is to the value of one year's tuition and sixty dollars. A committee consisting of the President of the University, the President of the Alumni Federation and three of its members interview the nominees and make the final award. Preference is given to the candidate who intends to use the award for post graduate study or preparation for professional work.

Ordinarily there is but one candidate chosen but last year the award was split between Nathan Pivnick, a senior law student at University College, and Harold Taylor of Victoria College.

While University College is going ahead with plans for a nomination meeting nothing could be found out as to what steps the other colleges were taking. Inquiry at St. Michael's College revealed the fact that the President of the senior year was not aware of the existence of the Moss Scholarship.

Youth has been placed in a very unenviable and very trying position in an ever-shrinking world, was the message of the Reverend C. E. Silcox at a meeting of the Sociology Club last night, in introducing his discussion on the nature of conflict in the modern world.

"Practically the last frontiers are now closed and the possibilities of conflict have become even greater, making old social solutions impossible," explained the speaker. "What are some of these conflicts?" was the leading question put before the club. An exposition of some particularly vital social problems was presented by Dr. Silcox with no attempt, however, to reveal a solution. "We are threatened with a complete collapse of the present civilization unless we can discover just what is rotten not only in the state of Denmark, but in the very soul of the modern world," the speaker continued.

Sex conflict which is driving men more and more into the dirty and

Brigadier General Relates His Experience with Intelligence Service

AT ELECTRICAL CLUB

In his talk to the Electrical Club in Hart House last night Brigadier General Mitchell, Dean of the Faculty of Engineering, told of some of his "rencontres" while he was a member of the British Intelligence Service during the war.

His most interesting experience was seeing the characters of John Buchan's "Green Mantle" take on flesh and blood. He had been sent to Italy with Aubrey Herbert, son of Lord Carnarvon, to co-ordinate the activities of the British and Italian armies. Herbert had been chosen because of his extraordinary skill in languages and his intimate knowledge of Italy and the Balkans. One day Gen. Mitchell remarked to Herbert that their departure from London had strikingly resembled a similar departure in "Green Mantle." "Very interesting," replied his companion casually. "You know, I was Green Mantle."

M. AND P. COURSE CALLED HARDEST AT UNIVERSITY

Findings of Committee to be Discussed at Meeting Today

CLOSED TO STAFF

After a complete analysis and critical survey of the Mathematical and Physics course made during the past month, the committee appointed by the President of the M. and P. Society to investigate the state of the course, last night made public their findings.

Under the chairmanship of S. A. Jennings, the committee met twice and through sub-committees considered every angle of the course and produced a lengthy report covering the varied problems facing the students in mathematics and physics.

A general meeting of the undergraduate members of the society will be held this afternoon and consideration will be given to the recommendations given in the report. The meeting will be closed to the staff.

The report makes no outstanding criticism of the M. and P. course but several changes are recommended and they will be taken up with the staff if the undergraduates sanction such action at this afternoon's meeting.

"Shakespeare had an extraordinarily varied character in his religious heritage," stated Canon Pilcher. "There

History Said To Show
The Failure of Democracy

HERO WORSHIP DEPLORED

Belief in the democratic form of government emerged unscathed from a battle of words in the joint meeting of the Victoria and Trinity Debating Parliaments held at Victoria College last night. The government, supporting the resolution, "That this House continues to believe in the democratic form of government," received an overwhelming majority of 43 to 17.

Granting that the present form of democracy existing in Canada was far from perfect, members for the government yet contended that only by clinging to its principles could a solution for political and economic problems be reached. The only alternatives, they stated, were a dictatorship on the Fascist system, or complete anarchy. Members for the opposition, however, stated that such a dictatorship, modelled on Italian lines, was the best solution.

The member for Falls, beginning the argument, claimed that there were three fundamental principles underlying democracy, namely, liberty, equality and fraternity, stressing the fact that only in a democracy can every man attain his birthright, happiness, which is necessary (Continued on Page 3)

Victoria and Emmanuel Colleges climbed another step up the ladder towards the interfaculty hockey championship yesterday afternoon. Last year's champs crushed Jr. S.P.S. 4-1 while the Ministers handed Pharmacy a 2-1 set-back.

Vic looked very good in the first game as they outplayed the Engineers in all departments. The Schoolmen fought hard but were no match for the tricky combinations of the Scarlet and Guck pucksters. Vic looked to be very well coached and will be a hard team to stop in the playoffs. "Mann" Monzon with two goals, Dave Matheson and Gregory with one apiece, starred for Vic. Saunders, on defence and John Matheson in goal, also turned in very worthy efforts. Smith saved School from a shut-out.

Universal Suffrage --A Problem

At last someone has had the courage of his convictions and made the statement that we have long been waiting to hear from an authoritative source—namely that the greatest weakness of democracy is universal suffrage. When such a statement is made by a man with the political and educational experience of President Cody, it behooves all university students who are concerned about the future welfare of their country to give the subject serious consideration.

It is a lamentable fact that the government of the country, municipal, provincial and federal, is not in the hands of the men best fitted for their tasks. There is still the occasional village and town whose mayors can barely read and write, and a great many more governing bodies whose intelligence is not of the highest order.

Clever men, men with university educations, are inclined to look on politics with disdain. If they do enter the political arena they find themselves at a distinct disadvantage compared to their opponents. These opponents may be, occasionally, honest men with a sincere desire to serve their country, but who lack the intelligence and understanding necessary to the efficient administration of the state.

Such men will continue to be elected to responsible posts in our government as long as we have universal suffrage. They make their appeal to the "common people" and the "common people" do not always support the most intelligent candidate. They believe, not unreasonably, that a man of their own station in life will have greater sympathy with their problems, not stopping to consider that he probably has not the wit nor the ability to cope with them.

Dr. Cody has called universal suffrage one of the "necessary disadvantages of democracy." It ought not to be a necessary disadvantage but in all probability we will never be able to turn back the wheel. The men who would lose the vote under restricted suffrage are scarcely likely to elect the legislators who would institute a restriction of the right to vote. Like Pandora we have let the imps out of the box and they will never be persuaded to go in again.

But there is something that we, as university students, can do. We can adopt a new attitude towards politics, we can regard the governing of our country as a sacred duty. Not all of us will be able to take office but we can all vote. If every intelligent person in the country voted they could soon counterbalance the unenlightened group. Very few of the "common people" neglect to vote because unscrupulous candidates lure them to the polls with eloquent arguments and extravagant promises. Having no better means of differentiation they are bound to vote for the man who promises them most.

It is up to us, as university students, to change the "intelligent minority" into the "intelligent majority."

Quiet, Please!

Periodically attention is focussed on the noise of city streets and various preventive measures are discussed. But, at least in Toronto, no perceptible diminution has taken place.

Early morning milkmen usually bear the brunt of the criticism and it has recently been suggested in St. Catharines that the horses be provided with rubber shoes. Milkmen have one point in their favour, at least they waken one at an hour when all energetic people should be getting up anyway.

Anyone who has ever tried going to sleep in a room with a window opening on St. George Street, or who has wanted to study in the same room during rush hours, will admit that the milkman cannot begin to compete with motor vehicles. Manufacturers have been fairly successful in making one individual automobile as silent as a cat stalking a mouse. Yet when fifty or a hundred of these automobiles are lined up on one street they resemble mighty Niagara.

Tooting horns, screeching brakes, banging doors, clanging street cars make life on a busy street hideous. Many of the causes of noise are probably ineradicable, but surely something could be done. It is a rich field for the research worker. Famous he, who takes the headache out of city life.

A New Citizen

Dr. Albert Einstein evidently has found life in the United States all that he expected it to be when he fled from the Nazi terrorism of Hitler's Germany. That, in an event, is the conclusion naturally drawn from the news that this distinguished scientist, who has been pursuing research work at Princeton, is on the way to becoming an American citizen.

The people of the United States will welcome so eminent an addition to the ranks of civic life. Dr. Einstein has proved himself to be a fine gentleman, a worthy scholar and a good neighbour. The country as a whole will rejoice that he has seen fit to seek normal Americanization.

Ruthless racial animosity has forced many a notable character from the confines of the German Reich. In no case, however, has the toll of prejudice been greater than in Dr. Einstein, who obviously wants nothing more than an opportunity to follow the course of scientific achievement in a setting free from the sinister and distracting influences of intolerant aristocracy.—Oklahoma Daily.

What Can a Professor Profess?

There are three possible answers. He may refrain from saying anything that he believes; in which case, he is worthless. He may honestly and frankly state his conclusions on the problems he has studied, and win the disapproval of the pseudo-patriots. Thirdly, he may state only part of his conclusions (those which will offend none of the controlling interests in society), which is misrepresentation and dishonesty.

This places the poor professor in a terrible predicament. The first choice is not only unworthy but impossible; even when an instructor selects a textbook he is stating his belief that the book is worth reading and he must give his opinion of it. The second position is the most desirable, but apparently the least practical. The only thing left for him is to present tactfully only part of his views.

Students should be aware of this and co-operate with their instructors. . . . When a professor does have courage, we should be careful not to misinterpret or misquote him. We need also to determine which of the three positions the instructor is taking and evaluate his teachings accordingly.—Washington State Evergreen.

A Masculine Curfew?

Just for the fun of it, let's take this leap year business seriously. For a long time, women everywhere have been sitting back meekly and admitting that this is a man's world.

The campus is no exception. The co-ed today is just as resignedly admitting that she'll never have equal rights with men as her great grandmother was a century ago.

While many women in the professions and in business are rapidly attaining positions on a par with those held by men, the university lags behind in the horse and buggy days. Co-eds are still regarded as little girls who must read Elsie Dinsmore and hang out their stockings for Santa Claus.

Men students, on the other hand, are treated as objects nearly human. They are allowed something that almost approaches freedom of speech, thought and action.

Now, just as a noble experiment, let's turn the tables on the men. Lock them in their houses, or out, as the case may be, at 10.30. Then watch the fireworks. It wouldn't be very long until the university's system of antiquated rules would be abolished.

—Mary Kimbrough in the Oklahoma Daily.

Word was received at a late hour last night by the Committee in charge, that J. Stanley St. John and his orchestra will unfortunately be unable to fulfill their engagement to play at the Victoria College At-Home tomorrow evening. In a telephone call St. John briefly stated that he had lost the key to the lid of his piano, and since he refuses to play any other instrument, the famous band leader will not appear with his group at the college party.

"Just give us a chance," pleaded the Vic Social Director, "We are frantically doing our best to prevent the At-Home from becoming a last-minute flop. I don't mind saying that we are sick and tired of being disappointed by these big Toronto bands, and from now on we'll get our music elsewhere. Guy Lombardo has been secured to replace St. John, and we want to assure everyone that this American band is superior to the original and will enable the annual dance to achieve its most outstanding success in many years. Lombardo will play in the fancifully decorated Hart House gymnasium and if the demand for tickets warrants it, a second band will be provided. Tentative arrangements have already been made with Ray Noble to play in the East Coast Room.

C—C

How the above chunk of news-galley slipped in here from the front page, we can hardly say; but it does draw to our attention the distressing state of affairs in the local dance band situation. With the exception of Richard Himber and Louis Armstrong there is scarcely an orchestra ensemble this side of the Mexican border which has not come within a hairsbreadth of playing some campus party during the past fortnight. It is even rumoured that Clare Rous and his Novelty One Man Band will be unable to play at the Annual Varsity Band Concert next Wednesday, owing to the brass section having inadvertently swallowed his cazo.

In connection with the current fiasco in musical circles, the lads are telling a good yarn concerning the social executive of an ambitious American high school who wrote to Guy Lombardo, explaining that they had two hundred dollars to spend on an orchestra for their big dance, and what could he do for them? By return post came his offer . . .

"One piccolo player, one piccolo, two sheets of music."

C—C

Personally, it isn't the musical situation which is worrying us. We've been reading those ads in the downtown papers that declare that the second coming and the last day of judgement, as determined by Biblical proof, will occur not later than February 14th, 1936.

However, what better place to be caught at than the Victoria College At-Home? The truth shall make you free, yea even

The Muddy Yorker.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

M.T.S. Dramatic Society

At the invitation of the headmaster of the University Schools we attended a performance of Macbeth in the school auditorium last night. We went with preconceived ideas of the high school student's ability to understand and to interpret Shakespeare. Nor were those ideas rudely shaken; the best work was done by the three witches.

Rather than criticize the young actors who were undoubtedly giving their best, we should like to take issue with the director, Mr. Gill in his staging of the play chose to ignore several highly practicable stage conventions. His characters move in stygian gloom symbolizing the tenor of the play or appear in vivid tableaux with grouping suggestive of the family album.

In the matter of lighting he attempts the symphonic lighting of the Voaden school the value of which is questionable. Despite the prevalence of hackneyed advice we should like to remind him of that old maxim of Aristotle, "Don't shoot till you see the whites of their eyes." This is a cardinal point in the use of lights.

We greatly fear that the teaching of Shakespeare to high school students has ruined whatever understanding of Shakespeare the director may have possessed. N.C.P.

The Masquers Club

The Toronto Masquers Club is to be congratulated on their discrimination in choosing "Another Language" by Rose Franklin for their fourteenth production at the Margaret Eaton Hall last night. This Broadway success of last season is a good vehicle for amateurs. The situation is familiar; a sensitive, romantic woman, married into a family of crass, suburban Philistines, finds a kindred soul in the person of her nephew, who has architectural yearnings and is jarred by the Hallam family atmosphere. It is not their joint revolt from the family but the family itself that forms the real centre of interest—a bickering, fault-finding, gossiping bunch, dominated by a hypocritical matriarch.

Olive Williams, as Stella, the romantic, who fights to keep her husband and her nephew from accepting the Hallam viewpoint, possessed a certain fragile charm; but a more pleasing voice would have added much to her portrayal. Moreover, the contrast between her and her husband's family was none too apparent.

Vic Gibson, as Jerry the nephew, was miscast. Even in the love scenes, he seemed to be moving on a dotted line from A to B according to diagram. He overdid the gaucherie of the part badly, and his tender utterances were (Continued on Page 4)

MEDS IN POSITION TO LOSE DAVIDSON TROPHY THIS YEAR

Johnny Millson, Jack Brunke
Last Year's Intercollegiate, Still in Running

SEVERAL INJURIES

The Senior Interfaculty Assault reached its final stages as a result of the bouts held at Hart House last night. All the preliminary and semi-final bouts were run off, leaving the ring set for the finals tomorrow night. Meds, winners of the Davidson trophy last year, will be herd pressed to take the cup again. Four of their wrestlers survived the preliminary grappling, while one boxer came out of the mauling with his record unblemished. Two wrestlers, both from O.A.C., suffered minor injuries as a result of their bouts. Steensma bested Scott of S.P.S. but received a cauliflower ear which necessitated his withdrawing from further competition. During the hectic exchanges in the Minaker-Millar bout the two met head on with the latter getting the worst of it. He received a split scalp and had to default the bout before regulation time had expired.

Johnny Millson and Jack Brunke were the only boxers of last year's intercollegiate team to see action and both recorded wins.

In the 135 lb. division, Lossing of O.C.E. and Kemp of Vie will clash in the final. The former scored the only knockout of the night when he made Lenaghan bite the canvas in the first round. Kemp defeated another O.A.C. battler, Spense, finally solving the latter's unorthodox style to gain the advantage in points.

Wrestlers from the Agricultural College were very much to the fore in point of numbers. Three bouts were captured by Aggie bone benders, two coming as a distinct surprise. Phoenix took the decision from the highly regarded Watt, while Scott, who was a pre-assault favourite, fell before Steensma, due mainly to the more aggressive tactics of the latter. Robertson of Meds and Ball of O.A.C. put on the best wrestling exhibition of the night, having to fight five extra minutes before the former received the nod of approval from the judges. Ball at one time came close to pinning Robertson's shoulders, but the latter squirmed out of it, making a strong comeback to even the bout in regulation time.

In the fencing division, six men successfully foiled the opposition and advance to the finals. Mitchell, Tushingham and Bachert of last year's intercollegiate team, did not fight yesterday, but will enter the final round tomorrow.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

The turnout at the hockey practice was much better yesterday, and what appears to be a very strong team was chosen. The following girls will play for Varsity against Toronto Ladies on Friday night at the Royal Canadian Arena—Maisie Cowan, Marg Macdonald, Ruth Leavens, Gladys Wagg, Molly Slater, Jean Atkinson, Elaine Knight, Gladys Carveth, Bunty Lang, Betty Guest and Joy Brownlee. Unfortunately Mary Dignam is sticking to her resolve to get some work done, so Varsity will be minus her services. How about giving the girls some support in their opening game? Even a few encouraging spectators boost the morale of the team.

The Varsity basketball team has also been chosen, though with great difficulty, by Mrs. Wilson and Marjorie Rean. The forwards will be Kay Brown, Erna Laing, Alice Elshout, Marg Glass and Ellen Wilson, and the guard line will consist of four steady defence players, Kay Grubbe, Billy McGarry, Betty Jenkinson, and Alice Bassett. The team is going to have another practice game Friday afternoon at Oakwood Collegiate.

Molly Stevens wishes us to announce that the U.C. swimming meet will be next Wednesday evening in the U.T.S. pool, and she would like to see an infinite number of swimmers, and a full gallery of spectators if possible. All the usual events, free style, back stroke, diving, style, etc., will be run off, and there will be an innovation in the form of an inter-year relay race. Each year should plan now to enter their four fastest swimmers in this. Next Wednesday night is the date.

sary to the fullest development of his life. He claimed that equality exists only where the rights of the individual are recognized, and that liberty was possible only where political privilege was distributed over all the state.

History, according to the member from Turner, is a record of failures in attempting democracy. Commercial interests are too closely tied up with it. There is too great a discrepancy, he claimed, between the strength of the parties in the house, under a two party system and the number of votes. In addition to this, a great deal of the government is in the hands of second-rate men.

Describing modern Fascism, the member from Turner declared that the radical principles with which this movement began had become autocratic and despotic. Order, she claimed, is rooted in freedom, and there can be no freedom where opposition is persecuted and the press muzzled, as in Italy. The member from Storey concluded the argument of the opposition with the claim that democracy was a hindrance to world recovery. Under dictatorships, she said, Germany and Italy were assuming their places as world powers. Parliamentary assemblies could not cope with the problem facing the world.

In the speeches from the floor the honourable member from Pacey, supporting the government, advocated that functional group representation be substituted for territorial representation. The member from Havelock deplored the passing of romance and glamour from modern democracies and stressed the tendency of the masses to hero-worship.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Clarke Hood

This afternoon Varsity's intermediate basketball team take a short jaunt up to Guelph where they will engage with the O.A.C. seconds in a scheduled intercollegiate game. Mac McCutcheon's seconds are travelling at top speed and are at present sitting on top of the league with two wins against no losses. Information regarding the strength of the Aggies is negligible but the farmer lads always trot out a strong team and will be hard to take in their own pasture. Varsity will lose the services of Dougherty who was injured earlier in the week. University College also make the trip, playing an interfaculty game before the seconds take the floor.

Warren Stevens' senior basketballers get the acid test when they meet the league leading Tricolour squad at Kingston this Friday. The Varsity board of strategy are leaving nothing to chance, holding lengthy practices every night as defeat in this game practically cinches the crown for Queen's. The team is in first class condition except for Joe Connelly, who has been suffering from an infected leg but the starry forward promises to be Al by the week-end. Saturday sees the team go on to Montreal to play the Redmen.

Sr. S.P.S. somewhat upset the waterpolo dope when they battled Jr. Meds to a tie in the first of their two game series for the right to meet Victoria in the finals. The Medicals were conceded to be the favourites but the Schoolmen took an early two goal lead and the Meds had a tidy struggle to come out with a tie.

The race for Duran Cup honours is on and the McCatty brothers are once more in the lead. Cressy enjoys a 90-point lead over his brother Wince. The cup is given to the swimmer with the greatest number of points amassed from competing in the various events. Wince has held the cup for the past three years but rumour has it that the old mug is going to change bedrooms this season.

The long standing feud as to who is superior in the line of active sports remained as it was when the Sports and News writers battled to a 6-6 draw. Bouquets go to Ross Workman who so kindly donated the arena and equipment of combat. Keeping abreast of the times the News Hounds imported Loty Willis for the important struggle. The big fellow came through nobly, scoring four goals (the Sports Staff had no net-minder). Andy Clarke stood out for the Sports staff, bulging the twine behind the sensational Philips three times. A return match is in the offing and rumour has it that the band will be there to render "Anything Goes".

Another disappointing attendance showed up at Hart House last night to view the very interesting bouts on the Senior Assault card. Varsity students were practically a minus quantity, while old-timers and O.A.C. were out in force. However, a better attendance is looked for tonight when the final bouts take place. Burke of the intercollegiate team last year has been forced to withdraw from the tournament due to an injury. Pigott and Powell will be making their debut tonight, as both these traders in punches drew byes in the preliminary rounds. If last night's bouts of biffing and bone-bending are any indication, then visitors to the Hart House gym tonight will be treated to plenty of action.

BEAVERS LOSE GAME TO STOCKYARDS

3-1 Defeat Practically Eliminates Varsity from Playoff Position

LENAHAN AND BROWN STAR

The busy Varsity Beavers' chances of gnawing their way into the T.H.L. playoffs are now rather remote following Stock Yards 3 to 1 victory at the University Arena last night.

Varsity skated through, around, and even over the Cattlemen's defence, in the first twenty minutes but encountered the worst kind of luck and the best sort of goalkeeping in front of their opponents' net. Lenahan, Brown and Sissons drew remarkable saves from Rowe as the white and blue team attacked, three and four men abreast. Just before the bell rang Stewart of Stock Yards, was penalized five minutes for spilling Lindsay who had wriggled through the defence.

Stewart had still four minutes to serve as the second stanza opened and Varsity played five forwards within the red team's blue line in a futile attempt to score. At the fourteen minute mark the referee waved Stavert to the jug and Stock Yards gave Shipman a few merry moments. Soon after the teams were again at full strength. Crichton hit the far corner on a duet rush with Fremes, giving the Collegians the first advantage. However, Barney picked up a loose puck two minutes later and flicked the tying goal into the twine.

The action slowed down considerably in the final frame until Marshall, trailing Blaver into the Varsity defence, scooped the unclear puck into the cage. "Ace" Lenahan led a desperate rally in the two remaining minutes but Stock Yards scored their third goal on a break-away rush. Zulauf was the marksmen.

Lenahan and Brown, burly junior defencemen, were effective for Varsity throughout the game, with Rowe, the goalie, and Marshall doing most of the damage for the Packers.

Varsity: Goal, Shipman; defence, Brown, Sissons; centre, Cressy; wings, Lenahan, Stavert; alternates, Lindsay, Crichton, Boddington, Fremes.

Stock Yards: Goal, Rowe; defence, Marshall, Campbell; centre, Zulauf; wings, Lackey, Phillips; alternates, Walker, Blaver, Barney, Stewart.

MEDS TIE S.P.S. IN WATER POLO

Semi-Final Ends in 2-2 Tie
Next Game to be on Friday

With a last period rally that could not be denied, Jr. Meds tied Senior School 2-2 in the first of two waterpolo semi-finals, goals to count on the round.

The game was fast, exciting and interesting throughout. It had a fair-sized crowd groaning or approving vociferously on plays that just missed scoring. Both teams checked hard and fast and the goalies played brilliantly to keep the score down.

Sr. School made their big splurge in the first period by outswimming the close checking medicals, twice bulging the twine behind Taylor. The first goal was on a four man rush, Hollands scoring on a hard shot that just went over the goalie's finger tips. Toward the end of the session the Schoolmen started a rush which resulted in their last goal of the game, Zachanko outwitting Taylor by a neat corner shot.

After the rest period the Fisher-coached doctors pressed hard and Adams scored on a beautiful shot, Thompson, in the School nets, having no chance to save. Soon after, Wallace of Meds missed an opportunity to tie it up by hitting the goal-post. With thirty seconds to go the desperate medical men tried several long shots, Adams counting on a pass from Brown just before the game ended.

The next game is on Friday 14 at 5 p.m.

ADDRESS ON ROCK GARDENS

"Rock Gardens" was the subject of an address given by Mr. Cleveland Morgan in the Botany Building yesterday evening.

The famous iris-grower and rock garden specialist showed many colourful slides of his own garden in Montreal and gave valuable information as to flowers adaptable and conditions suitable for rock gardens.

M. AND P. COURSE CALLED HARDEST

erations", the committee agreed that the M. and P. course is the hardest course in the university, and added that for undergraduate work in mathematics, Toronto surpasses all other universities in Canada and ranks with the best in the United States. Knowledge of the history and philosophy of mathematics and physics is almost nil among the students here, it was concluded.

The requirements for entrance from high school were found to be satisfactory. As regards the pass options, the committee found this one of the most troublesome subjects. "The committee agrees that Pass options should be more plentiful, including English and French throughout the years and history of mathematics and physics revised in the third and fourth years."

The examination system was found to be imperfect but its reform was considered a matter for the whole university. Favourable comment was made on the six hour examinations conducted by the department of biochemistry. The lecture system was acknowledged to be satisfactory. It was felt, however, that personal contact between the staff and the students is not as frequent as might be desired. More tests should be prescribed for summer reading in preparation for the coming year's work, the report stated.

The second part of the report considers the curricula. The four years of the course are considered in detail. It was agreed actuarial science should be retained as compulsory in first year "if only to dispel the fallacy that the buyer of bonds at discount is getting something for nothing." The physics course in first year was commended.

FOLK HIGH SCHOOLS

farmers, artisans, and the professional classes are educated together, not for a special vocation, but for life. Later they can be trained for their chosen professions, but for a time they should live together and learn to know one another." These schools, according to Dr. Manniche, are designed for people from eighteen to twenty-five years old. After their elementary education, "the best schools for them are the farms and workshops themselves"; then when they have learnt something of life, they come to the Folk Schools, "not in order to get an education, not to become better farmers, but to become better men and women." This training is carried out, according to Dr. Manniche, "chiefly by the teaching of history, not as a mass of details but as a living development; the student is taught to regard himself not as a passive spectator, but as a part of it." "This dynamic teaching of history," said Dr. Manniche, "is responsible for the fact that so many young Danish farmers have a sense of responsibility towards their country; it has made them more willing to shoulder its burdens."

When asked if he thought the Folk High School system would be practicable in Canada, Dr. Manniche said, "I think there is a special need for it in Canada; its success would depend on whether there were enough idealistic people to go out and take the initiative."

Dr. Manniche's own school, the International People's College, is based on the same traditions as the Folk High Schools, but is "adapted to meet the needs of other countries." Emphasis is laid on international relations and on modern languages, which are studied in connection with the comparative literature and culture of various countries. Dr. Manniche added that they were anxious to have Canadian university students attend the courses, and see for themselves what was being done.

dangerous jobs not wanted by women; the task of meeting the problems of both the old and young; class warfare; racial and religious conflicts; the conflict between rural and urban areas; and conflict between nations were shown to be some of the more important present-day questions of social life and upon their answer depends the future of the world.

'GREEN MANTLE' COMRADE TO OEAN MITCHELL

The General on two other occasions encountered the other chief characters of the book. Spy Hannay he found was General Ironsides, a tremendous hulk of a man with a fertile imagination, who is at present travelling through Canada. General Mitchell almost captured the "flaxen-haired lady", an extraordinarily clever spy. The nearest he ever got to her, however, was the seizure of her big touring car which she had abandoned in flight.

Other reminiscences of the Dean included the dropping of parachuted spies in a plane piloted by Colonel Barker of Canada, and Wedgewood Benn, later a Liberal member of the British Parliament; the abortive attempt to fool the German strategists by planting a dead body with important papers as a decoy; and the winning of one of the preliminary battles preceding Passendale.

This latter exploit the General held up to the members of the Electrical Club as a triumph of engineering. The British intelligence staff, by means of flash-lighting, sounding and other methods, had located exactly the whereabouts of every German contingent and every fieldpiece behind a six mile front. Taking his cue once more from a novel, this time "Green Curves", General Mitchell calculated the probable reaction of the Germans if the British went ahead and repeated their sham attacks. This time, he figured, the Germans would shove all their strength into the front line, instead of reserving their strength for the inner division. He persuaded Lord Plumer, chief of staff, that this was so, and the British made plans to take care of the German front line. The ensuing battle was a complete vindication of his strategy. That he had correctly foreseen the German plans was proven later by dispatches that fell into British hands, and by Ludendorff's memoirs which were published recently.

RELIGIOUS BELIEFS OF SHAKESPEARE

were three strands in his religious thinking: Mediaeval, Renaissance, and Reformation.

In some of his plays, the speaker pointed out, he shows signs of knowledge of the new English Bible. In his view of the state of the human being after death he was gloriously inconsistent. Canon Pilcher quoted the famous soliloquy in Hamlet, "To be or not to be", which illustrates the medieval view of the after life as a state of torture. In the play "Macbeth", on the other hand, in such a line as "After life's fitful fever he sleeps well", Shakespeare has the Renaissance view of death as a transition to peace.

Shakespeare had one period in his life when he was greatly interested in great moral problems of sin, conscience and remorse, as illustrated particularly in "Macbeth" and "Hamlet", affirmed the speaker.

PRESS ENCOUNTER IS HECTIC AFFAIR

The inside information that the sports staff had on scoring goals, however, came to their aid, and in the end they succeeded in overcoming the newsmen's lead and holding them to a tie.

The game was made possible by the kindness of Ross Workman, who allowed the scribes to mess up the smooth-frozen surface.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

unkindly received by the audience. The best performance was that of William Bissell as Victor, Stella's husband, who understands her better than she thinks. Grace Hallam, her addle-headed sister-in-law, was a good sketch by Betty Bowen. The other members of the family were competently handled.

The most obvious defect of the production was due to the fact that it is difficult for Canadian and English amateurs to portray Americans effectively. This was especially noticeable in the case of Dorothy Kent, who played the part of Helen Hallam with a highly unsuitable Cockney accent. The first act lacked pace, but the tempo was better adjusted in the two subsequent ones. The lines could have been brought out with more snap—and the actors, being amateurs, did not wait for their laughs even when they got them. Special mention should be made of the second-act set, which was marred only by the omission of the stage-crow to remove the cellophane protectors from the rented lamp-shades.

Yesterday's presentation of Ibsen was dead. It was a primarily melodramatic climax played with stifling constraint. The effect of unpreparedness added to the above and the mistaking of the principal roles leaves little more to be said.

The part of the husband played by Andrew Fraser gave the impression of self-centredness but nothing more. Gwen Byrne as Nora, a woman facing decisions which would require a certain emotional crisis, walked through her part with all the abandonment of a policeman on parade.

There was no atmosphere of illusion created by this play, just two people speaking lines neither to the audience nor to themselves, just speaking lines.

AGGIES CAPTURE DAVIDSON CUP BY VERY NARROW MARGIN

VARSITY BAND TO STAGE CONCERT IN CONVOCATION HALL WEDNESDAY

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Germany: In a game featured by heavy body-checking, the Canadian hockey team was victorious over the Nazi group in last night's Olympic hockey fixture. The Canadians were able to score six goals to gain a four-point lead over the German team.

Unless there has been some slight miscalculation, the world will come to an abrupt end sometime before midnight today, according to Mr. Harold R. Varney of this city. In Mr. Varney's system of reckoning, today ends the allotted span of this world's existence.

The Crown yesterday charged the defense of Harry O'Donnell with "distorting evidence" in the ravine murder trial. The allegation that evidence had been "framed" and that incriminating articles had been "planted" in the ravine was termed a "vicious" statement by Mr. McRuer, acting for the Crown.

DR. RICHARD ROBERTS WILL SPEAK SUNDAY AT VESPER SERVICE

Sunday, February 16th is being observed as International Day in the University. The attention of students is being directed to the work of the World Student Christian Federation which is the international fellowship which links the Student Christian Movements of the world together. Two outstanding features will characterize the day's activities. Dr. Richard Roberts will speak at a Vesper Service held at 4.30 in p.m. in Knox College Chapel. Later at 5.30 there is an International Tea at the Women's Union when students from other lands will participate in the program.

Co-eds Hate Conceit and Likker But Moustaches Make 'Em Sicker

At last it can be told. Yesterday The Varsity hounded the co-eds with the vital question "What do you most object to in Varsity men?" The answer came straight from their hearts—"Conceit and likker."

Excessive egotism is the outstanding and almost universal fault of Varsity men, according to the women. Hey there, you shy violet over there in the corner with the outstanding ears and the damp hands—come out. The girls want to play with you.

All drunks are objectionable, it seems, but the worst specimen is the nauseo-amorous type. Passer-outers and morbid drunks are also frowned upon. The girls object to couch-warmers, doorstep-Johnnies, and men who ask you where you want to go, and then take you where they want to go. Also men who haven't got any money.

"We don't like men who—
—gnash their pipes at you.

—Are too, too amusing at girl's expense. (This includes all the low forms of animal life who put ice down your back and greet you by slapping your rear in a misplaced spirit of camaraderie.)

Hart House Glee Club Will Support Band with Several Numbers

BANDSMEN WILL STRIKE

Many Innovations Will Make Program Interesting and Novel

After a grudging season of football, the Varsity Band has finally recovered its wind and will stage a monster rally and band concert in Convocation Hall on the evening of Wednesday, February 19. According to J. J. Speigel, the Captain of the Blue and White boys who believe that if you don't blow your own horn, no one else will, the main features of the event will be Clare Rous and his rousing one-man band and Captain John Slatter with his fifty-man band.

The Hart House Glee Club will be there in force, rendering several selections which they have been practising these many months. At the present time they are busy brushing up on technique, while the bluecoats are at the same time polishing off their repertoire and polishing up their instruments. There will be solos of trombone, cornet and baritone.

This year the band is not taking any chances with the audience, and is playing early in the program a piece entitled "On Strike" in which the mem-

U.C. GOVERNMENT SUFFERS DEFEAT IN RELIEF DEBATE

Absence of Prime Minister Leads to Downfall of Party in Power

MANY DISLIKE DOLE

Opposition Led by Rt. Hon. Mr. Nicol Advocates New System

Incidentally prodding the party in power for inefficiency and lack of legislative judgment, the Opposition at U.C. Parliament swept on to an overwhelming victory in yesterday's debate on the subject, "Resolved that this House favours the present administration of relief."

The absence of the Prime Minister, the Rt. Hon. Jack Minsky, was fatal to the chances of the government. The Rt. Hon. Mr. Shortt, now an Independent, proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that the Premier, supposedly investigating relief conditions up north, was enjoying a week of winter sport, and although his position was ably taken by the Minister of Public Welfare, the Rt. Hon. Mr. Pollock, the Government went down to defeat. The Hon. Mr. Dent, a new member of the Government, said, "The minister in charge of relief administration is the most honourable man in the community and knows the district in which he works. Centralization of control as advocated by the Opposition, would be

TERRIFIC STORMS TIE UP TRAFFIC

Highways Blocked, Cars Lost, Rail Service Disrupted by Blizzard

MDRE TO COME

The worst blizzard Ontario has seen in years is tying up traffic all over the province today. Marooned cars, stalled snowplows and cancelled bus trips are all evidences of an unusually heavy snow-storm.

Not only county roads but even the main highways are in an impassable state due to mountainous drifts. Motorists planning to leave the city were warned by Highway Department officials not to attempt interurban travel until abating winds and increased snow-plow efforts should bring about clearer routes.

Fifteen-foot drifts are reported from both Goderich and Orangeville and more snow is predicted for all parts of the province. The prospect of another twenty-four hours' snow or sleet threatens to block even railway traffic, it is learned from out-of-town reports.

In some parts, efforts to keep roads open are being abandoned as hopeless, and hundreds of travellers are faced with the necessity of setting up temporary lodging in farm-houses and road-side inns.

Students with classes outside their own faculty buildings would be well advised to allow themselves an extra five minutes to make the trip today. Queen's Park and the University circle are not impassable but foot-work will undoubtedly be slowed up considerably until the plows are put to work.

St. Michael's Banquet Featured Many Excellent Speeches Last Night

LARGEST ATTENDANCE

Marks and Connelly Included in Imposing List of Speakers

St. Michael's College was seen in a gay and festive mood last night, on the occasion of the annual college banquet. It had been promised that this year's banquet would be "bigger and better than ever". That is an age-old bromide but in this case the powers that be were not exaggerating. The refectory of the college was beautifully decorated and the school orchestra furnished music throughout the highly satisfactory dinner.

Following dinner Mr. B. B. O'Byrne, president of the graduating class, who was acting as toastmaster, introduced the speakers, among whom were the

U.C. Nominations

Nominations for the Moss Scholarship and the permanent executive took place yesterday at a meeting of the graduating class of University College. Those nominated for the Moss Scholarship were: Fanny Schwartz, Saul Rao, Bernard Schaeffer, Claude Bissell, Les Rowntree. Printed notices of the nominations will be posted on the date of the elections, which will probably be Tuesday of next week.

Nominations for the permanent executive were as follows: President, Hart Buck and Douglas Carter; Vice-President, Madge Shaw and Joyce Arnold; Treasurer, Doris Houston and Leslie Brennan; Secretary, Mervin Minsky.

PARTY TO BE HELD BY DATE BUREAU

Novel Affair Will Take Place in Campus Restaurant Next Tuesday

FDR MEMBERS ONLY

Plans are rushing to completion for the first Date Bureau party of history. Next Tuesday evening one of the campus restaurants will cater to a group of students holding a party. As they dance, play cards, and enjoy themselves, the students will look much like those at any other of the hundreds of undergraduate parties held each year.

Ordinary though they may seem, they will be making history next Tuesday evening. The Varsity Date Bureau made history in 1934, when it became the first successful attempt of its kind in North America. Press reports of its progress were given all over the United States and Canada, letters received from many points of the continent, and an article on its origin and progress written by the original operator was published by Liberty magazine for its millions of readers.

Another step, as great and important as the establishment of the Bureau in the first place, will be the inauguration

Engineers Make Game Attempt to Lift Cup but Fail by Four Points

TRINITY TAKES FENCING

Medicals Lose Cup Held Last Year Because of Lack of Entries

By Jim Tiller

The Fighting Farmers from O.A.C. blasted their way to a narrow 52-48 win over their old rivals in the fight game, S.P.S., at the senior interfaculty assault at Hart House last night, thus recovering the Davidson Cup held by Meds last year.

The Engineers won three final boxing bouts and one wrestling final while the men from Guelph knocked off a couple of decisions in each department. Michell won the fencing for Trinity, and five men from U.C. came next in the foil competition.

Young Bob McAdam of Trinity provided the biggest surprise of the evening by extending Varsity's No. 1 boxer, Johnnie Millson of S.P.S., to the limit in the 118 lb. boxing final. McAdam was exceptionally fast and exhibited remarkable gameness by sticking it out in the last round under Millson's heavier punching.

LIBERTY AND INCENTIVE SUBJECT OF PAPERS READ AT C.C.F. CLUB

That Socialism must come gradually and not by revolution in such an "unbalanced" country as Canada was the consensus of opinion of the members of the University C.C.F. Club who participated last night at the Women's Union in a discussion and debate prompted by the reading of four papers by members of the club on "Liberty and Incentive under Capitalism and Socialism".

Liberty under Capitalism is hampered by the fear of monetary insecurity, and incentive under this system is worth while only to the very small minority who are among the profit-making class; culture is within the reach of a favoured few, was the gist of the papers. In the opinion of these embryonic socialists, Socialism, by establishing an organized, co-operative state, will bring to all a sense of security and so an incentive to constructive as well as creative work.

Supplemental Exams

The attention of students registered in the Faculty of Arts is drawn to the change in date of the Supplemental examinations. These examinations will begin on August 20th.

TWO UP FOR THE PROFESSOR

The Prof. entered the lecture room with a brown case under his arm. He held it firmly, as though it were valuable; gingerly, as though it were delicate; lovingly, as though it were precious.

In his eye was a strange glint. About his lips played an ominous smile. His manner was furtive, yet defiant.

The case he placed carefully on the counter before him, caressed it affectionately, and left it regretfully to deliver the lecture.

It's in the bag

Near the end of the hour he spoke of Napoleon III and a "gentleman" who threw a bomb at him. An amusing incident, which made Nap. realize the wisdom of lending a hand in the unification of Italy. It was a good bomb, according to the Prof.

Then he took the case between his hands, fondling it. He smirked in a superior sort of way. Threateningly.

It's in the bag

"I have here—"

Startled gasps. Dilated eyes. Shuffling of feet.

Amazement, anxiety, and apprehension.

A bomb!

Oh! Oh! OH!!!

A bomb? Please, dear Prof., say it's not so. Pub-least! We didn't mean a word of it, honestly.

It's in the bag

"I have here..." Suspense. "... an essay for you to do."

Sighs, like escaping gas. Relief from tension.

A bomb? Ha! Such nonsense! Imagine, a bomb!

Dear, kind Prof.

Let's get out of here, fast...

Do The Olympics Foster Friendship?

Recent eruptions in the athletic circles now engaged in participation in the Olympic games bring to our attention an unpleasant situation which has been present in Olympic contests for some time.

Olympic games have for their objective the promotion of friendship between nations and people. The competitors themselves meet and associate with athletes of other countries and nations. As representatives of the countries they attempt to foster friendship between other individuals also representing their countries, in the hope that the interest taken in the athletes will extend to the country which they represent. But do they?

Every set of Olympic games has produced several squabbles and examples of poor sportsmanship which would not be tolerated within any of the countries which are represented.

Arguments over technical details and eligibility of athletes cause most of the disturbances. During the last Olympiad at Los Angeles there arose arguments over the technique employed by Jap swimmers, the actions of some Finns in track races, and other squabbles, all of which were very distasteful. None were of any particular merit in the matter of promoting international friendship.

The present series is already under way. And already the arguments have started. In fact in Canada the arguments were started before the athletes ever left. A fist fight evolved between two competing teams in yesterday's game. This no doubt would cause the athletes involved to forever associate the name of their opponents with a vision of peace and tranquility.

Now Canada has threatened to withdraw from the games if they are not allowed to play England in the finals. This is another example of unparalleled sportsmanship which should endear the name of Canada to all concerned.

These are merely a few examples. But the games have just begun. No doubt when they are over the number of disagreements will have reached unfortunately large proportions. And there will have been little by way of international friendship accomplished.

We do not mean to convey the impression that Olympic games do not accomplish anything. They do. But they do not accomplish what they should. When the governing bodies within the countries conduct their affairs in the manner in which they do in Canada the wonder is that they ever get the teams out of the country to compete.

Central Heating?

Radiators that cool instead of heating may seem to some people like a rather amusing variation of established custom, but those who have the misfortune to sit beside them consider them brutal. The radiator to which we refer particularly is in Room Thirteen of University College. This particular anomaly of the plumber's craft is right against the seats in the classroom, and the water which it contains is very little warmer than that from a cold water tap, at any rate during nine o'clock lectures.

If there were no radiator at all, the room would be nearly comfortable, but sitting next to a circulating cold water system takes a considerable amount of heat out of a person's body, leaving one subject to chills. It is by no means a pleasant way to start out the day.

Surely the famed Central Heating System which the University boasts is capable of supplying at least a certain amount of heat. We hope that something other than waiting for warm weather will be done about this.

The M. and P. Committee

(Submitted)

We are presented, this week, with the edifying sight of a committee of undergraduates in an Honor Arts course who, having laboured quietly to discover what was good and what improvable in their course, have presented a comprehensive and dignified report for consideration by the general body of the course. It is a fact that this was all done at the instance of a professor; and that in 1918 a committee in the same course made a similar report, which though then bitterly opposed by the Faculty bore fruit later in its every recommendation.

Students in the M. and P. course are by others set apart as a rum lot. To them is accorded a degree of condescending admiration, as having exiled themselves to a course more difficult and garnished with early failures than any other, wherein they inhale abstractions that make the ordinary head profess to swim. Very few, one in particular, of them are widely known as individuals, and that one not as a mathematician. But by this act of self-criticism (quality named by a great mathematician as of the four essentials of his tribe) the M. and P. course attains distinction among the thoughtful of Toronto.

An intelligent undergraduate, should have an inkling of what things, though unlearned, lie about his domain, and why they might be worth including. We contend that the other courses hereabouts need but a little less brain than M. and P., and therefore might profitably follow whither this has led.

Commendable is the restraint discovered in the report and ensuing meeting. Professors may be reassured by the fact that in neither (though barred from a share in either) was one of them mentioned by name. Assuredly nothing revolutionary appeared in either; this but hints at no large deviation from that perfection which for $115 we have a right to expect. But one meeting could not contain all the technical discussion arising from the report.

Whether this development might desirably lead is to a University-wide chain of critic-committees, in session year after year, each recognized by and reporting to their official societies, of which well-nigh every course has its own. For each course its internal and external constitution would be probed by its committee; and in federation they would correspond regularly with the Senate. Meanwhile, success to Mr. Jennings and all his Committee, and may they originate a complete student participation in the control of student affairs.

Final Examinations

During the past few years there has been a consistent tendency to eliminate final examinations in our public and high schools. Various experiments are now under trial, and the results being obtained are encouraging. The pupil is judged on his work and general reactions during the school term; if he rates sufficiently well, he is exempted from final examinations.

Authorities have described such reforms in terms of "Education on the March". If such is the case, should not universities be in the van of this progress? Why not abolish final examinations in college courses? Every student and most professors realize that studying for exams is a nerve-wracking proposition. Students in general courses realize that if they cram hard enough in the last few days the chances are that they can stuff enough knowledge into their heads to pass the examination. It has also been proved many times that the benefits of this last-minute cramming are short-lived.

In these years when too great emphasis is placed on athletics and social activities rather than on the prescribed curriculum, the natural tendency is to allow one's university work to lag until examinations loom on the horizon. Then there remains no choice but to cram. If a student's ability were judged on work done during the year, the necessity for cramming would disappear.

At the end of the term, the student would be judged by his record during the term. Such a system would keep the student constantly engrossed in his studies, and the final benefits derived from his steady work would far outdistance those which accrue from cramming.

Leap Year Song

Many maidens on the campus
Always try to snare and vampus
When we've got a steady;
But when we are out of lasses,
And receptive stroll to classes,
They are never ready.

Odd it is that educated
Femmes should get all decorated
For other women's flames.
Such phenomena lack sense,
But just go to prove to gents
The fickleness of dames.

Youth's determination to overcome insurmountable difficulties in the quest for education is generally considered to have died with the Lincolnian or log-cabin era, but we declare this idea to be entirely false. It was with a comfortable sensation of renewed faith in the future of the human race that we discovered, yesterday morning between 9 and 10 o'clock on the third floor of Victoria College, the pitifully eager figure of a first year coed crouched on the floor outside the door of the Pass English lecture. Her ear glued to the keyhole, she had her notebook open upon her lap and was frantically scribbling, scribbling . . .

THE

By E. S. W.

Tonight's hockey game between the Varsity team and the Toronto Ladies should be one of the highlights of the season. It will be interesting to see what the co-eds can do against a team that has been playing league games for some time. This is the first appearance of the Blue and White team as a team, and it's all a question of how well the girls can co-operate.

Mary Dignam's resolution has broken down, and she will be playing for Varsity. The team will be fairly representative of three of the Arts colleges, with five Vic girls, four St. Hilcan's and three from U.C. Come on out tonight and support the girls at the Royal Canadian Arena, at 7.40.

The basketball team is also having a game today at three-thirty at Oakwood Collegiate, against a group of O.C.E. demonstrators. It will not be a really serious game, but has been scheduled to give the girls practice. The squad has been practising just about every day, and should be in good form for the intercollegiate games.

If you are at all keen to make the swimming team which will go up to Hamilton on the twenty-seventh, it would be a good idea to put in an appearance in the Lillian Massey pool, and show what you can do. The team will be picked very soon, and Mr. Cochrane and Billy are going to have a hard time deciding who will represent Varsity. We hear that Fran Carlyle of U.C. is a pretty good diver, and also that there is a new star at Victoria, and one also in Therapy, but their names are as yet unknown.

MCGILL PUCKMEN
TO INVADE ARENA*Valiquette Out for Season, Red
Team Lacks McHugh,
Varsity Needs Breaks*INJURIES WEAKEN TEAMS

The Big Red hockey machine aptly named the Red Raiders, are on the threshold of their fourth intercollegiate senior hockey championship as they invade Varsity Arena with a five goal lead over the Blue squad. The game of last week played on the Forum ice demonstrated the full power of Dr. Bobby Bell's squad who literally fore-checked the Varsity team into the ice. Notwithstanding this fact, the senior Blues have always shown to advantage on the smaller ice surface of the Blue and White Arena and the McGill Red-men have never been able to score a convincing victory here.

The serious injury incurred by Wilbert Valiquette will keep the fast skating left winger out of action the rest of the season and the Blues' task becomes even greater. Due to some technicality Hollie McHugh, stellar ciadel guard of the McGill squad, will also be out of the intercollegiate tilt and Robert A. Pocand of the intermediate squad will take his place between the posts. Champions for the last three successive years McGill are literally in the thick of things in the Montreal senior league and hope to add further honours on Saturday night. Fred Wigle, stellar centre of the McGill rugby squad, will be found on the Red defense. Paul Pidcock, one of the outstanding puck-chasers in senior hockey, will play as an alternate wing, with Gordie Crutchfield, brother of Nels Crutchfield, at centre.

The McGill Redmen have two outstanding well balanced forward lines but the Varsity sextet have devoted some time to breaking up their effectiveness and will attempt to smother the Red offensive threats with counter attacks. Captain Normie McClelland will lead the Blue attacks and with a few breaks Varsity should at least cut down the McGill lead and provide the Blue supporters with a rousing exhibition of offensive hockey.

Nora Loeb of University College will oppose it.

The winners of this debate will meet Victoria in the final of the intercollegiate series. The victorious college will then be awarded the Intercollegiate Shield at present held by Trinity College.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Jim Tiller

The Red Raiders from McGill will be with us tomorrow evening, but not to attend the Leap Year tea-dances. It's the annual hockey-classic, McGill at Varsity. True, too true, the Blues are down five goals and the task of keeping the Redmen from their fourth consecutive hockey title will be—difficult, shall we say. But let's forget about goals-on-the-round-to-count and turn out to see a hockey game which Bailey's Boys have an excellent chance of winning, for reasons related elsewhere in this issue.

Fred Wigle of rugby fame performs on the defense for the Bell-coached squad. Rather unusual to find a man a stellar performer in both rugby and hockey. Nels Crutchfield's brother, Gordie, is reported scintillating on the McGill line-up. Hockey seems to run in some families. McGill's good goalie, Hollie McHugh, is barred from tomorrow's game through some technicality, offsetting to some extent the loss from the Blue and White ranks of Wilbert Valiquette.

Dr. Brown took the can off rooting at the senior interfaculty assault-arms last night, and how the boys whooped it up. They hooted and yelled and cheered the participants and even raised a few good-natured razberries for the referee. The spectators enjoyed themselves, but we wonder if the boxers and wrestlers approved of all the noise.

O.A.C. and S.P.S. each secured four individual titles but O.A.C. gets the Davidson Cup once more because they won more preliminary bouts. They were perhaps fortunate in this. For instance, if Jock Pigott, S.P.S., one of the best men on the Varsity boxing team, had even had one scheduled bout, S.P.S. would have won the Cup, assuming a victory for Pigott of course. And if you don't think Pigott's good, ask McAdam, O.A.C.'s heavyweight entrant, who hardly got touching him in their exhibition bout. It was fortunate for McAdam that Charley Pocius was unable to contest the heavyweight title.

Of the better known Varsity boxers, Tom Powell won the welterweight division by a default and Freddie Smith was handed an easy win when his opponent, Craig, from O.A.C., made a bone-head play. Floored but not hurt in the first round, Craig rested for nine counts and then got up on the tenth stroke—too late. Johnnie Millson ran into a surprise battle in Bob McAdam, in the 118 lb. boxing. McAdam was fast and clever, and Johnnie had to get a bit rough before he could take the decision.

The intermediate basketballers, the Sr. U.C. basketballers, and two sports-cries are snow-bound in hockey, or were at an early hour this morning. Both teams won their games by good margins and the sports-writers got a trip without having to write a story about it, so we understand the enforced sojourn in the vicinity of MacDonald Hall is not as bad as it might have been. But you'd better come home today boys.

U.C. HOCKEYETTES
WIN GAME BY 3-0
OVER ST. MICHAEL'S

The U.C. girls' hockey squad defeated St. Michael's 3-0 last night in the Varsity rink. It was a hard grind for both teams, the wind and snow making play very difficult. The first period was largely spent in searching for the puck among the drifts, and neither team scored. Jean Atkinson seemed the least affected, and played a beautiful game for U.C., making all three goals. Marjory Mosbaugh and Kitty Devlin showed up well on St. Mike's defence, but were unable to get the puck down to their forwards.

U.C.: Jean Atkinson, Betty Guest, Buntz Lang, Margo Mickle, Peggy Snyder, Marite Buck, Agnes Mulcahy, Marnie Brett, Laurie Patten, Kay Robertson, Cis Taylor, Fran Walters.

St. Mike's: Justina MacMartin, Mary Vining, Eileen Bradley, Mary Hutchinson, Marjory Mosbaugh, Kitty Devlin, Elizabeth Gartlan, Katharine Weiner, Katharine Mulville.

PROFESSOR ISHERWOOD SPEAKS AT WYCLIFFE ON NEW TESTAMENT

Continuing his discussion of "New Testament Studies" at Wycliffe yesterday afternoon, Professor Isherwood set forth a comparison between Jesus and a great conquering general.

He described him as bringing home to the presence of God his captives from earth, the chief one of which was captivity itself.

Apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers were specified as the gifts of Jesus to the church. The apostles were defined as the messengers of God, prophets as the interpreters of His word, and evangelists as the bearers of His good news.

The work of pastors and teachers is to lend personal aid to all and to lead them to a deeper knowledge of God.

SENIOR HOOPSTERS
HOPE TO WIN TWICE*Blue Basketball Squad Invade
Kingston and Montreal
Over Week-end*BLUES IN FINE CONOITION

By George Vair

This week-end Varsity's senior basketball club got the acid test when they play two intercollegiate games in Kingston and Montreal on two successive nights. Friday night the Blues meet the Tricolour and a win is necessary to keep the 1934-5 champions in the running for this year's cage honours. Saturday Coach Van Wagner's Redmen provide the entertainment and although the McGill outfit are at the bottom of the heap the game is vitally important to Queen's Parkers in order to keep on even terms with the Tricolour.

The so-called Golden Tornadoes of Kingston started the season in high gear and have yet to lose a game while the Blues went down to defeat in their opening appearance at London. The Queen's squad boast a decided advantage in height over Toronto and are reputed to be capable ball-handlers, coupled with a fast breaking offensive which has carried them to an early lead in every game which has been never overcome. In their last time out the Tricolour played an exhibition game with the St. Catharines Grads and raised their total to five consecutive victories after a tidy battle saw them come out on top 30-28, Lloyd Edwards, Cunningham and Bews, who have been carrying the brunt of the Queen's offensive combined to tally 18 points.

Warren Stevens and his strong squad of hoop artists are determined to send the Tricolour down to their first defeat and after watching them in practice the

Two Toronto Teams
Win Guelph Games*Both Intermediate and U.C.
Squads Victorious Last Night*SCORES DECISIVE

Varsity teams took two decisive basketball victories from O.A.C. squads at Guelph last night. Varsity intermediates strengthened their hold on first place in the intercollegiate series.

In the first game the Blue team won from the Aggies by the score of 35-18. In the interfaculty contest the undefeated U.C. senior team downed the O.A.C. interfaculty team 26-17.

In the intercollegiate contest Varsity were superior in every department of the game. Their passing plays had the O.A.C. team completely disorganized and the latter were forced to garner most of their points on free throws.

In the opening period Varsity scored five baskets before their opponents countered. Shortly afterwards Peters ripped the twine for two more. The first half ended with Varsity leading 20-9.

The Blue team went on a scoring rampage to open the second half and chalked up ten points to one point secured by Guelph on a free throw. Before the game ended O.A.C. managed to get six more points.

Peters with seventeen out of thirty-five points, was outstanding for the Toronto team. Cooper was a tower of strength on the Blue defence. McLaughlin, Singer and Dougherty figured in the fast passing plays which won the victory for Varsity.

In the interfaculty game U.C. seniors broke fast and ran up nine points to one for Guelph in the first period. The stonewall defence of the red and white team broke up the attacks of the Aggie aggregation.

At the end of the first half the score stood 14-7 for U.C.

The opening of the second half found the Guelph team adopting roughing tactics in an attempt to disorganize the red and white defence. However, the defence refused to be shaken and the game ended with the score at 26-17.

EMMANUEL COLLEGE
TROUNCES WYCLIFFE IN BASKETBALL GAME

A determined band of warriors from Emmanuel severely trounced Wycliffe 23-17 in an interfaculty basketball game in the upper gym, Hart House, yesterday afternoon. By virtue of their victory Emmanuel took over the leadership of their group from Knox, with whom they were tied previously.

The Emmanuel quintet had only one substitute in reserve but their starting formation literally swamped the starting Wycliffe five. However, their luck was not of the right variety and in consequence they led only 13-8 at the interval.

In the second half the Emmanuel men began to click repeatedly by wonderful work around the basket and after ten minutes led 21-9. Wycliffe, whose lack of organized defensive cost them the game, began to get going in the last five minutes as the Emmanuel team, weak in reserves, tired badly. They sunk four field goals rapidly with but one reply from the winners and were pressing hard as the game ended. Emmanuel (23): Jones 4, Edwards 10, Gardiner 9, Todd, Bates, Breckenridge.

Wycliffe (17): Ruch 4, Fairweather 7, Cardy 6, Kibblewhite, Simmons, Coleman, Wilkinson, Cheves.

THEATRE GROUPS
PRAISE PRIZE PLAY

Drama Festival Award Winner to be Presented Here by "Theatre of Action"

FIRST TIME IN TORONTO

For the first time the Toronto public is to be given an opportunity of judging for itself the merits of the "new social theatre" when Clifford Odette's "Waiting for Lefty" is presented at Margaret Eaton Hall the last three days of February.

For over a year this play has been the topic of heated discussion among critics and theatre-goers of Broadway and the smaller Broadways.

Generally it is acclaimed good art and impressive propaganda. Only last week "Waiting for Lefty" won the British Columbia regional drama festival and will be presented at the Dominion Festival in Ottawa.

The play, which uses a technique new to the American stage, has for a setting a strike meeting of the New York taxi-driver's union. It shows how the issue is decided in each individual's mind and in the union.

The production in Toronto has a very capable cast, most of whom are students at the University of Toronto or regular members of the "Theatre of Action" group. The cast includes Art Bernstein, Hazel Oldman, J. Graham, Harold Acker, Bert Gold, Helen Coleman, Arthur Pettigrew, Blair Cutting, and other well-known actors. The play is under the direction of Miss Jim Watts, well-known director of the "Theatre of Action" and Martin Loeb, prominent undergraduate director. The bill includes "Private Hicks", a peace play by Albert Maltz, which has also won great praise in New York. The presentation is under the auspices of the Student League and the "Theatre of Action". Tickets are on sale daily at Hart House box office between the hours of twelve and two.

from Roy Kemp of Victoria. Lossing missed dozens of blows but subjected Kemp to considerable punishment. Only Kemp's fine physical condition kept him in the fight until the final bell.

Freddie Smith of S.P.S. won an easy decision over Steve Ivan of O.A.C. in the 125 lb. bout when the latter failed to rise at the count of ten after being floored in the first round, although he was evidently fresh and unhurt.

The hardest boxing bout on the card was the 155 lb. set-to which went to Norm Bolter of Meds.

Tom Powell of Forestry won the 145 lb. event by default and McAdam of O.A.C. got the heavy title by the same route when Charley Pocius of St. Mike's was unable to compete. Jock Pigott of S.P.S. won the light-heavy by virtue of being the only entry in that division, and then gave McAdam a neat boxing lesson in an exhibition match.

In the wrestling bouts, Keefe of V.C. upset the dope by taking the decision from Johnson of Meds in the Houle of S.P.S. needed all his strength and agility to win from MacKenzie of Meds in the 145 lb. bout. Van Allen of St. Mike's displayed the most scientific wrestling of the evening, by taking two falls from Bell of O.A.C. in the 175 lb. bout, the only one to not go the full time limit.

MUSIC GROUP DISCUSSES THREE GREAT COMPOSERS

The lives of the three great romantic composers, Schumann, Mendelssohn and Chopin, were discussed by Miss Wilma Stevenson at the Music Appreciation Group held in Wymilwood yesterday. It was Franz Schubert who paved the way for the romantic movement in music, said Miss Stevenson. His genius was recognized at an early age but his means were limited, yet despite these obstacles Schubert became one of the greatest composers.

To give a special colouring to his music Schubert made use of the alternation of the major and the minor, which Miss Stevenson illustrated by playing some of his compositions. Schumann's music was characterized by its original rhythms, Mendelssohn's by the writing of instrumental songs without words, while Chopin is chiefly remarkable for the great achievements made in piano composition.

lar, was highly interesting. The professor expressed his dissatisfaction with the present lecture system and explained in detail his own ideal system, which he hopes one day to see in operation. The professor's idea was simply the abandoning of lectures in which the professor talks rapidly on about the subject matter for fifty minutes—and the average student assimilates about a quarter of what he is saying. In its stead, he would substitute study groups in which the students could discuss and transfer the knowledge they had, with the professors assisting when needed.

Jack Oakley, of the Varsity senior rugby team and an alumnus of the school, also spoke to the group. Other former St. Michael's men included B. J. McGuire, editor of The Varsity and Gus Greco, as well as Warden Bickersteth of Hart House, were also present. The speeches had the virtue of being brief, completely entertaining and entirely natural and easy in their delivery. They were intermingled with entertainment by Dan Egan, Edward Houlihan, Louis Burns and Edward Walsh.

Attendance was excellent, the highest at St. Michael's College Arts banquet has seen. In popular opinion the dinner more than adequately lived up to the claims made for it.

Included in the arrangements committee were Thomas Sullivan, Edward Hartford, A. Baldwin, D. L. McGivern, C. M. Drum and James Noble.

fatal. Furthermore, cash relief, as also suggested, would be spent on drink and red noses instead of full stomachs would be the result.

The Opposition, as led by the Rt. Hon. Mr. Nichol, argued that relief, as presently administered, provides an opportunity for graft, apathy and corruption. They showed how a rift is being made in the social structure by the present dolo system. Unemployment insurance was advocated as an alternative measure. The Hon. Mr. Miller summed up the remarks of the Opposition in this manner: There is no real system of relief. It is a ramshackle lean-to, set up for temporary purposes in 1931 and still existing. Our present administration gives neither relief nor security. It squats over the country like a vampire and sucks the blood of the people.

Gold medal awards by the Royal Society of Canada to two University of Toronto men were hailed here today as tribute to Dr. Pelham Edgar's outstanding contribution over a period of years to Canadian literature and to special work in history by W. Stewart Wallace.

Professor of English at Victoria College, Dr. Edgar is president of the Canadian Authors' Association and of the newly-formed Association of Canadian Bookmen.

His most recent major book was "Art of the Novel", published about a year ago. Among other better-known works of Dr. Edgar is "Henry James, Man and Artist".

Mr. Wallace, University of Toronto librarian, is secretary of the Champlain Society and is a leading authority on Canadian history. He has produced historical text books for public schools, but much of his writing has been in connection with publications of the Champlain Society.

Dr. J. B. Collip, professor of organic and biological chemistry at McGill University has been awarded the Flavell medal for distinguished work in the field of natural science. The Lorne Pierce medal for achievement in literature was awarded Dr. Pelham Edgar and the Tyrell medal for outstanding work in history was given to Stewart Wallace.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Night

THREE HUNDRED COUPLES

Lists for the School At-Home were opened last Thursday, for a budgeted number of 250 couples, but before the end of the day the signatures over-reached that figure by thirty. To date, more than forty graduates have applied for tickets. Supplementary lists have been opened and are rapidly being filled, with fifty signers on Friday. The Formal does not take place until this coming Friday.

The dancers will come from all parts of British North America, as one ticket-seeker is from Dawson City and another calls Newfoundland home. Since the Engineering Society is sponsoring a large convention on Friday, with prominent engineers from all over America in attendance, it is believed that there will be representatives from most states of the Union at the dance that night.

The party committee is making plans for a floor show, but have so far not discovered just what they want in that line. Arrangements are being made to have a professional decorator of note (Continued on Page 4)

MCGILL DEBATES TEAM HERE ON FEBRUARY 26

The Hon. C. G. Power Will Also Speak This Time

The next Hart House debate will be held on Wednesday, February 26, the debates committee announced last night.

The debate will be unique in having three guest speakers. Two debaters will come down from McGill University, Montreal, and Hon. C. G. Power, federal minister of pensions and national health, will also attend and speak.

This debate will be the regular inter-collegiate debate and the elections for next year's debates committee will also be held that night. Mr. Power had planned to attend the last Hart House debate but owing to the death of King George V, he was unable to and will make the trip to Toronto for the debate a week from Wednesday.

The motion will read "That Quebec nationalism is consistent with Canadian nationalism."

Bernard Shaffer, senior student in law from University College, will speak on the paper with Charles Hoag, senior in the faculty of applied science. The two visiting McGill undergraduates will also speak on the paper and Mr. Power will speak later in the debate.

There seems to be a general agreement amongst the Japanese students of this University that a war between the United States and Japan is now an utter impossibility. WELL-KNOWN PACIFIST TO SPEAK AT UNION

Miss Kathleen D. Courtney
Will Talk on "Peace and Public Opinion"

The women of University College are having the opportunity today of hearing Miss Kathleen D. Courtney, a well-known authority on world peace, who is speaking at a tea at the Union, on "Peace and Public Opinion".

Miss Courtney is honorary secretary of the British Women's Peace Crusade, an association composed of several great national women's movements which was formed in 1928 to work for the acceptance of the Kellogg Peace Pact. She is also acting president of the disarmament committee of the women's international organization at Geneva, and a member of the national executive of the British League of Nations Union.

Miss Courtney was an ardent supporter of the suffragette movement which was at its height when she graduated from Oxford. She soon became a figure of national importance and has retained her interest in the position of women in social and political life.

The Press Takes a Beating At an Interfaculty Meeting

The Press took quite a beating on Friday afternoon at St. Joseph's. The Women's Intercollegiate Debating Union put hand to edgell and laid right into them. The motion was "Resolved, that in the interests of justice, newspaper accounts of crime should be suppressed." We escaped with surface wounds only.

"Newspaper accounts of crime are not pleasant reading. Let us have good, wholesome articles that elevate rather than degrade."

We always liked Popeye, too. "Look about you on the street car. You see many different people reading the same newspaper."

Lady, the depression's over. Most people can afford their own paper now. "One of the best things a newspaper can do is purge the police."

Perhaps it would provide the necessary roughage.

Sparking repartee—

CRIME ACCOUNTS IN PAPERS

U.C. defeated the motion upheld by St. Michael's that "in the interests of Justice, Newspaper Accounts of Crimes Should Be Suppressed", on Friday afternoon at St. Joseph's College in the semi-final debate of the women's intercollegiate contest.

Mary Gallagher, first speaker for the affirmative, stressed the effect of newspaper publicity on youthful readers. "When young people read about crimes they want to commit them, and their families become the innocent victims of publicity. The accounts are exaggerated and gruesome details are enlarged, so that the public, incensed by the horror (Continued on Page 4)

FINAL SCORE 43-32

By George Vair

Coach Ralph Jack's Golden Tornadoes took a pronounced lead in the current senior intercollegiate basketball series when they smashed their way to a convincing 43-32 victory over the Blue basketballers on the Tricolour court, Friday night. The winners were "hot" from the opening whistle and won the game in the opening period, holding a 14 point lead (26-12) at half-time.

The striped cagers showed their proficiency at long shots from well outside the foul line when Bewes threw a perfect hoop in the opening minute. Edwards dribbled right under the basket for a quick hoop and Finley sank another long shot to make it 6-0. Varsity settled down and collected two baskets on efforts by Connelly and Neil Sullivan. For the next fifteen minutes the homesters had things all their own way and on a variety of block and switch plays, and tip off plays, which found the Blue defense a perfect sieve the Golden cagers netted nine hoops to (Continued on Page 4)

Montreal, Feb. 15.—Rattling home thirty-five points in the final twenty minutes, after trailing 16-15 at half-time, Varsity's senior cagers swamped Van Wagner's McGill entry in the intercollegiate race 50-30 on the Montreal high school court, Saturday night. Toronto and Western are now tied for second place while the Redmen, long holders of the Wilson Cup, emblematic of senior supremacy, are alone in the cellar position with four losses on the debit side of the ledger.

Showing effects of the prolonged rail trip and the hard game at Kingston on the previous night the Blues played lethargic ball in the opening period while the Redmen displayed a nice passing attack and remarkable ability on sinking set shots from all angles and at variable distances. At that the visitors were only a point shy (16-15) at half-time.

The Redmen continued to press with the opening of the final period and increased their lead to five points on long shots by Gormley and Brown. Marks, suffering from a bad case of "hot" hands, continued his scoring spree where he left off before the rest period by sinking a foul and dropping in three field goals, while McGill counted one point. He batted down a McGill pass, secured the ball and broke fast to beat the opposing Redmen for the first hoop (Continued on Page 3)

The Red Raiders from McGill swamped the Varsity hockeyists by a 10-3 score to retain the Queen's Cup for the fourth successive year at Varsity Arena Saturday night. McGill, entering the second intercollegiate game with a five goal lead from the first encounter, shone in all departments, turning out a fast-skating and well-drilled crew with passing reduced to a science.

UNIVERSITY OF ALBERTA TO AWARD SCHOLARSHIPS

New Graduate Openings in Research — Value
of $600

Two graduate scholarships of the value of $600.00 each are available for research at the University of Alberta for the session 1936-37. These scholarships are open to graduates of any Canadian university.

Any graduate or graduating student who may be interested should communicate with the Registrar of the University of Alberta not later than March 15th, and attach to his or her application an official record of the candidate's undergraduate and graduate work, together with at least two letters of reference. Definite details should be given as to the field of study in which the applicant proposes to work.

HOLLIS LECTURES AT ST. JOSEPH'S

Author of "St. Thomas More"
Lectures on Same Subject

FAMOUS FOR "UTOPIAN"

Christopher Hollis, the prominent historian who has recently published a book entitled "St. Thomas More", gave a lecture on the same subject at St. Joseph's Convent auditorium on Sunday evening.

Thomas More, who is so renowned because of his famous Utopian was also remarkable in his death and in the reputation he enjoys among famous Englishmen of letters. More stood unsupported in his death both from within and without. He himself had never sympathized strongly with the doctrine of papal authority by divine right, and added to that an Englishman had no natural bias to be patriotic to the pope since he was French and the Hundred Years' War was in progress. An unsympathetic attitude surrounded him since he was the only Catholic layman to refuse to take the oath that Henry VIII demanded. Even his own family did not understand or sympathize and so he stood utterly alone in his conviction.

England has always had a soft spot for him. Even those whose views sharply disagreed with those of the Catholic religion spoke highly of him. Dean Swift labelled him as a "man of the greatest virtue that these islands ever produced." Southey and Macaulay agreed on only two points, their hatred for Catholicism and their reverence for Thomas More.

One Thing at One Time

Several of the smaller "selective" colleges in the United States have gone in for stock-taking. They have always examined applicants for admission very carefully in order to admit only a superior class of student, yet they feel that those persons whom they graduate do not rank with graduates of European universities. Some of them have instituted changes which appear radical to the American point of view, although familiar in Europe for generations.

Of these, one stands out predominantly as feasible and to be recommended here. That is the system of Intensive Training in courses. Under that system, a student who is now taking three hours a week of English for twenty-eight weeks would instead take English lectures for three hours a day during twenty-eight lecture days, and TAKE NO OTHER SUBJECT. At the end of that time he would try an examination in English, then embark on his next subject.

It is the experience of most students that any subject becomes interesting if enough work is done in it. If the student cannot become interested in a subject, obviously he does not belong in the course. When one is interested primarily in English, French is likely to be a bore, and a class to be dreaded. Even though the importance of French to a student of English is apparent to him. Consequently, he does his work in English but neglects the French. Even worse than that, the subjects of minor interest to him are likely to dull his enthusiasm for the subject of his choice. He becomes a drifter, and ends by cramming enough to pass each year's examinations, retaining little if any of the knowledge gained by the year's work.

On the other hand, if he were to take his English first, the decks would be cleared for action with French. As it would be his only subject, he would become interested in it and do more work in it.

The Intensive Training system eliminates the nervous strain of grouped final examinations, a strain that is all too real and sometimes leaves permanent effects on the nervous system. It also gets the failing student out of the course earlier in the year, saving money for the university and for himself. It is more flexible than the present system, since a student could enrol with the commencement of lectures in any subject.

The Intensive system of training is certainly the only method that would be tolerated in business. To attempt to teach a junior in any line of business five separate and distinct phases of the work would seem ridiculous to the business man, in fact to anyone but an educationalist.

We think Intensive Training a panacea for many of the ills afflicting higher education at the present time, and if the University of Toronto has not before investigated the possibilities which it offers such an experiment would be enlightening.

Lesson for to-day

The demands made by modern society upon its members are numerous and rigorous. Certain things must be done, in a conventional manner and at a stated time. It all becomes habitual; even to being on time—or being late. Students are not models of punctuality. There are usually some "lates" at every lecture; and, as these people are violating a convention, we might seek the causes.

Some are late because they don't walk fast enough; others because they don't start soon enough. Both causes are unpardonable since they are the result either of laziness or faulty judgment. Some are late because of reasons beyond their control. If this must occur regularly, the students should lay their case before the lecturer. He will probably be sympathetic and grant an unwritten pardon for edging in just a few minutes late. It will put the situation in its true light by demonstrating that you have a natural aversion to being rude.

Then there are the adventurous spirits who take a chance on the professor being late. This is a poor gamble and it not to be encouraged. People who practice it are in a class with those who take their time in going to a lecture room with a back door. Statistics show that the percentage of lates is smaller in rooms with front doors only.

Attending a lecture late is a breach of good manners. The disturbance which it causes is usually of lesser importance. Any professor is certainly justified in asking students to attend lectures punctually or not at all. Most of them are lenient in this regard, and in return, students should make it a habit to co-operate.

A Sikh Replies

The following letter was received in response to a news story which appeared some time ago and carried some comment regarding conditions in India which a native of that country wishes to correct.

Toronto, Feb. 13, 1936.

Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

It was through the columns of the Toronto Daily Star, Feb. 7, that I learnt how Capt. R. G. Cavell had enlightened and entertained the Rotarians in a post-prandial speech. To question the intellectual equipment of the Captain would be neither necessary nor polite; to expect him to meet the annoying demands of cold logic would be to show a lack of both logic and sense of humour. Instead of criticizing the good Captain, I would prefer to share a glass of good whiskey with him, and console myself with the idea that it isn't the Captain but his whiskey that is at fault. However, for the sake of those inhabitants of "Toronto the Good", who are only too anxious to hear what may lull them into self-complacency, I have ventured to say a few words.

If the Captain had confined himself to the discussion of life in the barracks in India, I would have remained silent. But he has stepped into other than his own territory—the social and religious life of the people—which must have amused, bewildered, delighted and exasperated in turn, but apparently left him no wiser.

Hinduism is "the most terrible religion in the world", declares the Captain. This has been the burden of many a song. The melody of denouncing voices leaves one thinking, if thinking be indeed possible, as to how such an "obnoxious" religion could survive for five thousand years, and even in its "degeneracy" produce world famous figures such as Tagore, Gandhi, Radhakrishnan, Bose and Raman (the last two are Nobel Prize winners in science). The fact of the matter is that Hinduism, being a very tolerant, eclectic, and all-inclusive system of thought, embraces in its wide sweep everything from a very gross form of worship to highly subtle metaphysics. Instead of being a rigid theology, it is a panorama of creeds extending from the crust of the earth to the stars in the sky. No wonder, then, the Captain took what was within his grasp!

Mohammedans, said the Captain, are anxious to "slit Hindus' gizzards" and "almost as eager to perform the operation on Christians". Christians, however, armed to the teeth, can well take care of themselves. But the poor Hindus must be protected by the army which the Captain has honoured for 12 years, and which, I presume, has enabled him to retire on a substantial pension. The Hindu must be saved.

When dealing with the Sikhs, the Captain lets his enthusiasm for these stern soldiers run away with him. "Their uniform hardness," he told the Rotarians, "is produced by tossing every new born baby on the roof. If he tries to hang on they save him; if not they just let him drop". As a system of deductive logic it is superb; as a statement of fact, it exists only in the Captain's unique imagination. Moreover, the houses of the Sikhs invariably have flat roofs, so if the baby be tossed up properly there is no chance of his dropping.

Being a Sikh myself, however, I can assure you that it is a lie, although I half wish it were true. The Captain, who has such an admiration for the Sikhs, should have fabricated a story less slanderous and insulting to them even if the Rotarians had to be amused to facilitate their digestion. The joke of it all, however, is that even so-called educated people swallow lies such as this about India with incredible credulity.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Sunday Evening Concert

The guest artists of the Sunday night concert in Hart House were Harold Sunberg, violinist and Wilma Stevenson, pianist. The three selections on their program were "Sonata in G Minor" (Tartini), "Sonata in B Flat Major" (Mozart) and "Sonata in A Major" (Cesar Franck).

Tartini's composition was played with the variety of feeling necessary to interpret the work by Mr. Sunberg and Miss Stevenson's accompaniment was faultless. Seldom has the pathos of this selection been more poignantly brought out.

Mozart's sonata offered a sharp contrast to the first number with its gay, harmonious rapidity. The way in which it was rendered left one in a highly satisfied frame of mind.

Franck's sonata, the concluding selection, offered a fine climax, with its four parts which brought out so many moods.

To offer any criticism other than complimentary to the program given by these artists would be sheer effrontery, for it cannot be otherwise described than superb. W.J.M.

Massey Hall

The presentation of ancient Latin superstitions and beliefs in curses was resurrected again last Saturday night when the Canadian Grand Opera Association presented Rigoletto in Massey Hall. This tragic figure, after hearing the curse called down upon him, sees his world crumble, when his daughter Gilda is stolen from him, and finally through his desire for vengeance on the Duke which results in the death of his daughter. The production was abbreviated somewhat, and several numbers were lacking, the closing scene especially, where Rigoletto is carrying away his dying daughter.

In the role of Rigoletto Irvine Levine failed dismally in his singing due to a cold, but played his part well enough, dramatically. In several instances (Continued on Page 4)

VARSITY JUNIORS VICTORIOUS IN FRIDAY HOCKEY GAME

Blues Manage to Effect Tasty Victory Over Young Rangers

LOSE ON SATURDAY

Double Game Sees Varsity Win 4-3 and Lose 5-1

The blue and white juniors concluded their O.H.A. season over the week-end by dividing the decisions of two games at the Gardens with Ed Wilkey's Young Rangers. The 4-3 Varsity victory on Friday afternoon was particularly tasty as it was this same Mr. Wilkey, coach of the Young Rangers, who rather pressingly invited the junior blues early last week to default the game. Saturday's score was 5 to 1 for the black-garbed Rangers.

Grigor gave the Rangers the first advantage in Friday's affair when he broke from a Varsity power play to score after ten minutes of the initial frame. Then the Queen's Park team warmed to their work and made their black-shirted opponents look as slow as an outfit of undertakers, during the middle period. Brown credited the first collegian count when he appeared to have sunk the puck in Braithwaite's pads and then pushed the goalie in the mesh with enough vigor to have sent him out into Carlton Street. A neat passing display with Craig on the firing end registered for Varsity one minute before the second period closed.

Then came the third chapter with the Rangers sending all hands up the ice, keeping Campbell under the Varsity pads, as excited as a sub-deb at a charity ball; and Lindsay, who was in the cooler one moment and scoring the next; and that final Ranger goal with 50 seconds to play; and—oh yes, we won our first O.H.A. game of the season 4 to 3.

The blues were pelted badly by Lady Luck on Saturday when the Young Rangers skated off the ice with a 5-1 victory, although their actual margin on the play was only slight. Art Fremes drove the lone University tally into the rigging, while Grigor, McDonald, Thompson, Patterson and Turney, in that order, lit the crimson lamp for the Rangers.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

The Varsity girls certainly demonstrated their hockey ability Friday night when they defeated the Toronto Ladies team 3-0, and skated rings around them while doing so. Nearly all the play took place around the Ladies' goal, and the Varsity goalies, first Maisie Cowan and then Marg MacDonald, had an easy evening.

The Port Dover team, which was to play the Toronto Pals in the next game, didn't get through because of snowdrifts on the highway, so seven of the Varsity team stayed on and with Sarah McCausland of the Toronto Ladies in goal, played the Pals in an exhibition game, and held them to a scoreless tie in two ten-minute periods. This augurs well for the co-eds' chances in the league, and they should be able to take the Pals, when the entire team is playing.

Elaine Knight played a sterling game for Varsity. All the girls did as a matter of fact. Unfortunately Jean Atkinson suffered an injured ankle and knee, when she was skated into the boards in the exhibition game, and had to be taken to the dressing room. This will materially decrease U.C.'s strength in their encounter with St. Hilda's Tuesday night, in the last game of the inter-collegiate series, since it is feared Jean will not be able to play.

SENIOR SCHOOL WIN FROM JR. MEOS WATERPOLOISTS

Final Score is 2-1 and Victory Puts S. P. S. in Finals

A do-or-die Sr. S.P.S. team that would not yield to obvious handicaps eked out a narrow but deciding 2-1 overtime win over the hapless Junior Meos waterpolo team Friday night. The score on the round was 4-3 and enabled the men from the little red schoolhouse to enter the finals for the Eckhardt Trophy against Victoria.

Thompson, in the Sr. S.P.S. citadel, was phenomenal, stopping shots from all angles. In the first period the School men got first blood when Lillie broke free to get a shot that just evaded Taylor's fingers. From then on play became faster and rougher as Meos did everything but score and School playing a cautious defense. School had a man ejected for a foul and the crowd went into hysterics as Meos were thwarted by Thompson's brilliance. Just as the whistle went for half-time McGill of Meos put one in the nets but it was disallowed because time was up. Entering the second period with a man advantage Meos could do nothing right, the Schoolmen meanwhile threatening with sallies that nearly counted. Two minutes to go Adams scored the tying goal amidst loud cheers. School at full strength, almost scored before the final gong.

Just after the start of the overtime period, 3 minutes each way, a seeming good omen for Meos occurred when School lost a man via the foul route. The first three minutes of overtime was one-sided, Meos driving hard and S.P.S. laying back but threatening. Towards the end of the second three minute period on a throw in Zachanko scored the deciding goal, the Meos being unable to tie it up before the time limit.

Final games Wednesday and Friday, Sr. S.P.S. vs Victoria.

PLAYERS' GUILD CONTINUE SUCCESSFUL PRESENTATION

"Victoria Regina" to be Shown in Part on Thursday Evening

Two scenes from Lawrence Housman's banned play "Victoria Regina" are to be presented next Thursday evening by the U.C. Players' Guild as the choice for a pot pourri of dramatic entertainment.

"Victoria Regina" is the play that was banned in England for representing the Queen on the stage. It is at present playing to capacity houses in New York City with Helen Hayes in the feature role. In this instance the private life of the Queen will be played by Myrtle Hillyer.

Producer Gordon Robertson has prepared a gruesome horror play, "The Sister's Tragedy", as the second offering. It is a tale of piety running amuck and thence chief part of the running amuck will be done by the capable Lucy Jane Grabbell.

Anne Ferguson, it is understood, will give a dramatic monologue; a scene from the hilarious "1066 and all That" has been adapted for the stage; there will be old English songs; and still other things if Mr. Robertson can keep up the pressure.

Thomas Jefferson founded the Democratic party; Franklin Roosevelt dumb-founded—Dewey Short, Mississippi representative.

The U.C.-St. Hilda's hockey game scheduled for Tuesday night has been postponed until Thursday evening, while the Varsity girls hockey team will play Toronto Pals Tuesday night at 9 o'clock in the Varsity Arena.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George C. Vair

Queen's took a stranglehold on the intercollegiate basketball crown over the week-end when they defeated Stevens' students, present holders of the Wilson Cup. Varsity's only chance to tie the Tricolour is to win their remaining two games while Western or McGill must defeat the league leading Kingstons. The Blues should take the "Golden Tornadoes" on the Hart House court but we can hardly call Western to take the fast travelling Tricolour club.

Queen's deserved Friday's victory on their strong first half attack which saw them scoring baskets from almost any place on the big court. The Tricolour were popping them up from between centre and the foul line with plenty of results and they have a smooth passing attack. The squad is coached by Ralph Jack, an undergraduate at the university. Jack looks to be a senior rugby prospect, having previously performed for OTTAWA ROUGH RIDERS. We wonder whether this was a case of malice aforethought? Rumour has it that Charlie Peck will perform on the line for Teddy Reeve's Presbyterians next season.

Referees Jones and Sharp who handled the Varsity-McGill game wore out a whistle calling infractions of the court game and called an official time out. The game was clean but set-ups, travelling and double dribbles ranked foremost in the officials' minds and saw the ball change hands often. Contrary to expectations the game at Kingston was decidedly clean. Wonder if the Presbyterians have reformed?

The Queen's court is much wider than the Hart House floor and has plenty of room on every side. At first sight the McGill floor reminded us of a prison exercise yard with bars about 4' apart forming the end walls. Mats below the buckets give some protection but a fast player coming in from the side is liable to look like a roast on a barbecue if he doesn't slow down. Hughie Marks tried to crash the gates on one occasion.

The Blue team set a few records of indefinite status at the McGill game. Here they are for what they are worth—Hughie Marks rapped in twelve consecutive points before any other Varsity player scored a counter. The fast breaking centre and guard netted five at the close of the first half and the remaining seven at the opening of the next period. The Blue team hit the 30 mark, something never done in my time, at least. Marks accounted for 19 points in the game and Varsity registered 35 in the final stanza.

We heard a story about a Montreal gentleman who had a yen to gamble on the game. After looking over the teams he laid $5.00 on Toronto to win by thirteen points. At half time Varsity trailed by one point and 13 looked like a hoodoo. How would you feel about then?

The Red pucksters will hold the Queen's Cup for the intercollegiate hockey championship for the fourth consecutive season by virtue of Friday's win over the Blues.

Queen's supporters informed us that the Tricolour consider themselves as "in" as far as the B. W. and F. championship to be held at Montreal this week-end is concerned. How about it, team, we can't let Kingston take three major crowns in one season, and we told him so pronto! Mr. Martin, take note.

VIC AT-HOME ACHIEVES STARTLING NEW SUCCESS

Nearly 350 Couples Dance to Three Orchestras at Hart House

With the subscription list zooming far above the highest hopes of the V.C.U. Social Directorate, the Annual Victoria College At-Home achieved another remarkable success in its 1936 edition presented at Hart House on Friday evening. Nearly 350 couples danced in the big gymnasium, the east common room, and the reading room, a second and then a third orchestra having been added to Stan St. John's original unit, as the demand for tickets continued unabated until almost the hour of the party. When the sale was concluded, the committee reported that there were still many applicants whom they unfortunately were unable to accommodate.

TRINITY DEBATES WORTH OF COLLEGE MAGAZINE

Editor Himself Argues Against Review—Large Majority Decides Issue

On Friday evening the Trinity College Literary Institute debated on the motion that "This House believes that the Trinity University Review in its present state is unworthy of this College." W. H. Broughall, who incidentally, is the editor of the Review, spoke first for the affirmative. He claimed that a proof of its unworthiness was to be found in the fact that the students themselves were criticizing it. It also shows a lack of interest in college activities. He also claimed that the magazine needed a larger staff. Rev. John Lowe, speaking for the negative, claimed that the magazine was both a mirror of college life and an organ for the expression of college opinion. Rev. Lyndon Smith, for the affirmative, drew the attention of the House to the unworthy and foolish poems that had appeared lately. R. Routhwaite claimed that the Review truly represented the conservative tradition of the college.

After these prepared speeches anyone may add his opinion. There was a tremendous applause as the Dean of Residence took the floor. He claimed that the cover of the Review, which shows the college in complete darkness, well represented the state of college spirit.

The House decided by a large majority that the Review was unworthy of Trinity College.

death of King George V. will be merged this year and be held as one function. There will be special ticket rates for seniors, it was stated.

VARSITY SWAMPS MCGILL IN BASKETBALL GAME

while quick breaking and long passes from the accurate hands of Phil Gold paved the way for the next two. Gormley, playing a powerful offensive game at centre, ripped the twine to put his team in front for the last time, 23-22.

In the next eight minutes Varsity displayed one of the best attacks ever witnessed on the Montreal court, during which they tallied 17 points to 1 for McGill. The opposition were completely disorganized and two time outs failed to stop the Blue machine which was functioning faultlessly. Set shots, cut ins and passing plays worked to perfection. This brief barrage saw Connelly, the Sullivan brothers and Marks boost their averages with Joe Connelly getting the lion's share, 6. Gormley, checking Marks, was forced to retire via the foul route during the scoring bee.

The closing minutes saw Varsity outscore McGill 10 to 6 and attain their highest team score of the season, 50 points. Frank Dempster did the trick with two well timed shots.

Hughie Marks was the spark plug of the Varsity attack and constantly eluded his check to score 19 points, the highest number scored by any member of the club this season. Joe Connelly and Neil Sullivan tied for second honours with eleven points. Gormley led the Red machine with 9 points. Varsity sank 10 foul shots out of 17 attempts while McGill dropped 4 out of 10.

Varsity (50): Marks 19; N. Sullivan 11; McGregor; T. Sullivan 3; Connelly 11; Gold; Bedford 2; Dempster 4; Himel.
McGill (30): Gormley 9; Teahan 6; Scrivner 6; De Martini; Brown 4; Schofield; Hunter 4; Rutherford 1.
Referees: Jones, Montreal; Sharpe, St. Annes.

DURNAN SWIMMING CUP WON BY CRESSY MCCATTY

Brothers Clear Nearest Rivals by Over 1000 Points in Finals

Cressy McCatty came through to take the Durnan cup after the closest finish this annual swimming event has ever seen. In the last events Saturday the other McCatty swimmer—Winston—was nosed out by the very narrowest of margins.

Cressy took his brother in both events Tuesday—two rather surprising free style sprints. Winston was rather off colour. Thursday, however, Win forged ahead of the kid brother by amassing a majority of points in the breast stroke. Cressy gained a certain amount of territory in the back stroke, only to have it taken away from him in the 1-4 mile event Saturday. He managed to make up for this, however, in the diving, in which department he holds an edge over his brother. The final score showed the McCattys only a few points apart—their nearest competitor being 1000 points behind.

Winston has been holder of the Durnan Trophy for 3 years. The cup signifies the all-round swimming championship of the University of Toronto.

Russ Dilworth, another Trinity swimmer, came third, well ahead of the remainder of the field.

WOMEN'S HOCKEY SQUAD BLANKS TORONTO LADIES

Elaine Knight Outstanding as Varsity Win 3-0

The women's Varsity hockey team trimmed the Toronto Ladies Club handily on Friday night at the Royal Canadian Arena, by a score of 3-0. The co-eds outskated and outplayed their opponents throughout the two twenty-minute periods, and nearly all the play took place within the Toronto Ladies' blue line.

Gladys Wagg scored the first goal for Varsity seven minutes after play started, while S. Pointek of Toronto Ladies was in the penalty box.

Varsity: M. Cowan, M. MacDonald, R. Leavens, G. Wagg, M. Slater, J. Atkinson, E. Knight, G. Carvolth, B. Lang, B. Guest, J. Brownlee.

Toronto Ladies: S. McCausland, C. Hennessy, M. Lahay, H. Reed, K. White, G. Aldridge, S. Pointek, M. Davis, E. Hendry, J. Smith, M. Ellis, G. Bangay.

A firm of florists has arranged to supply corsages for the event at a reduced rate if a hundred men will buy them. As far as could be discovered, the Schoolmen at large are inclined to view the offer with mixed feelings.

The orchestra will be Loren Cassina and his fifteen piece band. The Banquet Hall and the Crystal Ballroom of the Royal York Hotel have been reserved. In the latter, a sit-down supper of several courses will be served.

According to Nev. Potter of the Engineering Society Executive, "The Engineering Convention and this year's At-Home will together make February 21 one of the biggest days in the history of School."

moto, theological students in Trinity College. The interview took place in Mr. Kurose's room in Trinity House, the rotund Mr. Kurose chatting volubly while, with Mr. Matsumoto quietly interjecting comments from time to time.

"War with the United States is utterly out of the question," said Kurose, "but war with Russia is something different. Japan is a great family with the Emperor as father. Such a conception as communism is foreign to the Japanese character, for it breaks down family life."

"We have travelled far since 1917," he continued. "A few years ago Japan was very sympathetic towards communism, and though the government tried to check it, the people favoured it and it spread. But the economic and social crisis which resulted from the great war, and the sudden entry of Manchukuo into the situation has altered that view. Japan is now intensely conservative."

The interest of Japan has centred on Manchukuo, and Communism in Japan has received a severe check. On the other hand, Russia is propagating the communist doctrine in China and communist generals from Russia are directing Chinese armies. Unless this propaganda is checked, the danger of conflict will grow. The Japanese military officials are continually hearing of border incidents."

"Chinese communism," observed Mr. Kurose, "is not an intelligent thing. It is primitive, barbarous and destructive. The Japanese are spending money in Manchukuo, and they fear for its safety if communist propaganda is allowed to spread. If the communist movement is not checked in Mongolia and Manchukuo war between Russia and Japan may break out, which would be a pity, for the Japanese are a peaceful people and do not want war. On the other hand, when forced into fighting, they are very brave soldiers."

He reiterated that war with the United States was an impossibility. There is no point of danger between Japan and the U.S.A. such as communism. Mr. Matsumoto added here that the strong Anti-Japanese feeling aroused in such states as California represented was dying down.

The same views were voiced by S. Shimizu of Victoria. He drew attention to the situation which existed in 1934 when Russia and Japan were at odds over the ownership of the Manchukuo railway. This difficulty was solved and since then relations have not been strained. Border incidents, he declared, should not be taken too seriously. War with Russia is a long way off, he contended.

As for war with the United States, that is an impossibility, he declared, since there was nothing whatever to quarrel about.

of the crime, sometimes lynch the offender."

Nora Loch, first speaker for the negative, asserted that far from encouraging crime, the press is a deterrent to it, because "it is a psychological fact that people dislike unfavourable publicity. Justice is not an absolute thing, it is relative to public opinion, its purpose is to reduce crime, and the press does not interfere with this purpose because the public does not want to commit crimes it has read about; unlike a crowd, it is not susceptible to suggestion."

stances his voice faded. Gilda (Ruth Miller) whose rendition of Caro Nome was fine, may have had more timbre in her top notes which at times became metallic. Sidney Rayner as the Duke of Mantua finally evoked well earned applause from an apathetic audience by his singing of La donna e mobile. His acting and singing of this rousing melody had full impact of liltful quality. Randolph Crowe, formerly on the musical committee of the University of Toronto at Hart House, lent an encouraging note to the opera as he portrayed the Count Monterone. Sparalucile and Maddalena (Burke Callaghan and Phyllis Saunders) rather missed the opportunities presented to them as they went through their parts automatically.

It seemed that the grotesque element so prevalent in the writings of Hugo from whose Le Roi S'Amuse Rigoletto was adapted, pervaded the entire presentation as Rigoletto's singing parts instead of being really vibrant, were typical of the old man which they portray, again in the singing of the principals this was also noted, although that of Sydney Rayner was sincere. On the whole the opera almost seemed to have been too great a vehicle for the company to present with fullness of interpretation.

inson getting the assist. Two minutes later McIlquham made a solo dash and scored to put the home team again in the lead.

McGill then turned on the heat for a few minutes and hemmed the Blues inside their own line. Finally Morse secured the puck and turned in a drive that appeared to hit the goal-post and bounce straight up in the air.

The second period was leisurely, with the Reds wandering up the ice for a score every now and then, beating Campbell five times before the interval. They showed faultless combination all through so that the Blues didn't know which way to look. Varsity had some shots from the blue line but acted as if they hadn't been properly introduced to the McGill net-minder and refused to have anything to do with him.

NOMINATIONS NOW OPEN FOR DEBATES COMMITTEE

W. C. Smith Re-elected for 1936-37—Seven More to Come

Mr. W. C. Smith (11 U.C.) was last week re-elected to the Hart House Debates Committee for 1936-1937. The remaining seven undergraduate members will be elected at the final debate which will take place on Wednesday 26 February. Nominations (for this committee only) open at 9 a.m. on Wednesday 19th February and close at 6 p.m. on Monday 24th February, with withdrawals being permitted until 2 p.m. on Tuesday 25th February.

The following is the election procedure of the Debates Committee: "After two candidates have been elected from one college or faculty any candidate from another college or faculty which as yet has no representative elected shall be elected to the committee if he has polled at least 25 per cent of the total number of ballots cast, the faculty or college of the member carried over not to affect the election of new members."

Nomination forms are now available at the Warden's office.

4 singles for Toronto. A basket by Bedford and 2 singles by Tom Sullivan concluded Varsity's scoring for the half. Finley made it 26-12 and boosted his total to eight points in the final minute.

The opening of the second half was slowed up by six consecutive personals being called after each club had notched a field goal. Varsity committed 3 and sank 1 while the Tricolour missed all three singles. (Score 28-15.) When the Queen's offensive was halted by strong defensive work the Blues went on a rampage and put things on a more even level at 29-22.

Marks with 7 charities and 2 baskets for a total of 11 points tied Bews for the high scoring honours. Queen's starting team of L. Edwards, Mel Cunningham, Finley, D. Rooke and Bews accounted for 37 points.

Varsity: Marks 11; Connelly 5; N. Sullivan 4; Gold 1; McGregor 1; T. Sullivan 4; Dempster 2; Bedford 4; Himel.

Queen's: L. Edwards 2; M. Cunningham 7; Finley 8; D. Rooke 9; Bews 11; J. Edwards 2; G. Tilley 4; Stephen.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

David Meisner, convicted kidnapper of John Labatt, who is now serving a fifteen-year term in Portsmouth Penitentiary, was granted a new trial yesterday by Minister of Justice Ernest Lapointe.

Britain has rejected Italy's protest against the "Mediterranean mutual assistance agreement" entered into by Great Britain, France, Greece, Yugoslavia, Turkey, Roumania and Czechoslovakia, the Foreign Office announced. The Government has refused to prolong correspondence on the subject.

A British loan to France of $200,000,000 has been arranged. The loan is the largest floated on the London market since the Great War.

Adolf Hitler yesterday banned Charlie Chaplin's new film, "Modern Times", as being "contrary to the spirit of the new Germany".

The constitutionality of the Ontario Government's proposed income tax bill was questioned in the Legislature last night by W. H. Price, former Attorney-General.

Hart House Elections To Have Usual Posters

As in the past arrangements have been made by the Art Committee and the House Committee for the display of election posters of candidates in Hart House during the week previous to the elections on 4th March. Each candidate who so desires may place one poster in the corridor leading from the Hall Porter's desk to the Great Hall at any time after 8 a.m. on Thursday 27th February.

Posters may be no larger than 24" x 36" and may be done by professionals as well as by amateur members of the House.

It has been the practice in the past to select a few of the outstanding posters to add to the permanent collection owned by Hart House. Only posters done by non-professional members will be judged and the designer of the poster is asked to place his name, faculty and year on the face of the poster. Any member who wishes to make election posters may leave his name at the Warden's office and it will be posted on this notice board.

SAY IT WITH FLOWERS

Are you one of the many people who believe that the gentlemanly habit of sending flowers to the girl-friend is going out of fashion among university students? If so, you're all wrong, a series of interviews with Toronto's leading florists has revealed.

Almost unanimously, the flower vendors claim that their business from the college laddies is greater now than ever before. Even the dippy dazling days of 1928 are being surpassed. True, there is a slight decrease at the present time, because so many formal functions have been cancelled for the mourning period of the late King George, but it seems safe to assume that the drop is temporary.

What kind of flowers? Roses lead the polls with the men by a wide margin. Lilies of the Valley, Gardenias, and Orchids come next. Orchids are the favourites with the ladies concerned, in the majority of cases. This, pointed out one leading florist, is rather unfortunate,

SEES EFFECT OF GEOGRAPHY ON PRESENT EUROPEAN SITUATION

Professor Taylor Stresses Effect of Geography on Culture

COMMENDS SWITZERLAND

Race and Language Separate Factors in Country's History

Considering the geography of Europe of the utmost importance in the present situation throughout that continent, Professor Griffith Taylor last night discussed the cultural phase of European geography at the meeting of the Canadian Geographical Society.

Professor Taylor demonstrated the tremendous influence geography had had, first by reference to three channels which have opened the way for culture in Europe. First, the important city of Constantinople which owes its outstanding renown entirely to its geographical environment; second, the Rhone River which has been termed "the way of light" because since the dawn of history this has been the route for the opening-up of civilization; third and probably of most recent importance is the Breno Pass which greatly determined the division of Europe in the Treaty of Versailles.

Race and language were clearly individualized as two absolutely separate factors in the history of any country. "I have great disrespect for Herr Hitler's idea of race," stated Professor Taylor. As an illustration of the actual criteria which characterize the term "race", Dr. Taylor spoke of "head index".

GUILD REVUE INCLUDES SKETCH BY PROFESSOR

A sketch by Prof. Louis McKay of U.C. will be included in the Players' Guild revue, according to an announcement made last night. The production, which will take place Thursday in the Women's Union, will be its premiere. Iris Gibson will play the main role, supported by John Osler.

"Prof. McKay's sketch adds to the number of first performances on the program," said Gordon Robertson, the producer. "As far as I know, none of our acts has ever been performed before in Canada." "The Sisters' Tragedy" and two scenes from "Victoria Regina" are included in the program.

ate, for so few girls can really wear orchids to the best advantage. Many young ladies express a preference for orchids or gardenias, when, as a matter of fact, their beauty would be much better set off by Roses, Lilies of the Valley, or even Violets.

In the vicinity of colleges in the United States, the usual thing is for the gentleman to give a general order for a corsage; then the florists phone the lady concerned and find out what she is wearing, so that the flowers will best fit her costume. In Toronto, however, very seldom is this found necessary. Almost invariably, the men know in advance what their partner will be wearing, and the florists can give their suggestions without consulting the lady at all. Thus, the flowers come as a surprise, or something.

Another advantage is that considerable embarrassment is saved at times. When, for instance, a boy orders a

FIVE-DOLLAR PRIZE

Alan B. Crawford, a fourth year student in the School of Architecture, has been successful in winning the University Dramatic Committee poster contest, it was announced on Saturday. The contest was held in connection with the forthcoming play of the Committee, The Inspector-General.

As a result of the decision of the judges, Crawford wins the $5.00 prize offered in the contest. He has also been awarded a contract to supply twelve more posters of the same design, to be used in the campus advertising of the play.

The design submitted, besides being used on the posters, will most probably see service on the programs, and in the commercial advertising for The Inspector-General.

Eight designs were submitted to the judges for decision. Three of these were from feminine hopefuls, one from the School of Nursing, one from Victoria College, and one from Loretto College. Of the five men entering posters, one hails from Ontario College of Art, and the others, including the winner, from S.P.S.

Judges for the contest were Professor E. R. Arthur, of the School of Architecture, Professor E. J. G. Alford, of the Department of Fine Art, and Professor R. S. Knox, of the Department of Fine Art.

RESIDENCE GIRLS WANTED FOR DATE BUREAU PARTY

Tonight the first Date Bureau Party in history will take place in a tea room not far removed from the University. Applications poured in last night in answer to the Operator's call for more co-eds.

At the present time applicants of both sexes are evenly matched, but there is still opportunity for any student, male or female, to attend this unusual event of the college year. Applications will be received at The Varsity office, Ra. 3730, up to a late hour this afternoon. Schoolmen and Residence girls are being demanded for some obscure reason.

PUBLIC AGENCIES ACT TOO SLOWLY SAYS MISS HELD

Deplores Influence of Politics on Social Service System

TRAINED WORKERS NEEDED

Public Should Protest Against Incompetent Officials
Holding Jobs

That tremendous differences exist between the private and public Social Service agencies, was the point emphasized by Miss Freda Held of the Department of Public Welfare, to the Social Science Club yesterday afternoon.

Miss Held pointed out that in the private agencies such as the Neighbourhood Workers' Association the fundamental principle is stressed that any new development in method should be put into action within 24 hours. On the other hand the Public Welfare Department takes a great deal of time to become oriented to its new work because it is such a new organization. Under previous Ministers of Welfare very little thought was given to the Social Service field. However, the present Minister has a tendency to think so quickly that even his co-workers cannot keep up with him.

When a Social Service worker goes from a private to a public agency she must have patience, for the road is long (Continued on Page 3)

PACIFIST SCANS WAR SITUATION

Future Depends on Outcome of Italo-Ethiopian War

EFFECT OF PEACE BALLOT

"Peace and Public Opinion" was the subject of a talk by Miss Kathleen D. Courtney at the Women's Union yesterday afternoon. She also discussed the effect of the Peace Ballot on the international situation.

She said that the Italo-Ethiopian war dominated the international scene at the present time, and the future in international affairs depends on its outcome. She felt that the United States did not realize the seriousness of that war, on account of its absence from the League of Nations. The success of sanctions would be a great step toward world peace, in her opinion. Failure of sanctions would mean the end of the League, she said.

Miss Courtney maintained that Britain's stand in the question was not part of an imperialistic outlook, but a sincere sympathy for the smaller country. She considered that Britain and the League were mistaken in not interfering in the Sino-Japanese struggle, and that it was to their credit when they took a firm stand in the present conflict.

The Peace Ballot, she explained, consists of a series of questions and answers on the international situation. It was answered by approximately eleven and a half million persons and, in her opinion, influenced the League's action regarding the Italo-Ethiopian crisis, and accordingly was important in world history.

Toronto Students Debate at McGill

Two University of Toronto debaters will speak at the Mock Parliament of McGill University tonight.

A. D. B. Marshall, senior student in political science and economics from University College and outstanding speaker in the Hart House debates here, will speak on the negative side of the motion, "That Canada's salvation lies in a program of social planning."

Ross Munro, also a senior in political science and economics, will speak for the affirmative. Marshall will be the leader of the opposition and Munro will support the prime minister, who is a McGill undergraduate.

SHOW TO BE BROADCAST

"A relay of skits such as have never been seen before and will never be seen again. It will completely surpass all Literary and Athletic expectations." In these words Miss Madge Shaw, Social Director of the Women's Undergraduate Association, described the joint meeting being held tonight with the Literary and Athletic Society.

The meeting, which is to be held in the Women's Union, will be preceded by a formal meeting of the W.U.A. at 8.15 p.m. followed by the skits.

All the local campus geni are being employed for the pleasure of the male body. The play is scarcely a satire as the Lit. seem to expect but the boys may well tremble in their boots. There will be no screen melodrama as at the last meeting when the men entertained the girls, but the whole show is going to be broadcast.

The big feature of the evening will be the presentation of two tickets to the Arts Ball, which are being given away in a lucky number dance. There seems to be some indecision as to whether, following the Leap Year (Continued on Page 4)

With hubby away at college all day (learning heaven knows what), McGill wives find their days drab and their lives filled with longing. So they're going to form a club.

"Organize!" is the cry. "A club of our own!" (Not a club to club hubby—oh no—but a club to club together.) They hope that all interested will come. Want to be a member?

Confident hubby telephones: "Sorry, dear, I won't be home for supper. An essay to write."

Competent wifey replies: "That's what you think."

And the club goes into action.

A radical change in the honour arts calendar will go into effect next year. A new course, which will be called "Philosophical and Historical Studies", has been added to the curriculum, it was learned yesterday.

Students who enter university for the term of 1936-37, and who intend to enter courses in Modern History, Sociology, Philosophy, Political Science and Economics, and Psychology will spend the first year in this course, after which they will be able to enter their several courses, the Registrar informed this paper.

All students entering these five courses will have to take this composite course, he said. After a preliminary year in these studies students will be able to choose the course in which they wish to take their degree. The course has been designed to prepare applicants for any of the five courses in which they may register later. There will be no optional subjects offered.

What No War Again?

When the world of journalism had the Ethiopian war in full swing The Varsity published an editorial based on statements of a few war correspondents to the effect that the war was probably not all that it was written up to be. An interesting article of this nature appeared recently in the Christian Science Monitor by R. H. Markham, who was that paper's representative in Ethiopia.

He states that much of the war news published in many of America's leading dailies has been utterly false and the world has been given an inaccurate picture of events in East Africa. He also points out that Addis Ababa is one of the quietest spots on earth and almost no people are as little interested in current events as Ethiopians.

He goes on to say "One must bear in mind also the utter lack of roads in Ethiopia and the great distances from the city to the fighting lines. Addis Ababa is 500 miles from the nearest front. A relay team of phenomenal runners could not possibly bring a message from the battle lines to the capital in less than a week."

"Lack of geographical knowledge of the country together with its natural barriers would still more increase this difficulty. No one knows the size of the armies or where they are, nor what weapons and munitions there are in the country. When a hankerling for sensation is added to this overwhelming lack of knowledge, of course a flood of grotesque misinformation results. As a matter of fact there has yet been no heavy fighting in Ethiopia. Not a single major battle has occurred, nothing more than skirmishes. . . . Most military information sent from Addis Ababa was of a purely conjectural nature and very often inaccurate. No newspaper man in the world knows how many armies there are in Ethiopia, where they are, how strong they are or how they are armed."

He cites an incident when it was rumoured around the coffee shops that Adowa had been retaken. Scouts sold the stories to eager reporters and the message was flashed to the world at large. Even the number of troops killed was stated. By the time it was wired back to Addis Ababa the writers themselves believed it.

His concluding paragraph says "A careful examination of the war news of most newspapers since Oct. 1, will show most of it completely wrong. Most of it was made up by correspondents or their informants who, wanted to supply the interesting reading material to a world greatly interested in a war in Ethiopia."

Journalistic hoaxes have occurred before but in all probability the war in Ethiopia will go down in history as the greatest war ever fought by correspondents while the soldiers looked on and wondered what it was all about.

Is Trial By Jury A Fair Trial?

The world-famous Hauptmann case and, more locally, the almost equally sensational O'Donnell case, have caused many people to ponder over the justice of our traditional practice of trial by one's peers. As Mr. Justice Jeffrey pointed out to the jurors who tried O'Donnell, it is sometimes necessary to convict a man on circumstantial evidence alone. The task of deciding the guilt or innocence of a fellow-citizen under any circumstances is an unpleasant duty for any man. In the two cases we have mentioned where the evidence is damning but far from conclusive the necessity of pronouncing the death-penalty must have given much unhappiness to many a sincere but uncertain juror.

The present system of selecting members of juries at random from all walks of life has always been considered eminently fair because precautions have always been taken to insure that no jurymen should have any knowledge of the case whatever except what he receives from the witness box. As a matter of fact this very attempt at fairness may prove in some cases to be the essence of unfairness.

The average man in the street is not a student of crime nor of criminals. He gives very little thought to the motives and impulses that lie behind the actions of those who break the law. When suddenly he is confronted with the duty of passing judgment on an accused man he has no basis from which to work except his own common-sense. To ask him, in his limited knowledge of criminology, to impose the irrevocable penalty of death is not altogether fair nor just to the juror nor to the accused.

A very reasonable suggestion has been made recently by a speaker in a Toronto church. He advocates the substitution of trial by a jury of psychiatrists and criminologists for the present system, particularly in those cases where the penalty of death is a possibility. Even this does not preclude the possibility of error but it greatly reduces it. A judge is not considered capable of deciding what penalty is to be imposed for a crime until he has studied law for many years, yet the far graver task of deciding a man's guilt or innocence is entrusted to men entirely unfitted for it.

In the days of Magna Charta trial of a man by his peers was undoubtedly the most just method available. But seven hundred years later we must realize that the system may have been out-grown.

Poor but-- All Are Not Proud

A story in yesterday's papers tells of a negro labourer who was arrested "for refusing to accept relief". We have been so accustomed to reading about people being arrested for obtaining relief by fraudulent means that it is almost unbelievable that the reverse is sometimes the case.

The negro was obviously in the wrong. Through his pride his family was starving. But his sincere desire for work not charity should put to shame many a white man who is only too eager to let the government keep him. The relief system is one of the necessary evils of our economic life but there are some men on relief who have no desire to earn their own living again.

Fortunately, as work is available and refused, more and more of these worthless creatures are being struck off the relief rolls. But there are still men who find it more profitable to live off the taxpayer than to put up with a little hardship and earn their own living.

Much sympathy is wasted these days on the "poor people on relief". It would much better be applied to those poor people who, like the negro, have no money and are too proud to accept relief.

The Flying Future

That Canada, with her unparalleled natural resources for flying, with her chains of lakes stretching throughout the north and the west, her flying record in the Great War, of which we may justly be proud, and the great necessity that she is under of opening up the undeveloped territories that can be so easily reached by air,—that Canada should be the one country, above all others, in the world to allow aviation to fly on through stage after stage of progress without making the slightest effort whatever to respond,—is criminal. So said Col. Bishop, our greatest war ace and the hero of many a Canadian, in an address the other day.

Supplementals Held Earlier

The recent notice about the change in the date of supplemental examinations may have escaped the attention of some students. In as much as they are now scheduled to be held nearly a month earlier than usual the necessity of writing supplementals will break into the summer holidays very awkwardly. The moral would seem to be to avoid failing in the odd subject at all costs, or if you do fail not to arrange to be across the continent on the 20th of August.

The local preacher who prophesied the world would end by Friday midnight was accused by a morning newspaper of having put out a milk bottle and tickets to ensure a supply for Saturday, but he explained that when things hadn't started to pop by sunset he knew there had been a postponement.

He might have told us! We didn't catch a wink of sleep till long after twelve o'clock, we were that worried.

They have, they have, they have for fifty years!

They will, they will, they will for fifty more!

And they don't give a damn for any damn man that can't stagger on till 4.

We've got to hand it to the Engineers. While sharing the usual Artsman's air of amused tolerance towards those fellow-beings who inhabit the other side of the campus, we don't mind coming out in open admiration on the occasion of their approaching celebration. Those boys can take it,—or it is to be hoped they can.

Alumni Reunions we have always regarded as rather anemic affairs, a necessary evil to the Arts tradition, perhaps, yet simply too horrible to think on as an S.P.S. activity. But a Convention—now there is something both fine and fitting! Why,—Engineers—Beer—Convention, the terms are synonymous!

We understand that a block order for twenty tickets to the Vic At-Home was received from a group at School: twenty collegiate gentlemen wanting to fork out three dollars and thirty cents one week-end, and four smackers the next, not allowing for extras. Or down there do they call the tickets the extras?

Personally, we were a trifle jittery most of the week-end, financially and mentally, after last Friday evening's (Continued on Page 4)

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Toronto Symphony

Saturday's concert was the most impressive performance by the orchestra in many months.

Opening with Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 3, Sir Ernest MacMillan gave a carefully balanced reading. The solos for flute, violin, oboe and trumpet were knit together into rhythmic patterns that make modern synopses childish by comparison. This concerto is really sophisticated chamber music and is not easily adapted to large string orchestras. However, the effect was pleasing, particularly the trumpet solo by A. J. Williams, who comes from a section of the orchestra that is not always above reproach.

The Seventh Symphony of Beethoven is an expression of exuberance in conventional form. And yet so perfectly are its parts welded into an indivisible unity that all considerations of form are transcended. Beethoven was at the height of his powers when he composed this symphony in A; he had mastered every intricacy of expression and had not yet launched into the multidimensional style of his very late work. Outwardly the music is simplicity itself—four movements in elementary dance rhythms. Internally it is a complex succession of musical ideas treated with overwhelming effect. Sir Ernest conducted authoritatively and the orchestra was faultless. He brought out the essential dignity of all the boldness and high spirits, something that many conductors have failed to perceive. If there was a suggestion of listlessness in the first movement, poco sostenuto, the fire of the concluding allegro con brio made up for it. The enthusiasm of the audience was out of proportion to its size; it is a pity that the best performance of the season should have been played to so many empty seats.

Imperial—

Anything Goes is the feature presentation at the Imperial this week. Evidently "anything goes" in this film as the flimsiest of plots is built around the principals Bing Crosby and Ethel Merman, as they trip through their lines in a travesty of tuncful hits, runs, and errors. Charles Ruggles plays the hilarious part of a jittery gangster, disguised as a clergyman in order to elude the police. An amusing incident in this musical is Bing Crosby wearing a beard made of pomeranian dog's fur, singing "My Heart and I" in a supposedly foreign accent to Ida Lupino, who hasn't much else to do but look beautiful. Replete with many gags and farcical situations, this picture is well worth seeing.

Jack Arthur and His Imperial Concert Orchestra rendered with distinction Ferde Grofe's Blue Flame, as well as playing such hits as Lovely to Look At, Of Thee I Sing, and Stout-hearted Men. Billie Bell and Stanley Maxted, the guest artists, sing "I wouldn't, wouldn't you," and "The Bend of the Road", respectively, and then combine their efforts to give a delightful interpretation of Ravel's "I love you pizzicato", capably assisted by the Imperial Concert Orchestra. All in all both stage and screen presentations provide a well balanced program of entertainment.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

The Bronze Baby series is coming nearer and nearer and with it Varsity's chance to win another intercollegiate championship, such as they took in tennis. The big event will be this Friday and Saturday in Hart House, and you should be there to support the team. Varsity plays Western in the opening game, and then McGill and Queen's take the floor, to decide who will enter the finals. The latter two teams play a wide-open, shooting from way out, type of game, and it will be interesting to watch the encounter between the winner of this game, and the winner of the Varsity-Western teams, who play a close-checking game and shoot from almost under the basket.

Plenty of entertainment has been planned for the visiting teams. McGill is being put up at Whitney Hall, the Queen's squad at St. Hilda's, and Western at Victoria. The Directorate alumnae are giving a supper party Friday night at Wynwood for all the teams, and their coaches and managers. A banquet has been arranged for Saturday night at the Alexandra Palace, with a dance to follow in Hart House, so we don't think the visitors should be bored.

The hockey game tonight between Varsity and the Toronto Pals should be really good. If half the team can hold them to a scoreless tie, as they did last Friday, surely the whole team should be able to take them. Unfortunately Jean Atkinson may not be able to play, but Mary Dignam may appear on the Blue and White line. How about a little support for the team? They deserve it and they're all good players. Tonight at 9:10 p.m. in Varsity Arena.

Ringside Chatter

By J. L. T.

FREDDIE SMITH

Freddie Smith, IV S.P.S. Architecture, will be Varsity's representative in the 125 lb. boxing for the fourth consecutive year, at the intercollegiate assault in Kingston this week-end.

Freddie stands 5' 7 1/2" high, is compactly built, and is perhaps the cleverest ring artist on the Varsity team, and that probably goes for the rest of the collegiate circle, too.

A Toronto boy, Freddie attended U.C.C., where he learned to handle his hands, learned so well that in his first year at Varsity he waded through all the opposition to an intercollegiate title. The same year, he took his man in an exhibition match with Syracuse.

Last year, Freddie won both his bouts against opponents from the U.S.A., one against Syracuse here in Hart House and the other down in Cornell. A tough break of luck prevented his regaining the intercollegiate title in Montreal but we call him to do just that this year. He has what it takes.

PHARMACY HOLO SCHOOL 8-ALL TIE IN BASEBALL

Pharmacy and Sr. S.P.S. ended their baseball game in an 8-all tie yesterday afternoon. Going into the last inning Pharmacy were leading 8-3 due to smart bunching of their hits and the capable pitching of Powell, who fanned three men on nine pitches in one inning but when Powell was compelled to retire, Sr. S.P.S. came through to tie up the score. Pharmacy had another chance because they batted last but were unable to hang out even a scratch hit off Walker.

Sr. S.P.S.: Marks, McMillin, N. Miller, Quance, Sweet, Walker, Chernoisky, Gooch, W. Miller.

Pharmacy: Berkan, Tierney, Jackson, Axsmith, Kremer, Gilbert, Bear, Lazarus, Powell.

Victoria Called To Win Water Polo

First Interfaculty Final Results in Win Over Senior S.P.S.

CLOSE CHECKING

Victoria College will enter the second game of the interfaculty water polo finals Wednesday with a one goal lead over their Sr. S.P.S. rivals by virtue of their 1-0 victory yesterday afternoon. Vic is favoured to take her third championship in the last four years.

The game was extremely close and featured close checking throughout the game. The boys on both squads hung on to their checks like leeches.

The feature of the game saw Scott and Lipinski combine in a beautiful tip-off play which culminated in the single score of the game as Lipinski drove the ball into the corner of the net. Whiting, Dalziel and Rannels were also outstanding.

School presented no individual stars with the whole team playing well. Vic: Scott, Rannels, Lipinski, Earl, Malcolm, Best, Dalziel, Whiting. Sr. S.P.S.: Hollands, Zachanko, Lilly, Charters, Bruce, Young, Schmitt, Thompson, Gooch.

KNOX BASKETBALL TEAM OFEAT FORESTRY 24-18

Shaw Outstanding on Knox Team, Gets Four Baskets

Last night in the upper gym of Hart House the Knox College basketball team defeated Forestry by the score of 24-18, in one of the best games of the series. Although the losers did not have as effective a defense or combination they did take advantage of what shots they had, and scored many of their points on long tries.

In the first period the Foresters failed to click at all, and Knox came in several times, chalking up 10 points to Forestry's 3. Shaw got credit for 4 baskets and Brown one. After a breather at half time, Forestry had a little better luck, and managed to hold the leaders off, while they ran up a few counters. With better combination and superior marksmanship, they ran up 15 points and held Knox to 14.

Shaw was the standout of the contest, and without him the winners would have had a tough time. Hick, Dargavel and Chalk were the losers' best men.

Knox: Shaw, Smith, Weir, Neilson, Clement, Keith and Brown.

Forestry: Hick, Dargavel, Grinnell, Chalk, Harrison, Ballantyne, Man and Ward.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Jim Tiller

Woe, woe is Canada. England won the ice hockey at Garmisch-Partenkirchen yesterday, and it's just simply awful. We of Varsity who are inured to such finneglings of the fickle finger of fate remain unaffected by the news but not so other parts of the Dominion. Sport pages present curiously conflicting opinions, alternating the noble sentiment that we must take it on the chin smiling with the firm conviction that the Olympic play-off rules were concocted by an ignorant hunch of numbskulls, or worse than that. Why not have Canada play England in an exhibition game? If they're so much better, they could run up a score of 10-0, say, and come home champions in the eyes of everyone, while the English would have nothing but a valueless official scroll. . . . And the Maple Leafs aren't doing so well either.

The volleyball players of the University held a very enthusiastic meeting yesterday afternoon and decided to enter a team in the provincial play-offs in order to retain the intermediate championship that they won last year in their first venture of the kind. George Fallis, a member of last year's team, was elected captain. Anyone wishing to try out for the team please observe the Sport Notices.

In case you don't know, a white hope tournament will be held at the Maple Leaf Gardens tomorrow night and local tough guys continue to appear all set to redeem the social prestige of the white race by knocking Joe Louis for a row of something or other. The exhibition is sponsored by Jack Dempsey, "The greatest fighter of them all", who wishes he was ten years younger, or so he says. Not that we've anything against the Manassa Mauler, but don't you remember a few years ago, when Dempsey was in his hey-day as champ, when he refused to meet a certain negro in the ring.

This "white hope" stuff may stir up a lot of interest in the good old-fashioned art of fighting, which only the old-timers seem to know anything about, or so they say. Certainly, there will be nothing but fighting in the bouts tomorrow night as most of the entrants have no idea of how to do anything but throw hay-makers. They think it's sissy to clinch or back up and they refuse to skip-rope to get in condition—they came to fight, not to learn to dance. There is one real prospect in George A. Leslie from Prince Edward Island, who stands 6' 4" in his sock feet and weighs 240 lbs. Another fellow by the name of Flanagan (Irish, eh?) is expected to do things.

A spirit of optimism pervades the B. W. & F. rooms in Hart House as the members of the local 4M's club round themselves into shape for the intercollegiate assault-at-arms to be held at Queen's this coming Friday and Saturday. Dr. Les Black, Frankie Brown and Mel Glionna are all on hand to give the mittmen those useful little bits of advice which are so important. Unfortunately, Charley Burke, 165 lbs., will not be able to box for Varsity, and the position he leaves vacant is not yet filled. There is a possibility that Jock Piggott, the light-heavyweight, may train down to take his place.

Norm Bolter won the right to represent Varsity in the 155 lbs. division by taking the decision from Owens yesterday afternoon in a not particularly fast bout. Owens showed considerable skill in blocking Bolter's punches but lacked offensive drive. Bolter is also a wrestler. He entered both wrestling and boxing in the senior assault last week and won the boxing. Very good, Norm.

If you want to see a really exciting sports-contest, don't miss the last of the water polo finals tomorrow afternoon at 5 p.m. Victoria won a one-goal lead in the first game yesterday afternoon, but Sr. S.P.S. nearly scored several times and it's still anybody's water polo title. Vic won it last year and three years ago. The only goal of yesterday's game was a brilliant piece of work. Scott passed the ball to Lipinski and the latter batted it right into the net with his check almost on top of him.

Leap Year Traditions not Heeded by Feminine Majority

Leap Year has been with us for one month and some odd days, now, but from all indications it is just another year to the Varsity girls. Most of them aren't doing anything about it, but even if they did, Florence McCarthy remarked, they get no co-operation from the men. All Miss McCarthy's proposals have been accepted, and the old dress racket isn't having a chance.

Patricia Coyle and Monica Reynolds thought all the girls should get together. As it is now, they stated, Leap Year is just like any other year. They'd be ashamed to let men know they didn't have dates, so doubt if they'll use the system.

Kay Coleman hadn't used the Leap Year idea, but she knew of a boy who had to buy a pair of gloves for a fortune teller at the Village. She mentioned the Vic tea dances, where it's always leap year. We caught Helen Curtis coming out of a Spanish class and asked her to air her views. She thought she might have to use it some time if she ever was hard up. (A glance at the comely Senorita Curtis is a pretty good indication that she won't be using it.)

Arthur Brisbane recently said "The newspaper is the national mirror, reflecting what it sees. The editor may well say: 'If you do not like what you see in the mirror, change your face or change your civilization, do not break the mirror!'"—Publisher's Auxiliary.

PUBLIC AGENCIES ACT TOO SLOWLY

and hard, Miss Held stated. The worker must fully realize that the force behind the public agency knows little or nothing about Social Service work, which is a definite contrast to the capable trained board behind a private agency. The reason why the public agency does so little is because it is insufficient to have just the Minister of Welfare enlightened on the subject; behind him is the Cabinet, which in turn is backed by the tax-payers who know little about Social Service work.

Miss Held went on to say that the great weakness in our Social Service scheme is the strong hand which politics takes in the matter. If people would only realize that the only way that we can have a scheme competently and satisfactorily carried out is by having the best trained person chosen for the job, then more progress would be made. She pointed out that a large number of incompetent people, friends of government officials, are holding positions that should be held by trained Social Service workers. A great need exists for the Social worker to protest against this patronage movement, she said, by arousing public opinion against the whole foul system.

University, and who do not know exactly what line they wish to follow, a chance to decide upon their work during their first year. At the end of that time they will be able to make a definite choice between the five courses and continue in their second year.

No additional length of time will be necessary to obtain a degree, it was understood. After students spend one year in the composite course, they will merely continue in the second year of their several courses, and will be able to be graduated in the regular four years.

Pass students next year will have two additional courses from which to choose, it was also learned. Geography and Applied Mathematics have been added to the curriculum, the Registrar, Mr. Fennell stated.

PHILOSOPHICAL SCHOOLS DISCUSSED BY MARXISTS

History of Civilization Must End with Communism, Says Carr

The difference between the point of view of the school of dialectic materialism and that of idealistic philosophy was the subject of Sam Carr's Marxist group last night. He pointed out the impracticability of materialism, showing that the materialist was inclined to regard the criminal as a result of his environment, while the idealist deplored criminal tendencies but assumed that nothing could be done about it.

He traced civilization from feudalism through capitalism to the inevitable communism, saying that these changes were the result of revolution and violence, but stressing that the communists do not desire violence. "Communists," he said, "are really the three little pigs, and not the big bad wolf, as we have been told by the capitalists."

INDIVIDUAL MUST CHOOSE SECULARISM OR CHRIST

Dr. Richard Roberts Speaks at Vesper Service in Knox Chapel

In speaking at the Vesper Service which was held on Sunday in Knox College Chapel under the auspices of the World's Student Christian Federation, Dr. Richard Roberts saw the issue of the world struggle today precisely that of Calvary. Christ said, "My kingdom is not of this world, so dismissing any temporal kingdom which involves defence by the use of force. The wave of secularism which, beginning with Machiavelli, received impetus with the Industrial Revolution in England and the scientific materialism of the nineteenth century has now reached its height, says Dr. Roberts and he finds the church unable to provide any effective resistance to this mood.

Looking into the future, Dr. Roberts sees a world dominated by this secularism, and therefore one void of freedom or on the other hand the world, with the eradication of this secular and materialistic mood turned into a society of friends. The choice of a line of thought is up to the individual and he must expect lack of sympathy or even opposition in choosing the spiritual path today.

ART, MUSIC AND ORAMA

mer Night's Dream was played in a way to bring out its humour and prettiness; any attempt to read further meanings into it are doomed to failure. G.H.R.

H.C.S. Dramatic Society

Concerning the U.T.S. production of Macbeth and the criticism which followed our estimate of the play we are led to revise the discussion not in a "new light" but in a broader one. We do not believe that a Shakespearean production can be handled more effectively through the use of symphonic lighting or when the faces of the characters cannot be seen, a large portion of the time by the audience, but this is an argument with an idea and not with the method with which it was carried out. The production itself showed artistic qualities which this medium possesses, the triangle of white faces in the witches' scene and the sleep walking scene of Lady Macbeth bear out this fact. The value of intelligent experiment in any form of art cannot be underrated, and the lighting in this play was well handled in so far as it took the brunt of difficult acting from the shoulders of the young actors, and combined with their performance to form a very credible production.

We should like to mention too the work of Ralph Sturgeon who played the role of Macduff. This young man showed a feeling for Shakespearean drama which was genuinely good. The point at which, after hearing of the murder of his wife and children, he takes his sword from its sheath is full of dramatic possibility, his lines are well spoken and he seems to have a complete conception of the character he is portraying than do the rest of the cast.

The fact that this play was put on by high school students inclines one upon consideration to believe that while the performance did not perhaps realize the full dramatic value which the play contains, yet it showed throughout very great care in the details and very surprising in an amateur performance, we did not notice anyone being prompted throughout the whole of a very long play.

Hart House Theatre

A strangely variegated group of one-act plays was presented by the Hart House Players last night. First the audience was shown some psychological acrobatics in St. John Irvine's "The Magnanimous Lover"; then there was a little mental tight-rope walking in "The Grandmother" by Lajos Biro, and the evening wound up with a blood-curdling Punch-and-Judy show — "Apache" by Charles Mere.

The first play was all very harrowing and unhappy, in the traditional manner, like most plays dealing with tragic Celts. St. John Irvine, however, is no Yeats and the Hart House players, owing to their inability to keep up the brogue in heated moments, would be well advised to leave Ireland to the Irish Players. Arden Keay, as Maggie, the "bad woman" was an intense and bitter figure; she alone gave reality and significance to the play.

"The Grandmother" left us completely in the dark. The point seemed to be that an upright and charming old lady either had sinned in her youth or had not. Whether the obscurity was due to the playwright or the actors is doubtful, but in any case it deprived the play of all meaning. Janet Bacon, as the grandmother, did not give a convincing impression of age; unconsciously, perhaps. Her gestures and inflections were too youthful. The other women of the east, in the costumes of 1880, were delightful in appearance, but their artificial laughter was too expertly timed; nor were the individual traits of character sufficiently emphasized. Murray Bonnycaste as a solitary realist in a group of romantics was excellent.

For those who enjoy bloodstains, stranglings, sinister waiters and sudden shots, "Apache" was highly satisfying. In timing, effect and setting it was the best play of the three. The Prince of Attalanga (Andrew Allan) speaking in a cold, dead, monotone, created a beautiful atmosphere of gradually increasing fear.

Incidentally, the play, as presented in an English translation, contained a Cockney waiter, three American apaches, and a countess of unmistakably Anglo-Saxon countenance and manner.

William (figure out his nationality for yourself) has been our ideal since he was shown last year with beatific smile and enraptured eye listening to Annie Ondra's vocalizing. Long after the audience had wilted he remained chivalrous, and magnanimously we overlook the fact that he had to lean heavily on the wall for support.

Our new idol is no more like a Greek god than Charles Boyer but he literally oozes personality. True, when expressing emotional sorrow he appears to be suffering from acute indigestion or some other deep seated malady but the effect is partly counteracted by one little blonde curl on his forehead and his toothpaste ad grin.

The picture had all the attributes and appendages of a good production. The plot was rather old-fashioned, a cursed violin bringing unhappiness to a reticent maiden and her soldier lover. Then the little lady burns the violin and the film fades out on a happy ending and the ecstatic sighs of our companion.

Loew's—

Over-emphasis placed by movie producers on pictures of relatively small significance makes the proportionately large demands of pictures such as Tale of Two Cities, now playing at Loew's difficult to properly portray. This weakness is particularly apparent in this production. It is a momentous subject which they are attempting to handle. But having extended their resourcefulness to the limit in making spectacles out of minor incidents, the observer is left feeling slightly disappointed at the pageantry which the producer offers for such events as portrayed in the Tale of Two Cities.

Unlike most dramatized novels the action in this case follows faithfully the theme of Dickens' great book. Perhaps the popularity of the writer and the wide following his books have enjoyed have made any departure from the original ideas a risky procedure, and accounts for the manner in which the picture adheres to the author's theme.

The sacrifice of Sidney Carton which is placed among the world's greatest love stories, is adequately portrayed by Ronald Colman. However, the similarity between Sidney Carton and Charles Darnay (played by Donald Woods) which in the book, permitted Carton to double for Darnay, is lacking in the picture. There does seem to be a weakness in the picture in that neither Darnay nor Lucie Manette, whose part is taken by Elizabeth Allen, are figures of such strength of char-

DON'T TELL THE HALL COMMITTEE but seventy-five patrons of the dining hall at Columbia were stricken with ptomaine poisoning after eating the rum-and-raisin ice cream served there. A number of the sickened diners were stricken ill so suddenly that they couldn't leave their rooms. The Columbia Spectator is conducting a campaign to have the kitchen conditions investigated. It charges that sanitary facilities are faulty and that utensils used need re-tinning.

PILFERING DANCERS are bothering the committee in charge of the recent Queen's Science Formal. It seems that the collectors were busy on the night of the dance and absconded with such items as a piano stool, a measuring tape one hundred feet long, a pane of glass and dozens of "no parking" signs. The committee will have to pay a large sum to replace articles which they borrowed and which kept on being borrowed.

A COLUMNIST in the Detroit University news sheet had an English essay returned marked "F", with the notation on the bottom, "Why not use this in your column?" We don't know whether he did, but we do. Who says that the life of a columnist isn't an unhappy one?

NO CORSAGES FOR FORMAL DANCES is the ruling of the interfraternity council of the University of Texas. The girls in dormitories started the idea last year when they announced that they would not wear the things at future formals, realizing that the men had a hard time financing such parties acter as to justify Sidney's sacrifice. However, the setting and the atmosphere of the story has been maintained with more than usual accuracy and Sidney Carton's last words, "It is a far better thing I do than I have ever done", have as strong an appeal in the picture as they had in Dickens' most famous novel. It is a picture which will rank with the foremost of the year.

BRIGHTER WEEK-ENDS are forecast for Bryn Mawr as a result of the recent formation of a committee to arrange entertainments for the Friday-to-Monday period. They have already had such treats as Saturday evening lectures and Sunday afternoon teas. They hope to have "more informal events". NO DONATIONS FROM NAZIS will be received by Harvard, according to an announcement made by President Conant in refusing an offer of $10,000 made by Ernst Hanfstaengl, who is a graduate of the class of 1909. The money is refused on the grounds that the Nazi policy has been to suppress academic freedom, and therefore it would be improper to accept funds from a prominent Hitlerite.

WILL ROGERS was asked to supply a message for the graduating class of Fullerton College last spring. His reply was typical, "I have no message for you. The trouble with youth nowadays is that everybody wants to advise them, and we don't know what to do ourselves. . . . If I knew any Latin words, I'd quote 'em to you. McGILL VOTES SOCIALISTIC AT INTER-COLLEGE DEBATE

DENTISTS PLAN STYLISH PARTY AT EGLINTON CLUB

Karl Mueller Will Provide "Swing" Music for the "Hya Yaka" Boys

Possibly the most enjoyable of the many social events to be held over the coming week-end will be the Dental At-Home, to take place next Friday evening at the Eglinton Hunt Club on the corner of Avenue Road and Eglinton. About two hundred Dentists and student Dentists with Dental Nurses and other fair specimens of femininity will don formal attire to dance to the smooth music of Karl Mueller and his Varsity Collegians.

Mueller, who is rated "top campus band leader" by most University and fraternity committee-men, has been putting his eleven-piece orchestra through all the paces and promises to turn out a sparkling and varied program in the new "syncopating swing" style. Karl has played for most of the leading (Continued on Page 4)

Professor De Champ Sees Little Chance of Restoration of French Crown

The possibility of a Royalist Government in France as a result of the recent activities of the Royalist Party was seriously questioned by Professor De Champ in an interview yesterday. The recent publicity of Royalist aspirations was ascribed to the search for news rather than to the imminent danger of a Royalist revolution in France.

"The Royalist Party," he said, "is a small group of noisy young men with no backing and no power. They are mostly students and members of the nobility, and sons of well-to-do Parisians. Out of a total of six hundred members elected to the House, only (Continued on Page 4)

STUDENTS' WIVES ARE HAPPY HERE

No Need to Form a "Lonely-Wives Club" in Toronto as at McGill

Wives of students in the University of Toronto find no difficulty in disposing of their time, nor do they feel the need of forming a club such as that recently inaugurated by lonely wives at McGill. According to the report, the club was begun with the idea of keeping themselves busy while their husbands are out, not earning their daily bread, but acquiring the education necessary to fit them more adequately to earn it in the future.

Three students, at least, out of those married in the University of Toronto, have heirs. The wife of one of these, who must remain anonymous, finds time far from heavy on her hands. She looks after the household and offspring in the (Continued on Page 4)

STUDENT REVEALS FACTS ABOUT INDIA

Sadhu Singh Dhani Says the Real India Unknown to Western World

Sadhu Singh Dhani, Indian student at the University, attributes much of the misunderstanding about India to Western idiosyncrasies. "India is studied in America for entertainment rather than for enlightenment. Journalists seek the freakish, the mystical and the glamorous, rather than a knowledge of India's problems," he says.

"A vertical, community and religious, basis divides India, but this is being intersected by national sentiment and economic needs. Betterment of conditions has led the young people of the Orient to study Western science. Eventually a civilization will evolve in India synthesizing Western and Eastern ideals." Marshall Points Out Futility of Plan, as in Case of the United States

Montreal, Que., Feb. 18—McGill University went socialist last night in the Mock Parliament debate with the University of Toronto when the House upheld the motion "That Canada's salvation depends on a program of social planning".

The University, in the very shadow of St. James Street, provided enthusiastic and fanatical support for socialization and planning as solution to the social problems of the dominion.

Alfred Pick, Prime Minister, and Ross Munro of University of Toronto spoke for the motion. Bruce Marshall of University of Toronto was leader of the opposition and was supported by Morton Codine of McGill.

Marshall in a brilliant fighting speech pointed to the United States as an evidence of the futility of a nation-wide system of planning. He showed the disastrous consequences that had followed in the path of social planning in European countries.

He challenged the government to provide "A logical comprehensive and definite plan." He argued that the government was risking the progress of the centuries on a mad gamble with a (Continued on Page 4)

NOVELTY NUMBERS FOR ARTS BALL

1936 Arts Ball Expected to Strike a New Note in College Formals

If the rumours which have been going the rounds the last few days are to be taken as a criterion, the novelty numbers which have been arranged for the Arts Ball of 1936 bid fair to give it the same notoriety as that enjoyed by the famous U.C. Follies.

The ball is taking place Friday, February 28, and already students of U.C. are beginning to voice their interest in the affair.

Mervin Minsky, speaker for the U.C. Parliamentary Club, was heard to say, "Had there been no Arts Ball this year, I would feel that my college career was incomplete. I'm certainly looking forward to February 28."

R. D. Isbister, third year Commerce student, and University College's gift to the senior rugby team, voiced his approval in these words, "The dance is certainly not in accord with my views of business economics, because I don't see how they can change so little and still make a profit."

Bill Kirkpatrick, III Pass, remarked, "If the present plans are carried out, I believe this year's Arts Ball (Continued on Page 4)

Lovers Re-United At Date Bureau Hop

Social Butterflies and Lonely Hearts Arrive Alone but Depart Escorted

Something new and original has been the motto of the Varsity Date Bureau since its inception nearly two years ago, but last night the organization went over the top with a scheme radically different from anything that had ever before been attempted on this campus. The novel idea was the Date Bureau Party, held at the Madison Square Tea Rooms on Bloor Street.

The building's two stories were filled to capacity with happy couples who had met only a few hours before. The operator of the Bureau had previously arranged for a pair of expert organizers to keep the shy persons from being nosed out and to start games for such ones as could not dance, but to his gratification it turned out that every one present found a partner to his taste and they all danced.

Polish Patter Puzzles Press Or Did Stanley Flirt In English

The Polish Club is perhaps the only University society which conducts all meetings in Polish and in true Siberian atmosphere—much to the chagrin of the press.

The highlights of the evening's entertainment consisted of deplorable lapses into English such as (shades of his worthy ancestors!) "Oh! for cat's sake", from the younger count. And a desperate "What's all this about anyhow?" from an exasperated, less enlightened female member.

Or "Stanley!!!" in stern tones from the parental president calling the recalcitrant member to order, who would insist on flirting with the fair members behind. A true example of Polish chivalry. It's the man who pays.

The meeting finally warmed up to a 10-page essay on (?) in Goulash, during which the press alternately yawned and shivered, while reading old newspaper articles.

It again lapsed into what sounded peculiarly like scurrilous dispute. One member (again slipping) deplored the prevalence of Polish marriages and the subsequent demand for orchestras which left their dance, pecuniary matters considered, virtually on the shelf.

It must have been about this time that the meeting adjourned.

Hart House Elections

Regulations regarding this year's elections for the various Hart House committees have been announced and the voting arrangements are as follows: Ten candidates are to be elected to each of the House, Hall, Library, Music and Art Committees, two of this number being elected by the out-going committee in each case. The candidate securing the highest number of votes in each faculty or college will become a member of the committee, provided he has received a total of at least three hundred votes and provided that a representative from his faculty or college has not already been elected by the out-going committee.

A college or faculty which is represented by a member chosen by the out-going committee cannot have a second member elected until the highest candidate has been elected from each of the other colleges or faculties, providing that candidate has polled 300 votes. Elections for the above committees will take place on 4th March between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. and between 4.30 p.m. and 6 p.m. No undergraduate may stand for election to more than one committee either standing or special.

The procedure for the Debates Committee is as follows: After two candidates have been elected to this committee from one college or faculty any candidate from another college or faculty which as yet has no representative elected shall be elected to the committee if he has polled at least 25 per cent of the total number of ballots cast, the faculty or college of the member carried over from the out-going committee not to affect the election of new members. There are seven men to be elected to this committee.

The elections will take place on the occasion of the last debate on Wednesday 26th February. Ballots will be given out until 8.15 p.m. and voting will begin at 10 p.m. or when the House rises. Nominations open on Wednesday 19th February at 9 a.m. and no person will be permitted to stand for election unless he has spoken from the floor of the House on at least one occasion at a Hart House debate prior to that at which the elections take place.

The regulations governing the elections of the Squash Racquets Committee are as follows: After two candidates have been elected to the committee from one college or faculty any candidate from another college or faculty which as yet is not represented shall be elected to the committee if he has polled at least 40 votes, the faculty or college of the member carried over from the out-going committee to affect the election of new members. There are four men to be elected to this committee.

The Squash Racquets elections will this year take place on the same day as the general elections, Wednesday 4th March, in the art gallery. All nominees for election shall be regular undergraduate squash players and only those who are regular undergraduate squash players will be permitted to vote.

Nominations for this committee open at the same time as those for the standing committees—9 a.m. on Friday 21st February—and close at 6 p.m. on Wednesday 26th February.

The Learned Ignorant

The learned ignorant. Such are many of our college graduates. Universities have become too much a system of mass distribution of facts, of mass production of a standardized product—a person who spends 4 years in intellectual mimicry, tucks a sheepskin under his arm and calls himself educated.

It has been charged that colleges rarely allow students proper time for leisure reading, for personal study and pursuit along chosen lines of native interest. If a student wishes to take a course for the strange reason that it may interest him, he may find that, in order to progress in the university system of rating education, he must take prerequisite or companion courses which merely put drudgery in education.

In early undergraduate years a student finds college merely an elaboration of elementary school. The professor gives lectures, chooses books, indicates papers. Advanced collegiate standing brings on term-papertitis, a disease in which patients scurry bleary-eyed from library to library, faithfully recording what a lot of authorities have said.

Cramping facts is not education. Our complex world apparently requires specializing. But one set of facts relates to another set, although both may masquerade in different "ologies". Interrelations, meanings are important. Those who make progress are the heretics who raise eyebrows at facts, facts, facts. Popular education needs more eyebrow raising.

Strike Up the Band!

Tonight the University of Toronto Band, representing seven thousand university students, stages its annual concert. Convocation Hall has a comparatively small seating capacity for an event of such universal interest; how nice it would be to see every seat occupied!

A great deal has been said about the band, pointing out that its members do a lot of serious work for very little reward, and that the band is a cause worthy of support. All perfectly true, but that is not all. The funny thing, which will not occur to most students, is that the band concert is really worth attending in itself. As an entertainment, at the extraordinarily cheap price of twenty-five cents, it gives more for the money than any other campus entertainment—a thoroughly enjoyable programme from start to finish, as we found out by attending a rehearsal yesterday.

This is admittedly an advertisement for the band. There is no organization on the campus which deserves support more,—we can only hope that it gets the student support which its entertainment merits. Why should not you join the throng tonight, pay your silver quarter, spend a most enjoyable evening, and let the band know that its efforts are appreciated and enjoyed.

Crime Correction Or Mere Punishment?

Harry O'Donnell is today facing death for the murder of Ruth Taylor. The situation is one which has shocked Canada profoundly but it should give rise to some serious thought on the subject of crime and its correction.

To the world at large O'Donnell, if he committed the crime of which he was found guilty, will do no more than pay the penalty such a crime deserves. He will have been treated fairly and justly. But can Canada honestly admit that he has?

Six years ago Harry O'Donnell was sentenced for a crime of almost the same nature, which, however, did not have consequences of such a serious nature. He served his time and was set free. He had paid his debt—and was allowed to go and incur more debts.

Just how long we will continue to regard a prison term as an adequate method of dealing with men who have committed crimes of this nature is difficult to say and alarming to contemplate. It has proved itself to be no cure whatever for the disturbed or unbalanced mental state which would make such a crime possible.

There are several cases in Toronto today of men who have at one time or another been connected with cases of a sexual nature. They may or may not have been sentenced but they find themselves facing immediate questioning when such an act occurs. They have paid their debt—but are potentially ready to commit new and perhaps more serious offenses.

The world today prides itself because of the scientific advances it has made in the realm of education. But the treatment of criminals of this sort has changed but slightly in the last two thousand years. They commit a crime and pay the penalty. Nothing is done to prevent the recurrence of such a crime save a constant supervision of the actions of the person involved. Such a treatment has proved inadequate. When will a change be made and what will it be? It certainly seems unfair to convict a man of an offense when his trouble is purely mental.

Mark Hellinger stuff: Campus true story, entitled:

SEAMY SIDE

Virginia was a cheerful young soul, and she stayed that way from the day she entered college to the day she graduated. She was the popular type, without any private school airs and friendly with everybody—you might almost say anybody. For Virginia was one of those persons who speak to people: people like postmen and coffee shop cashiers, and now and then when their waking hours happen to coincide, milkmen.

Virginia used to chat with the waitress who took her lunch order every day, and gossip with the handyman who puttered about the rooming-house where she lived. She even spoke to the tall man with the limp who wore an "Amputation" badge on his coat, and who lived upstairs over the coffee shop next door; but best of all she liked the old Chinaman. He called at the rooming-house twice a week to collect and deliver the laundry, and he always wore such a beaming smile on his fat shiny face that Virginia couldn't help liking him. In winter time when he came (Continued on Page 4)

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Toronto Symphony

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan made an excellent showing last night in a pleasing and well balanced group of numbers.

Mozart's Overture, Don Giovanni, opened the program with the simplicity and refined emotional expression found in most of his works. There is a wide range of emotions reflected in this overture which, however, only seem to come to the surface from time to time, giving an ominous feeling of depth and hidden passions somewhat disturbing.

In the Second Symphony by Schumann, strains were introduced which were repeated in many different rhythms and tonal colorations to give emphasis to the main theme. The third movement, slower and more profound in its simplicity, shows the composer in some of his best work. A feeling of sweet sadness is imparted and certain passages seem elusive to the understanding. In the last movement there is a gradual increase in the intensity of the theme which finally culminates in a blazing and triumphant finale.

Let's Go Places

First A Girl has received some of the most misleading publicity from the downtown critics which we have ever encountered. This latest contribution to local screen entertainment from the English studios rates most of the bouquets that have been handed to it, but for different reasons.

First A Girl is a musical show starring Jessie Matthews, in which the old dodge of having the heroine pose as a boy is given a new twist by carrying the process a step farther and having the girl-posed-as-a-boy become a female impersonator, if you follow us. This allows Miss Matthews to act quite cutely but quite unconvincingly her male part, and at the same time spend most of her time in action and attire more naturally suited to her. The tunes are catchy, the supporting cast do as well with their parts of the show as does Jessie Matthews with hers, and the result is very enjoyable indeed.

But First A Girl is not an hilarious comedy, Mr. Young to the contrary, although it has its moments. So go looking for good musical entertainment with a fair assortment of laughs thrown in, but don't go looking for something "as funny as the Marx brothers". Please don't.

VARSITY RUNNERS BEAT BROADVIEW

Varsity Capture Seven Firsts in Eight Events at Indoor Meet

Varsity speed merchants took the Broadview Y.M.C.A. runners into camp last night on Hart House track when they captured first places in seven out of eight events and ran up a total of 28 points against 18 scored by the visitors.

Varsity lads were supreme in the sprints with Harris scoring a double win to capture the 100 and 220 yard sprints.

The best race of the night was won by Lloyd Longman, the Broadview ace, who scraped out a narrow win over Kibblewhite and his team-mate Elliot in the two-mile run. Scarcely a yard separated the three men at the tape after Kibblewhite with a hundred yard sprint cut down a big lead and just failed to overtake the fleet Longman.

Delaney created a surprise when he beat Norm Campbell, Varsity graduate, in the quarter, running against time, while Conway quite easily took the half-mile from the tired Campbell.

50 yds.—Caldwell (V) 1; Coates (B) 2. 5.9 secs.

100 yds.—Harris (V) 1; Cooper (V) 2. 11 secs.

220 yds.—Harris (V) 1; Coates (B) 2. 5.1 secs.

440 yds.—Delaney (V) 1; Campbell (B) 2. 36.9 secs.

880 yds.—Conway (V) 1; Campbell (B) 2. 2:06.2.

1 mile.—Forrest (V) 1; Longman (B) 2. 4:53.

2 mile.—Longman (B) 1; Kibblewhite (V) 2. 10:03.

Mile Relay.—1st, Sproules, Harris, O'Connor and Conway. Varsity. Time 3:18.

HARO-HITTING BUSHMEN OVERWHELM WYCLIFFE

Forestry swamped Wycliffe in an interfaculty baseball fixture played in the Hart House gym yesterday by the score of 10-5.

The game was called at the end of the fourth inning on account of the five o'clock deadline, fortunately for the Wycliffe team. In the first and fifth innings Forestry went on scoring sprees and scored eleven runs, and were still at bat at the end of playing time so the final score was taken as it stood at the end of the fourth inning.

ALL-STAR HOCKEYISTS SUCCEUM TO PALS 1-0

The Toronto Pals scored a 1-0 victory over the Varsity all-star team last evening in the Varsity Arena. The game was fast and inclined to be rough with many from both sides hitting the ice. There was even one penalty assigned (to a Varsity girl) for excessive roughness.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Clarke Hood

The Olympic hockey situation still continues to boil with comments and indignation in this country, the cradle of hockey. The Manchester Guardian put it very nicely when they said that "Canada lost the title under its own name, but won it under Britain." This is rather soothing, especially coming from an English paper. Down in Ottawa we find Tommy Church, Toronto's redoubtable political veteran, urging the government to do something about the bad advertisement Canada is getting at the Olympics due to the protests lodged by the Canadian officials, notably Mr. E. A. Gilroy, president of the C.A.H.A. The thing that gets us is that this same Mr. Gilroy along with numerous other officials and a few wives should be given tickets to attend these games while Alex Hurd and Frank Stack, Canada's ace speed skaters, should be left at home. These two ice-burners are fast enough for any company and were almost sure point gainers for the Maple Leaf. It is to be hoped that when the time comes for the summer games that no promising athlete will be left off the team, just because some noisy official wants a free squirt at Germany.

This afternoon at 5 o'clock the final game in the interfaculty water polo will be splashed off in the Hart House pool when Victoria, present holders of the Echardt trophy, hook up with Sr. S.P.S. The Scarlet and Gold seven enter the water with a one-point lead due to their victory Monday night. The Schoolmen under the guidance of Doug Bruce, have been coming along in great fashion since entering the playoffs, and are quite capable of overcoming that one-goal handicap. A novel inducement in the form of double tickets to the N.F.C.U.S. brawl is being offered to all members of the winning team, the catch being that they are to meet an all-star team picked from the other teams in the series as part of the program. This should mean that School will be fighting all the more, not that they are cheap-skates, but they can make more noise than Vic and what's more they are proud of it. Yousah!!

Danforth's fast travelling basketballers pay their first visit of the season to Hart House tonight to engage Warren Stevens' Seniors in what promises to be the classic of the season. Varsity are at present perched on top of the senior city loop despite the fact that they have played fewer games than the other teams. The Sunday Morning Class have played two games since winning the verdict from Broadview over possession of O'Hara and Murchie, capturing them both, one from West End and the other from Broadview. This puts them right back in the fight and they must be regarded as a serious threat from now on. Their line-up also includes Nig Eisen, the league's most prolific scorer. All indications point to a real struggle since Varsity have their big three Marks, Connelly and Neil Sullivan, who can be counted on to pile up the points on the blue side of the ledger, while Dempster is just about due to go on another scoring spurge. As a preliminary to this game Mac McCutcheon's intermediates tangle with the quintet from Runnymede Collegiate, who are burning up the suburban league. The intermediates will be at full strength for the first time since the first of the year. Powell has recovered from his toe-nail injury and will be out there getting the feel of the pumpkin in preparation for Saturday's intercollegiate game with Western.

The swimming pool is a busy place these days as the members of the team thresh the water in preparation for the intercollegiate meet here the last day in February. Cres McCarty, who proved himself to be Varsity's most valuable swimmer by capturing the Durnan trophy, will be unable to compete due to that mysterious and peculiar ruling that hampers Trinity College. Cres has been declared eligible for intercollegiate competition by the union and also by the university, but that same Trinity rule which kept him from the water polo team now blocks his path to intercollegiate laurels. This loss along with that suffered by several of last year's team who have graduated, leaves the intercollegiate title, won so handsily by Varsity last year, wide open. McMaster led by the class John Precious, are bound to be a factor, while McGill have been strengthened by the return of Monroe Bourne, an Olympic title-holder.

That same week-end the Blue gymnastic squad journey to Montreal to defend the title won last year from McGill. Buck and Farrar are the only members of last year's team who are making the trip. To these veterans have been added Crossland, Patterson, Schumacker, with Wilson holding down the spare position. Misfortune has hounded the team, as first Powell, the most promising of the freshmen, broke his hand and had to retire from circulation. Schumacher has been idle this past week due to a sprained wrist, but was up at the gym for a workout last night. The team this year appear to have a good chance to retain the cup, as the squad are nightly displaying more class due to the coaching of Charlie Zwygard.

LAW NOT LUCRATIVE MR. LOVERING TELLS STUDENTS IN LAW

"Law is not a lucrative profession and the profession is grossly overcrowded," was the not very encouraging message of Mr. E. Lovering, K.C., to the Vocational Guidance group at Victoria yesterday afternoon. "Nevertheless," continued the speaker, who prided himself on his optimism, "there is still a chance for the enthusiastic law student to become a successful lawyer. I was told the same thing thirty years ago but I persisted and made good."

Mr. Lovering's speech was one of the regular series of talks conducted by the Victoria Alumnae Association to clarify for students the vocational possibilities of their various courses. The barrister emphasized the importance of Classics or Mathematics as a fundamental background for law, and advised against taking straight Philosophy or Political Science in preparation for Osgoode Hall.

VETS AND O.C.E. WIN BASKETBALL

Teachers Score 24 Points in Second Period to Beat Dents 27-19

O.V.C. defeated Sr. School and O.C.E. beat Dents in two interfaculty basketball contests played yesterday afternoon in the upper gym at Hart House.

The Vets took a 24-16 victory from School in the first game due to more accurate shooting on the part of the O.V.C. players. Neither team was strong on combination but the Vets' long shots clicked often enough to produce a win. Rowland was high scorer for the Vets with 12 points and McArthur was the best player for School with a total of 8 points.

The second game started very slowly and the O.C.E. squad trailed Dents at the end of the first period with the score 7-3. The Teachers went places in the second half, however, and scored 24 points to 12 for Dents which was

By E. S. W.

The basketball team is having its final workout tonight before the Bronze Baby series starts on Friday, and then the team will relax until the big event. The girls had a practice game last night with some of the Runnymede old girls and spent an hour and a half perfecting their plays.

The coaches have given up the idea of having an intermediate team, since not enough girls were interested in turning out after the senior team was picked. This will probably disappoint the McMaster intermediates and only the one Varsity squad will go to Hamilton on the ninth of March.

The U.C. swimming meet is tonight's feature in girls' sport and it will take place in the U.T.S. pool. New talent always crops up at these meets, and the results may give some indication of new members for the Varsity team which will travel to Hamilton on the twenty-seventh. Mr. Cochrane and Billy are timing people every afternoon in the Lillian Massey pool, so go and see how your time compares with other people's and figure out your chances accordingly. But if you are in U.C. turn out at your faculty meet tonight as a preliminary.

Not much has been said about badminton lately, but the tournaments are coming along nicely. The Vic tournament is just about finished, and in the U.C. tournament two rounds of the doubles and almost two rounds of the singles have been finished. Don't forget the interfaculty tourney is the first week in March.

Enough to produce a 27-19 victory for O.C.E.

Stroud was the best player on the O.C.E. squad with a total of 13 points, while Shukun got 8 for Dents.

VARSITY CAGERS MEET DANFORTH'S

Danforths Strengthened with Murchie, O'Hara, and Eisen on Line-up

Tonight at 9 p.m. Warren Stevens' senior basketball squad will come to grips with the up-and-coming Danforth Sunday Morning Class quintet, in what promises to be one of the fastest and most interesting encounters of the present season.

This will be the first meeting of the year for the two teams and an added incentive is seen in the fact that both teams urgently need the 2 points which go with the victory. Although the Blues are leading the Big Four at present a loss will bring Broadview right on the heels of the Varsity hoopers, while a victory for the S.M.C. will put them within striking distance of Broadview, at present reposing in second place.

Danforths, having lost Yank Shanahan, star of last year's squad, to the Windsor professional basketball team, started the present season two months ago, an unknown quantity. They proceeded to lose two or three games in short order and until three weeks ago reposed at the bottom of the heap. However, the acquisition of Jimmie Murchie, Len O'Hara and Nig Eisen, three of the finest basketballers in the city, has materially strengthened the team, which has proceeded to click regularly and only last week decisively trimmed Ab Rennick's strong Broadview team.

Varsity's Blues, fresh from their encounter with Queen's and McGill in which they broke even over the weekend, are in fine fettle and ready for a tidy struggle. No serious injuries were reported after the two intercollegiate tussles and the team is hoping to continue where they left off in the Big Four after their stirring one-point victory, 35-34, over Broadview two weeks ago, and thereby take a strong hold on the leadership. NOVELTY NUMBERS FOR ARTS BALL

H. Tattersall, I Law, stated that he had heard many glowing accounts of former Arts Balls, but that this year's will make all former ones seem like so many barn dances.

Ruth Perry, III Pass, feels that the Arts Ball presents an excellent opportunity for every U.C. co-ed to capitalize on her Leap Year privileges.

FRENCH ROYALISTS WEAK — DE CHAMP

three or four are Royalists." The principal Royalist support comes from Britannia.

The only political support of the Royalist party comes from L'Action Francaise, a paper edited by two of France's best writers, Charles Maurras and Leon Daudet, the son of Alphonse Daudet. These men are members of the Royalist Party. The paper has, however, only a small circulation, and its support is of little significance.

The last time the party attained political power was some sixty-five years ago. At that time dissent arose as to choice of a monarch. In the resultant disruption of the Government, the Republicans again attained an overwhelming majority.

Not only has the present Royalist Party no power or backing, but it has incurred the opposition of the Catholic Church, by "placing their royalist principles ahead of the church".

Asked whether a revolution would be necessary to install the Royalists in power, Professor de Champ gave a decidedly affirmative answer. He pointed out that French administration was highly centralized, all means of communication, for example, being under the authority of the Minister of the Interior. This centralization of power is one reason for the continuous political disturbances.

The difficulty in French politics has always been the existence of many small parties, no one of which could gain a majority. At present, however, there are two blocks of parties, one on the left and the other on the right, united to avoid the "continual changes in the cabinet". These two forces are the dominant ones at present, and will fight in an election in April. However, Professor de Champ said, "I do not foresee any revolution by the Royalist element".

She finds that she is freer than if her husband were working in the business world and wanted peace and quiet from the domestic life when he returned home tired from the office.

There is a couple in the Arts faculty who both attend lectures and thus neither finds that there is a great deal of time when they cannot be together due to pressure of school work, or if the work must be done, they are at least working side by side.

On the other hand, there are several young women attending the University who are married to men outside in the business world. One of these says, "I had time on my hands with my husband busy all day, so I decided to add to my enjoyment of life by coming to the University." Her husband heartily agrees with her point of view, and since they have no children she is not tied down in any way.

Mr. Dahmi stated that anti-British feeling had been exaggerated. Given the right to govern themselves, he said Indians would develop much better relations with British residents. This would be to the advantage of the English. Although the new constitution given India is viewed as very Liberal but actually it gives very little to India.

He criticized the very superficial study made of India by American visitors and English army officers. "The European peoples with their historical background are better disposed to study than people from this continent. Missionaries, coming in contact with social life in India, understand the natives much better than army officials in the confines of a barracks."

Sadhu Singh Dhani was born in the Punjab and has spent much of his life studying at foreign universities. He secured his M.A. degree in 1931 at Alberta. Since then he has studied at Berkeley, California, and at present is pursuing a graduate course in Educational Psychology at Toronto. Soon he hopes to return to his native land, there to devote his life to bettering the conditions of his people.

Several were of the "social butterfly" type, out to meet new people, while some were of the "lonely" class who come from out of town and are in a course in which there is no opportunity to meet students of the opposite sex. One popular young musician met a former sweetheart whom he had not seen for four years, and the two went happily homeward together, stopping only to thank a member of the committee for re-uniting them.

As his patrons, who had come singly but were leaving in couples, made their exit, the Operator announced that another such party would be held early next week. The difference, he explained, would be that there would be no need for the many phoned arrangements. An attempt would be made to discover the approximate number that would attend, but people could come to the party without first registering with the Bureau or giving any notice beforehand of their intended coming. The party, according to plans, will be held in the same place.

plodding down the street, bundled up in a heavy coat and carrying his great striped laundry bag swung over his shoulder, Virginia couldn't help chuckling and telling him he looked like Santa Claus, Oriental version.

Then one day—a particularly glorious spring day and the kind that make people like Virginia want to shout at the whole world, Virginia saw the Chinaman standing at the side door of the coffee shop, as she walked up the street on her way home from the Library. This was the street door of the apartment over the shop, and when she saw that the man with the limp was talking to the Chinaman at the door, she smiled to find two of her most distinguished acquaintances together. She was just about to include them both in a cheery greeting, when she suddenly noticed that the tall man who limped had a horribly drawn and haggard look, and that his eyes gleamed strangely as he argued in low, excited tones with the Chinaman. Then he handed over some money and she thought perhaps he was paying for his laundry, but the Chinaman dug down into his great canvas bag, slumped on the sidewalk at his feet, and pulled out a small brown paper packet which Virginia knew was too small to contain even a collar. The man who limped grabbed the packet out of the Chinaman's hand and slammed the door in his face; but the old laundryman just beamed his same fat smile as he hoisted his bag and plodded off.

Virginia didn't say a word the whole time, then she suddenly turned and dashed up the rooming-house steps as fast as she could. For a while she had a queer, uncertain feeling inside of her, and it was several days before she spoke to the odd job man or chatted with the waitress at lunch. And never after that could she bear to look at the Chinaman, with his fat, beaming smile.

at the piano very effectively brought out the varied rhythms so characteristic of this composer. A classical handling of modern harmony was a noted feature of this group.

Tonight at the Women's Union a hilarious one-act comedy entitled "I Denari Per La Laurea" will be presented by the Fraternanza. This is the first venture of the Fraternanza into dramatics and promises to be a huge success. It is based upon the scholastic adventures of Augusto (Rocco Tachetti) a wild spendthrift Italian student who takes advantage of his uncle's generous nature and attempts to extend these money getting exploits. Already a supposed graduate in medicine and law he informs his uncle that he needs but one more science and that of mathematics. "Trinum est perfectum" Uncle Cassiano (Peter Cremasco somewhat dubious about the large amount of money expended on these efforts, determines to investigate.

Orazio (Frank Molinaro, disguised as a professor, but in reality a fellow student of Augusto's, helps to complete the fraud over the uncle and has the money consigned to him. However, the three students plan to complete the denouement over the uncle, but come a cropper, as the uncle returns in the midst of their celebration of the successful fraud. The scene ends with complete forgiveness for all concerned and the players sing the famous drinking song from the Cavalleria Rusticana, (Viva il Vino Spumeggiante). The musical arrangements are by Giovanni Vinoramo (J. J. Wensweig) director of the University symphony orchestra. Luca, the faithful servant and sharer of Augusto's escapades, is played by Genaro Della Porta and Enea is remarkably well portrayed by Salvatore Benedetto. The play is under the direction of Frank Molinaro.

dances of the college year, including the Varsity Spring Informal.

The party will include a sit-down supper of several courses, with turkey in the main course, and will be complete with all the frills. Decorations will be of the type most favoured by the "Hya Yaka" boys, and suitable entertainment is being provided for the intermission.

Mr. W. A. Weir is head of the committee which is making all arrangements. The committee is said to be experimenting with the use of special decorative lighting, and originality will be the keynote of all ornamentation. The Dentists expect that this year's At-Home will be the most successful in history. As it is highly subsidized, the subscription will barely cover the cost of the meal.

SAUL RAE NOMINATED FOR MOSS SCHOLARSHIP

Saul Rae, president of the U.C. Lit. and executive member of other clubs on the campus, added another leaf to his laurels yesterday by heading the polls to win the University College nomination of the Moss Scholarship award. Securing a comfortable margin of twenty-one over his nearest opponent Claude Bissel, he was almost overwhelmingly elected as the best all-around man on the University College campus in the graduating year. Saul Rae has already been awarded one of the Massey scholarships.

Douglas Carter was elected president with a two-thirds majority over Hart Buck. Madge Shaw gave Joyce Arnold a run for the vice-presidency, losing by only two votes. Doris Huston was elected treasurer, defeating Leslie Brennan. Earlier Mervin Minsky was elected secretary by acclamation.

WOMEN'S PRESS CLUB

A regular meeting of the Women's Press Club was held at the Women's Union yesterday afternoon at which the final entries of the Short Story Contest were received. Literary contributions of the members were read and criticized.

An interesting parody of the Miltonian "On His Blindness" was well received by the members. Other poems were on diverse subjects such as "Re-tribution" and "A Chocolate Bar". A short story dealing with the subject of osculation was also read, and received much criticism.

Mrs. Harris Addresses Fellowship Group

"Accepting that the Word is Truth is the solution of the problems of life," stated Mrs. Harris, conducting a group of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship of Canada, in the absence of the general secretary, Mr. C. Stacey Woods.

The aim of the society is to make Christianity significant and vital and "Discipleship of Christ" for individuals means following Him in everyday life by the help of His great volume of truth and guidance.

To be reconciled with our fellow-men is very important in "Discipleship". The message of Christ was "Peace on earth" and the reconciliation between individuals and nations is the essential fulfillment of Christianity. Present world conditions were described as "irreconcilable" and we might do our part in righting things by a more tolerant attitude to members of other nations with whom we come in contact.

'Tho' Golden Age of Finance Gone Economists Can Still Sing-Song

Economics the dismal science? For shame! Economics a dull pursuit? No more! To the tune of Diddle Black Joe there echoed through the stately halls of old McMaster—

Gone are the days of the Golden Standard Rule
Gone are the days when the people were its tool
Gone are the days when Finance with Power could say
With high and mighty voices calling, "pay, pay, pay!"

I'm calling, I'm calling, for I want my loon today!
I hear those grasping voices calling, "pay, pay, pay!"

It sounded good. We investigated. From the back benches of the lecture room the raucous manly tones were raised in pious quavery—

Nation! Nation!
Nation! Money for me (for me)
Nation! Nation!

Oh, Nation! Money for me.
What? No accompaniment?
A chorus of rumbling laughter.
A silvery obligato.

T. S. ELIOT COMPARED TO HEDGEHOG BY SPEAKER AT WYMWILWOOD

Mr. Roy Daniels Makes Address to Victoria Women Last Night

STRESSES ELIOT'S STYLE

Eliot Had Fine Poetic Technique as well as Demonstrating Versatility

"T. S. Eliot reminds one of a hedgehog; he bristles all over with points, is theoretically easy to approach yet hard to get at practically," said Mr. Roy Daniels, introducing his subject at the supper party given by the Victoria Women's Literary Society at Wymwilwood last evening. Mr. Daniels stressed the wide appeal which T. S. Eliot has, "he has been written about and discussed by all manner of men from communist ex-princes to Anglo-Catholics, he interests the keenest minds of the day, he has even acquired a little Boswell in the person of Mr. Matheson, his recent biographer." Mr. Daniels would explain the wide interest shown in him by illustrating the many-sidedness of his achievement. His initial fascination consists in the many angles from which a student may approach him. "One could deal with him as a pessimist, as a Christian, as

ANNUAL THEATRE NIGHT OF FRATELLANZA HELD

Members Present One-Act Play in Women's Union Last Night

The Fratellanza of the University of Toronto held their first annual theatre night last night in the Women's Union when members of the club presented "I Denari Per La Laurea", a one-act comedy by Luigi Ploner. The cast was under the direction of Francesco Molinaro, and included P. Cremasco, R. Taschetti, F. Molinaro, S. Benedetto and G. Della Porta.

Following the play, Miss Phyllis Saunders, a member of the Toronto Grand Opera Company, sang an aria from "Il Trovatore".

Exam Applications

Students registered in the Faculty of Arts are reminded that their applications for the annual examinations should be filed before March 1st. Forms may be obtained at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, or at the College Registrars' offices.

VIC AND SR. SCHOOL WIN HOCKEY GAMES

Home and Home Series, Goals to Count

EXCITING CONTESTS

Last night at the Arena we saw two good games of hockey in the inter-faculty playoffs. Trinity and Vic, and St. Mike's and Senior School played off the first of a home and home series to decide the second place team.

The first game was a closely fought contest, in which Vic defeated Trinity 2-1. Vic led the play in the first period and held the puck inside the Black and Red blue line for the better part of the session, but could only make the light blink once, due to the defensive play of Bull and Sutton. With only a minute and a half to go, Saunders made a nice pass to Deacon, who banged it past Carruthers, putting Vic one up.

Trinity came back in the second period looking much better, and forced the Vics to stay at their own end. Matheson, by good goalkeeping plus a lot of luck managed to hold the attackers off for a hectic half period, but Bull finally tied it up after a scramble around the Scarlet and Gold net. Less than two minutes later Gregory slipped in the winning counter, a bouncing shot that sneaked past the goal mouth, under Carruthers' stick.

The next game saw St. Mike's come out on the short end of a 4-0 score against Senior S.P.S., Kerr starring for the victors with 3 tallies to his (Continued on Page 4)

U.C. PARLIAMENTARY CLUB IN SESSION TODAY

To Discuss Censorship of Books by Police Officers

"That this House does not approve of Police Censorship of Books" will be the motion this afternoon at the session of the U.C. Parliamentary Club.

Mr. James Nicol, who will oppose the motion, said: "It would appear that the police are the most fit censors of literature. There would be no danger of their morals being undermined by books."

On the other hand: "They used to speak about a book being unfit for a young girl to read. But imagine saying it was not fit to be read by a cop," laughed Prime Minister Jack Mirsky, brother of the Speaker.

Mr. J. D. Ross, deputy-clerk of the House, hinted his intention to speak for the Opposition, but would not make public his reasons.

TORONTO PUGILIST WINS WHITE HOPE BOXING CARNIVAL

Roaring Fans Applaud Madly as "Red" Munroe Wins Six Fights

DEMPSEY THE PROMOTER

Purpose of These Fights to Find Opponent for Louis

By Frank Lamberli

Dynamite-laden fists clad in leather gloves pounded on the door leading to boxing fame and fortune as thirty-two knights of fistiana made their bid for Canadian heavyweight supremacy in the Jack Dempsey White Hope Tourney, as the fistie horizon with promises of world's championship lay directly ahead of competitors in the Canadian elimination series held at Maple Leaf Gardens last night. A crowd which swelled to approximately 17,000 erammed the Gardens, to set a new record for attendance at sport spectacles. That age-old adage of primitive man engaged in a survival of the fittest was re-enacted amidst the clamorous roar of a crowd seeking a carnivorous spectacle of sweat-streaked gladiators locking arms to ward off the inevitable, as leg-wearied bodies, dull befogged beads, and sighing breaths protested vainly; and from this morass of struggling giants emerged victorious Phil "Red" Munroe of Toronto after engaging in a night of eventful punching. Victoria Dramatics in "Nineteen Seventy Six"

This afternoon at 5 p.m. the Victoria College Dramatic Society will present the next of its series of one-act plays in Hart House Theatre. "Nineteen Seventy-Six", written by Roy Daniels and produced by G. B. Johnston, gives a glimpse of the future when Toronto of forty years hence is stirred by the revolt of Neo-royalists against a mechanical collectivism. The struggles of the old socialist to maintain his independence against his son-in-law, who is a member of the government in power, involve the whole family in some highly amusing and highly complicated situations, and it is only by a timely intervention. . . . But come and see the show.

FRATERNITY PHONES LISTED IMPROPERLY

Difficult to Get Connection With Fraternities of Women

ERRORS IN HANDBOOK

Is it because all the women's fraternities have been exercising their historical right to change their minds, or is it that the publishers of the Handbook are just plain careless? Anyway, in case you haven't already discovered it, practically all the fraternity telephone numbers are listed incorrectly. We'll tell you about it.

It all started with the rumour that there was an epidemic of mumps raging throughout the fraternity houses of the University. We were told to check up on it. We did.

"Twas easy enough for the male establishments. Connections were smooth and fast. We put our questions, got consistent denials from all houses, and hung up. Then we tried the women.

"This is the Varsity speaking. There is a rumour that an epidemic of mumps has broken out in the fraternities. Is there any over there?" A voice with a decided some-sort-of-an-accent replied excitedly, "Vot did you saying?" (Continued on Page 4)

Plymouth Rock Plays Don Juan Infatuates Reporter Blonde

The news staff mourns the loss of one of its sweetest blonde reporters who interviewed a Plymouth Rock at Emmanuel yesterday morning and who is still far, far away judging from the vacant expression in her large green orbs. All day she gave vent to such deep philosophical utterances as "Green fields look green" and whistled between her teeth, "I'm building up to an awful let-down" . . . and so forth.

There was a valid excuse for invading the sanctum of Adonis; the mission of the meeting was to secure an advance on his play "1976", his maiden venture, to be presented in Hart House Theatre this afternoon. We heard of a musical comedy but suspect it was only an excuse fabricated by its co-editor on the spur of the moment one Friday night.

The Rock is very modest and reticent—this entire interview is hearsay, composed of what rational bits we could glean from the blonde's incoherent ravings. While he can wax enthusiastic about the direction and cast he is a little dubious about the merits of the play itself it will be obvious to anyone but the proud papa. He realizes that he has committed technical errors in

RECORD CROWD AT GAME

Victoria Unable to Hold First Game Lead of 1-0

Coming back with a sparkling offensive in the last period Sr. S.P.S. overcame a valiant Victoria waterpolo team to annex the Eckhardt trophy by a score of 4-1 on the game and 4-2 on the round, last night in the Hart House pool.

Victoria held the trophy, emblematic of the faculty waterpolo championship last year and looked as if they might repeat the feat this year, going into the final game with a 1-0 lead.

With a capacity crowd watching the two teams started off at a fast pace, Victoria appeared a little more confident behind their one-goal lead from (Continued on Page 4)

Varsity Beavers Lose To Findlay's Dairy

Score Tied at End of Regular Time

SQUABBLE WITH REFEREE

Findlay's Dairy hockey sextet trimmed the Varsity Beavers in a T.H.L. contest at the University Arena last night by a 4-2 score, in an overtime session.

Doran opened the scoring for Findlay's 10 minutes after the first period opened, when he slapped home the disc on Bill Burkhardt's pass-out in front of the Collegians' cage. Findlay's repeatedly broke through the Blue defence, and only Shipman's masterful work in the net kept the score down until the bell went.

Learn to Fly!

The address delivered by Canada's new Air Marshall, the famous war-time ace, Colonel Billie Bishop, Y.C., to the Canadian Club last week was one which should be of interest to all intelligent and progressive Canadians. Compared to the progress that has been made in aeronautics in other countries, Canada's has been almost negligible. At the present time almost every large American city is equipped with an excellent air-drome and landing field where passenger planes are arriving and leaving on schedule at all hours of the day. The Pan-American Airways maintain a regular service between the largest cities, while smaller flying lines connect other cities with the major air routes. Air travel is just as routine and accepted a mode of travel across the border as bus and railway, and the proportion of accidents from planes is no greater than from any other type of travel.

By way of contrast, the city of Toronto maintains no municipal air depot and has no regular air service connecting with the American lines. A situation like this would be laughable were it not for the fact that it is more deserving of pity. Colonel Bishop's concluding words gave good reason to believe that this deplorable state of affairs will not last much longer, if his influence counts for anything; and it is to be sincerely hoped that his efforts in this direction will meet with the fruitful results they deserve. The American Government has appropriated large sums regularly to promote the progress of aviation in that country, whereas in Canada the landing fields that have been built for refueling points on a proposed trans-Canada air route have been just relief measures occasioned by the depression, and the Dominion Government has shown little interest in commercial flying except for this. It is obvious that a country so strategically located for international air routes is going to ultimately have an important future in this respect and as soon as Canadians wake up and capitalize on their destiny, the benefits will be felt by all classes.

It is indeed pleasing to learn that in all likelihood commencing next year, the Faculty of Engineering in our own University will inaugurate a course in aeronautics, to enable young Canadians to play their role in developing the world's fastest and most mobile means of communication.

Professor and Student

It works two ways. The professor expresses deep regret that a closer companionship does not exist between him and most of his students, and the more vociferous students bemoan the same situation.

Let the complaining students step into the shoes of their professor a moment. Perhaps he is teaching a class of one hundred, or more. Consider the difficulty he would encounter in trying to learn through his own initiative the temperament, problems and personalities of each student. With the average co-operation, he is compelled to consider most of his class as so many units going through the mill. It is impossible for him to go to each student; the students must go to him. Even in the University, the mountain cannot come to the man.

Most professors give a blanket invitation to their classes to come around at any time for assistance or counsel. This is about as far as the teacher can go. The student must take the initiative then, and accept the invitation.

Perhaps the professor will not know you the first, or even the second or third time you call at his office to talk over some matter with him; but at any rate, this is the beginning of that professor-student contact which is one of the final tests in differentiating a successful university from a mediocre one.

To suppose that each professor would be intimately acquainted with each student, and vice versa, is Utopian. It is not too much, however, for the new student to expect, and the old student to desire, a closer contact than that which now exists.

Even though some never discover it in their years at the University, and some others doubt it, the professor is a human being. He cannot be expected to do superhuman tasks. On the other hand, the job is an easy, and usually a pleasant one for the student. It is in his power to make at least four or five new friends a term—men and women who can do more than teach, and when encouraged, will usually go out of their way to advise and assist.

World Youth Congress

(Submitted)

From August 31 to September 7 of this year the International Federation of League of Nations Societies is holding at Geneva, Switzerland, a World Congress of Youth. The main objects of the Congress are to provide youths of all countries the opportunity of exchanging ideas on international affairs and to discuss possibilities for co-operative action against war.

Among the subjects which are on the agenda of the congress are: the relations of youth to the community; to the economic order and to the world society; the moral and psychological basis of peace; and ways and means of common action for peace.

In Canada the League of Nations Society and the League of Nations Youth Groups are in charge of the preparations and the sending of delegates. As each country is limited to thirty delegates, every effort is being made to have the delegation as truly representative of Canadian youth as possible. All youth organizations which accept the basic aims of the congress are being invited to co-operate with the League of Nations Society in sending the Canadian delegation, and a conference is to be held in Ottawa in May to select it.

It is hoped that the Canadian student body will be represented at this congress, but this can only become possible if the students give their active support towards sending delegates. The University of Toronto has had a good representation at past international congresses, notably the Brussels Congress of last spring and the recent Indianapolis Quadrennial, and should be able to send representatives to the coming Geneva Congress. In view of the fact that the threats to world peace can scarcely be exaggerated at this time, it becomes essential that all that body of opinion in favour of peace should be awakened to a full sense of the danger, and the Geneva Congress provides one of the ways in which this may be done.

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Can a Christian government tolerate capital punishment? I shall be thankful if these few lines will find a corner in The Varsity.

On my coming from India to Canada, I find some of my preconceived ideas of life in Canada are proved false and one of these concerns capital punishment. I had a notion that hanging had been given up in America, whereas I am shocked to find that during my short stay in Canada a woman was hanged, and that now one O'Donnell is sentenced to the same fate. In a Christian country like Canada it is high time for the abolition of capital punishment. I do not mind even a rigorous imprisonment for life even though it entails life-long misery for the criminal.

However, so long as we, as Christians, believe that a man is worth more than all the world and the things therein, I maintain that even the highest tribunal has no right to take away a man's life. It may be quite true that the criminal has taken away the life of another person, but that was in his insanity.

I believe that the more humane the methods of punishment, the more it will touch the human heart and give room for sane thinking, and thereby fewer will be the crimes.

Yours truly,

C. T. Mathew, Wycliffe College.

News behind the news.

There are no railway passes for reporters to accompany debating teams on out of town trips, as there are in the case of sporting events, so it is very handy to have one of the news staff a member of the team. He knows just what kind of a story is wanted, and how many words can be economically wired at Night Press rates; and, moreover, he knows who will be reading the telegram at its destination.

Hence we hasten to explain that the wire story from Montreal was not quite complete as it appeared in yesterday's issue. Following the final paragraph, as you read it, came the signature of the debater-journalist, and a p.s.:

Visiting the late show at the Uptown the other evening for the first time in some weeks, we were interested to note that the closing ceremonies now appropriately include a portrait of King Edward VIII upon a background of a waving Union Jack, which is flashed on the screen as the national anthem is played and the curtains are slowly drawn together.

It struck us as being very impressive, because the curtain squeaks in time with God Save the King.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Margaret Eaton Hall

Owing to the success of the "The Show Off", the Actors' Colony Theatre have decided to produce another play this month, which will be "The Wind and the Rain" on Monday and Tuesday, February 24th and 25th, at the Margaret Eaton Hall. The author Merton Hodge, is a native of New Zealand, and at the time of the opening of his play he was on the staff of St. George's Hospital, Hyde Park, London. He wrote the play about medical student life as he himself knew it. He is a great friend of John Van Druten, who suggested to him Mackenzie Ward for the role of Gilbert in which he has scored such a tremendous hit.

"The Wind and the Rain" has just passed its thousandth performance in London, and though it is the author's first play, it seems to be finding its way to immortality in English drama.

The role of Gilbert will be played here by Harry Beattie, who comes from Scotland. John Holden and Grace Matthews, a graduate of University College, will play the leads. Others in the cast are Grace Webster, Robert Christie, Jane Mallett, Frank Hemingway, Richard Fonger, and Dudley Doughty. Frank Hemingway will direct again.

The H.C. Players' Guild

"Revue" is a very vague title for a show, but the Revue the Players' Guild are doing tonight is anything but vague. It contains the greatest possible variety of dramatic entertainment forced into the shortest possible time.

Lawrence Housman's Victoria Regina is the first item brought to the audience's attention. The scene in which the Queen proposes marriage to Prince Albert is full of quiet humour. Next the queen is shown as the dominating Widow of Windsor in We Are Not Amused. To introduce these scenes, two very sad sentimental songs have been unearthed, one describing the lamented death of Nelson, the other being Tosti's celebrated Good-bye.

A touch of the gruesome is introduced in Richard Hughes' The Sisters' Tragedy, a gripping tale of piety, murder and madness. The author is best known for his short stories and the novel, High Wind in Jamaica.

The Revue concludes with Ever So Humble by Prof. Louis McKay and The Crusades. The latter throws some interesting light on Home Life in the

METAPHYSICAL RELIGION HAS BECOME ANTIQUATED

Social Conditions of World Demand New Interpretation of Christianity

The old metaphysical type of Christianity is no longer adequate for the needs of modern life, R. J. Irwin, pastor of Donlands United Church, stated yesterday noon while speaking in the Music Room under the auspices of the S.C.A.

The Christian religion as taught in his youth, Rev. Irwin pointed out, was founded on dogmas and divine revelations. Now we have to face the present chaotic social conditions of the world and bring religion from the other side of the graveyard to our own everyday life.

To do this we must start our Christianity with the improvement of our social relationships. It is first necessary to square yourself with men and help mankind as much as possible before you can have communion with God. Consequently, he concluded, if a church is to have any vitality it cannot be apathetic to modern social conditions.

The University of Toronto Fraternanza in presenting their drama of "I denari per la laurea" will have several musical selections. Mr. Braheon Urban, general director of the Canadian Grand Opera Association, will be present with several of the artists, who will supplement the program arranged.

I am funnier than Aristophanes.

BIG BRONZE BABY TOURNAMENT FRIDAY NIGHT IN HART HOUSE

Girls from Four Universities in Competition for Trophy

HERE EVERY FOUR YEARS

Varsity Team Has High Hopes of Regaining Title from Queen's

The Bronze Baby basketball tournament will open Friday night in Hart House, with Varsity playing Western, and Queen's encountering McGill. This is the big event in women's intercollegiate sport, and is being held in Toronto for the first time in four years. The winners of Friday night's games will play off Saturday afternoon to decide the roosting place of the Bronze Baby for another year, and the losers will also engage in competition to decide which team will occupy the cellar position.

The "Bronze Baby" is the pet name given to the ungainly figure of an athletic maiden mounted on a pedestal, the ownership of which signifies the possession of the intercollegiate basketball championship. Queen's won the trophy last year in Kingston, for the first time in the history of the series, taking the championship away from Varsity.

Varsity is represented by a strong team this year, and has high hopes of bringing the Bronze Baby back here. Kay Brown, the captain, is playing for her third and final year. In previous series, Kay has been the star forward on the Blue and White line, and the other universities admit this by putting their best guards on to check her. Kay Grubbe and Billy McGarry are again combining on the defence, and Kay's height and Billy's ability to break up plays, are certain to cause their opponents worry. These three girls are all that is left of last year's team. New additions to the squad are Alice Elshout, Marg Glass, Erna Lang and Ellen Wilson on the forward line, and Betty Jenkinson and Alice Basnet on the defence. Alice Elshout and Marg Glass are both freshies, and are quick and difficult to check. Marg comes from the west and played on the University of Manitoba team last year.

Western's team is almost exactly the same as it was last year, with Jean Patterson replacing Corinne Cherry on the guard line. The star forward on their squad is Mary Wong, who is playing for her fifth year for the university, since she is in Medicine. The McGill-Queen's contest should be exciting to watch, since both teams play a wide-open game, shooting from way out, which is in contrast to the close checking and shooting game of Tom Powell, III Forestry, is one of the strongest members of the Varsity boxing-team and is regarded as almost a certain point-winner at the intercollegiate assault to be held in Montreal this week-end.

Tom stands 5' 10" high, weighs 145 lbs. and comes all the way from British Columbia. He won the intercollegiate welterweight title two years ago and relinquished it last year by positively the narrowest of margins, but took his man when the Varsity team visited Cornell.

Tom has been training hard all season and is in fine condition. The way he K.O.'ed his opponent at the Maple Leaf Gardens last fall indicates his punching powers, and there is no doubt as to his sparring ability. Looks like the welter crown is coming back to Varsity.

BLUE BASKETEERS WIN BOTH GAMES

Seniors Win 24-23 from Danforth; Seconds Take Runny-mede 38-24

GAMES IN HART HOUSE

By Don Robb

Varsity had a perfect evening last night at Hart House as far as basketball was concerned. The senior team strengthened their hold on first place in the Big 4 league with a 24-23 victory over Danforth Sunday Morning Class. The intermediate team continued their winning ways with a 38-24 victory over Runnymede C.I. in an exhibition game.

The result of the game was in doubt until the final minute with the Varsity squad barely managing to eke out a victory.

Varsity started the game off with a bang, Marks scoring two baskets and Connelly connecting with a foul shot, while Eisen dropped one through the hoop for S.M.C. O'Hara scored 1 point for Danforth on a foul shot and Murchie did all the rest of the scoring for the visitors during the first half with a total of 9 points, while Varsity was only able to get 4. This gave Danforth a lead of 3 points with the

By J. E. T.

Tonight U.C. and St. Hilda's will fight it out in a hockey game, the outcome of which is of the utmost importance, not only to U.C. but also to St. Hilda's and Victoria seniors. If the Red and White hockeyists win tonight, they automatically become interfacial champions, with four triumphs to their credit. But if they lose, they will be tied with St. Hilda's and Vic, each having garnered three wins, and playoffs will then be necessary. Whether Jean Atkinson, one of U.C.'s outstanding stick-handlers, will participate in the game is problematic, because of an injury to her ankle. Without the aid of this player the U.C. squad is seriously handicapped; however, Chippy Grant is still in the lineup.

Mollie Stevens and Betty Rowlin repeated last year's performance in the U.C. inter-year swimming meet, when Mollie took first place with 20 points and Betty Rowlin trailed very closely behind with 17 points. Bunty Lang of ice-skating fame, placed third, after obtaining 14 1-2 points. Mary Davidson and Fran Carlisle were both outstanding in the water but just missed being placed. Betty Rowlin exhibited some very fine diving and came first in that event, while Mollie Stevens was high in the ornamental swimming.

On Thursday, Feb. 27, a swimming meet between Varsity, McMaster and Macdonald Hall is to be held, with the following events taking place:
50 yd. free style.
50 yd. breast stroke.
50 yd. back stroke.
Diving: 1. compulsory—neat, back; 2. voluntary.
100 yd. free style relay.

This afternoon at 5.30 the Swimming Club executive is to meet in the Physical Education Office, in the Lillian Massey Building. A full attendance is

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Al Rose

Varsity's sensational victory last night over Danforth S.M.C. 24-23, sent the fans home talking to themselves and brought joy to the hearts of Warren Stevens and his Senior Blues. The Stevenites are now firmly entrenched in first place in the Big Four loop and will be mighty hard to dislodge from that position in the last stages of the race. The game was as close as it could possibly be and as the lead see-sawed back and forth, a fair-sized crowd was kept in a continual state of uproar. Moreover, it was the roughest game seen on the Hart House floor this year, as no less than 37 fouls were called during the 40 minute struggle, an average of nearly one a minute. The Blues drew down 17 of these but were only able to capitalize on 6 of the 20 opportunities thus offered. From a spectator's standpoint it was the most thrilling game of the year. And for the umpteenth time Hughie Marks was the best player on the floor, scoring 14 points in all and being a tower of strength on the defense for Varsity.

Interfacial water polo is over for another year and Sr. S.P.S. are the new holders of the Eckhardt Trophy. School's victory over Vic by 4-1 was one of the outstanding upsets of the year, comparable to that scored by Vic in rugby. Down one goal on the round at the commencement of the contest by virtue of a reverse suffered in the first game of the series, the Engineers soon found themselves two goals behind, as Vic found the School net once in the opening period while the latter failed to score. However, the old "Toike Oike" spirit came to the fore after the interval and a penalty to Earle of Vic gave School a chance, which they quickly seized and from then on they literally swamped their opponents. When the smoke and the splashing ceased S.P.S. had the game in the bag and the round won 4-2. More power to the new champions and congratulations.

Apropos of an article printed in one of the evening papers a few days ago concerning the stupid methods by which scoring points are credited in the National Hockey League, we should like to remark on the similar situation in the Senior O.H.A. On the occasion of Varsity's last visit to Hamilton, we had the extreme pleasure of sitting in the press box, distinguished from the other seats by means of a rough piece of board which is nailed to the row of seats in front and thereby serves as a writing table. To the left and below us sat the scorer and directly to the left the president of the Hamilton club was seated. Two seats away from us in the box, the sports editor of a large home-town newspaper was watching and recording the game. The goals came so thick and fast at times that naturally the poor scorer became confused. And naturally he turned to the two gentlemen we have mentioned before with queries as to who notched the goal and who got the assist. He was quickly enlightened. "You'd better give Gooney an assist on that one too. And don't forget so-and-so, he was right in on the play too. Well, what if he didn't touch the puck, give him an assist anyway." By the way, the referee was also in on the play and didn't touch the puck. However, we noticed that the official final scoring records of the O.H.A. were released yesterday and 6 out of the first 11 places went to Hamilton men. Funny, we weren't a bit surprised.

One of the most flourishing and yet least known of the indoor sport activities of the University is jiu-jitsu, about which little has been written in this column before. Jiu-jitsu or judo, as it is also known, is the national sport of Japan and in appearance resembles wrestling, combining skill, speed, observation and co-ordination of muscle. Mr. P. Kurose and Mr. T. Matsumoto, two native Japanese gentlemen who have been ordained in their homeland and are now taking post-graduate theological work in Trinity College, are the leaders of the unique class in this sport which meets every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons at 3 p.m. and on Saturday mornings. The class has a regular attendance of about 15 fellows, and tournaments are held every month. The next one will take place on March 14. Believe it or not the sport is organized on a national and international basis with headquarters on the North American continent at New York and Vancouver.

The uniforms worn are called judogis and consist of two parts, a half length coat like a short bathrobe, and a pair of baggy pants which are worn to prevent mat burns, a complete set costing about 5 sennoles (Canadian money). If any of you budding jiu-jitsuists take a look into the wrestling gym some afternoon don't be deceived by the leisurely way the boys grapple because 5 minutes of concentrated jiu-jitsu takes as much out of you as a half an hour's wrestling.

With horseshoe and wagon-tongue.

With the Cincinnati Reds already training in San Juan, Porto Rico, and other major and minor league baseball squads sending out contracts and preparing to move to the sunny south for the spring training period, baseball is beginning to take its monopolistic place again in the world of sport. The interest in the 1936 campaign is undoubtedly greater in all leagues, than that of any year since Ruth was in his heydays batting down fences in the years 1925-7. All the scribes will soon be picking their favourites, so here goes. In the American League it looks like Detroit, Boston, New York and Cleveland, in that order. Detroit's world champions with the addition of Al Simmons should have the pennant in the bag by August. In the senior circuit we rather like the Cubs, Cardinals and Giants, to finish one, two, three. Chicago's superior pitching staff should be enough to retain the flag for the Windy City B'ars. Getting closer to home, Rochester and Syracuse appear to be the class of the International League. By the way, we hear that the British stadium promoter who advertised in a Toronto paper for ball players to play in England this summer has come to the conclusion that all the unemployed in Canada are first class ball players and that all the first class ball players in Canada are unemployed.

a preliminary to the senior fixture which is being staged in the evening of the same day.

McGill, Western, O.A.C., McMaster and Varsity are entering teams in the intermediate meet. The prospects for Varsity are rather hazy, due to the fact that the standard of competition in this class of swimming is an unknown factor as far as the local lads are concerned.

All swimmers who are not swimming on the senior intercollegiate team are eligible for the intermediate team. Varsity is fortunate in having a very representative group of second swimmers. That every event can be filled with competent Varsity performers is the opinion of Coach Roy Lowndes.

Coach Lowndes is working very hard these days. His swimmers will be in three meets next week; on this Saturday the exhibition meet with Western, the following Saturday the intermediate and senior intercollegiate meets.

Three of the colleges, McGill, McMaster and Varsity, are having a team in each of the intercollegiate meets.

"All swimmers who have any intention or ambition to swim on either team must make an appearance at practice today whether they are able to enter the water or not," states Manager Doug Bruce. "The teams will be picked on the basis of those turning out today. Eligibility slips must be in tomorrow."

ADDRESS ON ELIOT

an English gentleman (especially English for having started out as an American), or merely as an extremely interesting personality," said Mr. Daniels. He is no longer a modern as many still consider him, for he wrote many of his best poems as far back as 1909. His work appeals because it is so condensed, so precise yet so deep and solid, and because it is of such wide extent and variety.

For those who seek it, T. S. Eliot has a serious spiritual message. "Eliot's approach to perfection is not by romantic by-roads; you stay where you are and go straight up to God, a direct vertical approach. Eliot trusts the church rather than the state to mould the individual and to show him the way of escaping from the flesh as typified by Sweeney, the lowest common multiple of humanity"; thus Mr. Daniels interpreted Eliot's message, and he quoted "Ash Wednesday" and "The Stairway" as illustrations of Eliot's deeper meaning.

Eliot's technique as a poet is a third source of interest. Mr. Daniels mentioned his "intellectual energy" as the most valuable thing in his early poetry. "His complete pungency, his unforgettable cadence and his adaptation of sound to sense make him valuable to those interested in writing poetry," declared Mr. Daniels. "His versatility is amazing. When he wants to he can do better than Keats at Keats' own game."

credit. The game was wide open from the beginning with the Schoolmen having only a slight margin in the first half, despite the fact that they netted the rubber three times. The Double Blue missed several opportunities near the goal, and failed to backcheck enough. As a consequence, the Engineers broke through time after time, with Kerr scoring twice, and Stothart once, King getting an assist on Kerr's second tally. Stothart took a penalty for charging Sirdevan, but St. Mike's couldn't get a fair shot.

The pace kept up in the last half, but the losers lightened up on the defence, holding School to one goal, Kerr from Wilmot. Stothart, Kerr, Wilmot and Walkey were outstanding for the Engineers, while Burke, Hoy and the Laveys led the losers.

Trinity: Carruthers, Sutton, Bull, Campbell, Hodgins, Ford, Morgan, Grand, Scrivener and Grant.

Varsity: Matheson, Saunders, Wainwright, Monzon, Gregory, Matheson, Deacon, Joblin, Pratt and Fennell.

St. Mike's: O'Brien, Burke, Sirdevan, Scandifio, C. Lavey, B. Lavey, Hay, Wright, Walsh and McCarthy. Sr. S.P.S.: Stroud, Stothart, King, Wilmot, Kerr, Woods, Davidson, Walkey and Fisher.

the last game. Checking was close and fast and in the first three minutes there were three shots on each goal. At the five minute mark a Victoria offensive netted a counter when Scott outtraced his check to swim in on Thompson and flip the ball in at an almost impossible angle. No further scoring resulted before half-time.

Coming back after the rest period the Schoolmen quickly found the range when Bruce eluded his check to swim up the tank and score the first goal of the series for S.P.S. Taking heart at this turn of events the engineers put on a spurt and Victoria gave them a golden opportunity when Earl was ejected for moving when the ball was not in play. It was short work with a man advantage for Zachanko to put School ahead on the game and tie the round 2-2. Not satisfied with this Zachanko again fought the ball away from his check to put it past MacDonald in the Vic citadel once more. With but two minutes to full time Vic tried hard but could not beat Thompson, who played an outstanding game in the nets.

Time after time Scott of Vic worked in with Earl but they could not dent the twins.

Staging a three-man rush with but a minute to play, School made the winner obvious when under the pressure of

Besides contributing a fair share of the editorials, Miss Arnott also conducts a column entitled "A Sooner at Large" which appears daily. The word "sooner" has some special meaning in Oklahoma—it sounds like a kind of wind to us, but we have never been brave enough to confess our ignorance and ask for enlightenment.

What we really started to say is that the Sooner sheet has very fine editorials, some of which are reprinted in The Varsity following our policy of letting you readers know what other universities are doing and thinking.

Varsity and Western. Unfortunately three of Queen's best players will be unable to play because of illness, and Ruth Fishleigh, a crack forward, is ineligible. However, they still have three of last year's players in their line-up, and are depending on fast playing and superior combination to retain the championship.

The McGill team is the dark-horse of the series, but they can be counted on to bring up a strong team. Four of their girls played together through high school, so their co-operation should be something to watch.

FRATERNITY PHONES WRONG

Apparently that wasn't the right place.

After that, we were more careful. We very politely inquired if that was such-and-such a fraternity. The trouble is, it never was such-and-such a fraternity. It was always some private house, where the inhabitants had never heard of such-and-such a fraternity before, and most decidedly never wanted to hear of it again. It was very discouraging.

We did glean some very interesting information eventually, though. There are fifteen Women's Fraternities listed in the Handbook. Of those fifteen, two haven't got their phone number mentioned. Of the remaining thirteen, another two have the number of the president only—and she's never in. That leaves eleven; work it out for yourself sometime. But one of the eleven was busy for an hour and a half at a stretch, so it doesn't count, leaving a mere ten. And of those ten, seven had their phone numbers listed incorrectly. Which is a flagrant example of false pretences or something.

We still don't know whether there is an epidemic of mumps, or of anything else, in the women's fraternities. In fact, we are beginning to doubt that there are any women's fraternities.

T.H.L. HOCKEY

Creasy opened the second twenty minutes with a flurry when he tapped a millman on the head with his stick, and Varsity took heart. Findlay's added another tally when Rose scored, but Lenahan beat Ramsay on a power-play and the period ended with the Blues trailing 2-1.

Early in the final frame Referee Mollenhauer presented Lenahan with a penalty, much to the crowd's disgust. After several minutes of argument, during which the original offender was lost sight of, Creasy departed to the cooler. With five minutes to play, Brown passed to Lindsay, who shot from about fifteen feet out, beating Ramsay and tying the score.

In the overtime Bowcott and Drummond scored on Shipman while Boddington was serving a penalty. This ended the scoring and left Findlays two up. For Findlays, Doran and Burkhardt were outstanding, and for the losers, Shipman, Lindsay, Brown and Crichton.

Varsity: Goal, Shipman; defence, Sissons, Brown; centre, Creasy; wings, Lenahan, Boddington; alternates, Lindsay, Stavert, Crichton, Wilson.

Findlays: Goal, Ramsay; defence, Bowcott, Gerrard; centre, Doran; wings, Thompson, Rose; alternates, Drummond, Burkhardt, Brown.

Referees: Mollenhauer, Heintzman.

score 12-9 at half time.

Both teams speeded up at the beginning of the second half but neither was able to score, although S.M.C. had a slight edge in the play. Varsity's tight defense kept the Danforth team too far from the basket to sink the ball.

Eisen was the first to score, giving the visitors a 4 point lead with a foul shot. This advantage was short lived, however, for Marks tied the score by sinking a basket and two foul shots. After this the lead see-sawed from one team to the other. Mincevich of Danforth went out of the game, followed by Neil Sullivan of Varsity, both via the personal foul route.

Murchie and Eisen put the S.M.C. team back in the lead with a basket apiece to make the score 19-15. Varsity countered with baskets by Connolly, Dempster and Marks and a foul shot by the latter to put Varsity up 22-19. Both teams started to roughen up the game and Eisen and Sanford of Danforths along with Connolly of Varsity, retired from the game with four personals each.

Danforths tried desperately to get the lead towards the end of the game and Gillespie scored 3 points. Tommy Sullivan countered with 2 for Varsity. Murchie dropped a foul shot through the hoop just as the whistle blew to end the game, giving Varsity a one-point victory. Marks was high scorer for the seniors with 14 points, and Murchie topped the Danforth squad with 12. The seniors missed opportunities to improve their score, due to poor shooting on foul shots, with a total of only 6 points out of 20 shots, while Danforths got 9 out of 17.

neymede Collegiate squad a taste of intercollegiate basketball by handing them a 38-24 trimming in the opener.

The intermediates had a bigger margin on the play than the score indicates but the Runnymede team managed to bottle up the Varsity squad's scoring attack to some extent by fouling the home team's sharpshooters.

Varsity ran up a score of 18 points to Runnymede's 9 in the first half by keeping the visitors well away from the basket, with the result that most of their 9 points were scored on long shots.

Varsity's usual fast passing attack dominated the play again in the second half with a total of 20 points to Runnymede's 15, making the final score 38-24 for the Blues.

WHITE HOPE BOUTS

Throughout the evening, the scene repeated itself as ambitious youths from as far west as Winnipeg, Manitoba, came to Toronto in an effort to gain recognition. Flailing fists, and dull thuds echoed as hopes went crashing to the canvas. It was only in the semi-final that fighting around was dampened somewhat, as Pat Flannigan from London tangled with Red Munroe. Munroe with his fast left jab and right cross kept the heavy plodding London lad at a safe distance and then proceeded to use solid body blows which slowed up the hard hitting Flannigan, who had won his way to the semi-final by his deadly punching. In all four rounds Munroe showed too much boxing skill plus and succeeded in flooring his opponent several times to gain a well earned decision.

After a ten minute interval Munroe was drawn against the clean cut Winnipeg youth, Jack Slip, and a lively bout resulted. The first round found Red Munroe testing out the awkward Jack Slip by resorting to body punches, which had little effect until the second round. In a swift exchange of punches at close range Slip seemed to take advantage but Munroe quickly went back to boxing and stood him off. Probably realizing that punching at close quarters might give Slip a better chance, his hands sent the Winnipeg youth out to mix it freely, and within one minute and twenty seconds this fallacy was discovered as Munroe rallied, and after battering his opponent around mercilessly smashed a left to Slip's jaw to gain his first knock-out of the evening, writing a spectacular finish to his meteoric rise amongst Canada's contributions to pugilism.

TASCHEREAU RESIGNATION IN NEAR FUTURE PROBABLE

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Berlin: Possibilities of an Italo-German rapprochement, and the withdrawal of Italy from the Loarno treaty were seen today in diplomatic circles when Ulrich von Hassell, Germany's ambassador in Paris, left for Rome after his second conference in five days with Reichsführer Hitler.

Trenton, N.J.: Governor Hoffman stated that he would not grant Hauptmann further reprieve, but claimed that the Lindbergh kidnapping was still unsolved.

Detroit: William J. Mulqueny, who killed Len Koencke (when the latter went mad) in an aeroplane struggle over Long Branch, has been nominated for the annual hero award given by the Michigan chapter of the United States army's Rainbow Division. The pilot's "coolness and ability" which saved the life of a fellow passenger, was praised.

Berlin: Commercial telephone-television over long distance will be inaugurated at the opening of the Leipzig Fair, March 1.

CURRENT AFFAIRS AS DEBATE TOPICS

Advisability of Holding Debates on Practical Subjects Instead of Theoretical Ones

BRINGS IN POLITICS

Should college debaters discuss actual bills as they appear in parliament rather than non-political, conventional subjects? The opinion of University of Toronto students and debaters on this question was sought by The Varsity yesterday.

Over 400 debaters in 24 colleges in New York State are at present debating upon such measures as crime, traffic control, amendments to the Constitution and child labour as they come up in the Legislature. It is felt that in this way the students are better prepared to become voters, citizens and even members of the Legislature. A more practical approach to the problems of the day is desired, instead of a purely academic one.

"A typically American idea," was the comment of Bill Broughall, Speaker of the Trinity College Literary Institute. "The point of debate is to afford intellectual exercise; why obscure this intellectual enjoyment by throwing it open to political discussion?" he continued. Mr. Broughall expressed the opinion that the practical side of debating and the discussion of modern (Continued on Page 4)

Architects Convention Held Here Yesterday

The Ontario Architectural Association convened yesterday for their annual congress to discuss matters dealing with their profession. It is of interest to U. of T. students to note that the possibility of preparing high school students in their junior and senior matriculation courses for further study in architecture was debated. It was pointed out that the only schools of architecture for elementary purposes in the province are S.P.S. and the Ontario College of Art.

The Eglinton Hunt Club on Avenue Road and Eglinton will be tastefully decorated in garnet and sky blue, the colours of the Dental Faculty. The idea is to have the decorative scheme typical of the college tradition.

HEALTH UNAFFECTED BY UNIVERSITY STUDY

At End of Four Years Women's Health is Usually as Good as at Beginning

The health of the women who have spent the last four years in the University is in the main just about the same as when they entered, according to research into the question by Dr. Edith Gordon, who is in charge of the health of the women in the University of Toronto.

Dr. Gordon has made a slight change in her usual procedure this year, and instead of merely asking the heads of the graduating years to get in touch with the women and have them come to see her, Dr. Gordon has sent out letters to each student in person. As yet there has not been a very great response and it is difficult to give any definite idea as to the state of health of those concerned.

In the opinion of Dr. Gordon, we are behind the times in this matter of looking after the health of students. In Cornell University an examination (Continued on Page 4)

T. Kenneth Thomson Credits Dr. Galbraith for Success of "School House"

IS EXCAVATION AUTHORITY

T. Kennard Thomson, founder of the Engineering Society, inventor of the Pneumatic Cassion and authority on excavation projects in New York, yesterday returned to the scene of his undergraduate days.

Dr. Thomson is to be the guest speaker at the semi-centennial anniversary convention of the Engineering Society, the society which he himself founded fifty years ago, to be held in the Royal York Hotel today.

There were just 123,000 people in the city of Toronto and the School of Practical Science had but sixteen graduates when he formed the Engineering Society he told The Varsity yesterday. He made an effort to establish such an organization in 1882 he said, but it was in 1884 that the society first enjoyed an active existence. In 1885 the first official recognition was given when they held their first dinner at the Queen's Hotel.

Jimmie Jones was the guest speaker at that historic dinner. "Jimmie is a magistrate in Toronto now," added Dr. Thomson.

MONEY PROBLEMS SEEN AS DECIDING FACTOR CAUSING EXPLOITATION

"Are nations justified in exploiting colonies to enrich their own civilizations?" was the problem discussed by Mr. R. G. Riddell's current events group at Wymilwood last night.

"Since the war, there have been no definite rates of money exchange between countries and international trade has thus become very difficult," explained Mr. Riddell. Since such is the case, ambitious nations desire to establish "currency areas" of their own in which trade can go on unhampered by clashes between two sets of currency.

This ambition can be accomplished by the possession of colonies who use the currency of the motherland, and thus the race for ownership of colonies is partly due to the money problem existing in the world today.

Police Censorship of Books Voted Down by U.C. Parliament

The motion "that this house does not approve of police censorship of books" was upheld 26-13 at yesterday's meeting of the U.C. Parliament. Premier Mirsky's government was the first in months to stay in office more than two weeks.

Premier Mirsky condemned any censorship "as an attempt to veil reality". He added to this the incompetence and unintellectual training of the Toronto police force and concluded that police censorship of books would be ridiculous. The prime minister further stated that morals in general were a matter for the individual and thus the police are not justified in censoring books.

L. O. Nicol centred his arguments around the ability of the police to develop a book morality squad. He considered bad books as the greatest source of crime. "Different types of morals are required for different communities."

GEOGRAPHY COURSE RECENTLY STARTED FINDS FAVOUR

Dr. Taylor Outlines Plans for Continuance of Study Next Year

START LABORATORY WORK

Five hundred students are now taking the new course in geography which was started this year, but that only marks the beginning, according to Dr. Griffith Taylor, professor of the course.

"Since this is its first year at the University, the subject is being taught in conjunction with other courses," Professor Taylor pointed out, when interviewed yesterday. "Next year, however, a special course in geography will be started." He added that in the new course he hopes to have two or three hours a week for laboratory work. This time will be devoted to teaching the students practical work, such as surveying, marking positions on maps by latitude and longitude observations, and making topographical drawings and models.

Dr. Taylor also drew attention to the fact that, although in the United States there are over two hundred professors of geography and three or four instructors in the subject at any large university, in Canada he is the only (Continued on Page 4)

NEED FOR FRIENDSHIP STRESSED BY SPEAKER

Men and Women of College Age Separated by Their Own Selfishness

Speaking on "Co-education" at Wymilwood yesterday afternoon Mrs. Jean Hutchinson presented her conception of true friendship between men and women of college age.

This she felt was based upon an open discussion of common problems, a direct honesty of behaviour and an abolition of prejudices which may have been wrongly conceived during childhood.

Mrs. Hutchinson felt that an over-indulgence in pretences and a prevalent selfishness on both sides were two of the chief causes of the failure of such friendships.

Russian Play Is An Amusing Comedy Concerning Grafting Officials

TICKETS ALREADY ON SALE

The director and cast are hard at work, the stage-fittings are well underway, and the ticket sale of The Inspector General has begun, revealed Mr. C. R. Delafield in an interview yesterday. Mr. Delafield is acting secretary of the University Drama Committee, the sponsors of the play.

Unlike the majority of the Russian plays presented here, The Inspector General is a most amusing comedy. The scene is laid in a provincial town in Imperial Russia, where the corrupt town officials have been having a merry time since the last Government inspection, 10 years before. They get secret advice that an Inspector General is visiting them incognito to check up on them, which immediately throws them all into a panic.

Liberal Party May Hold Election in Summer Under New Leader

CORRUPTION HINTED

By Ross Munro

Montreal, Feb. 20.—With the political pot in old Quebec seething and boiling as the next session of the provincial legislature approaches, political forecasters in this city prophesy the personal downfall of Premier Louis Alexandre Taschereau, who has led the Liberal government in French Canada for the past 16 years.

Persistent rumours in French newspaper offices here claim that Taschereau has already resigned as head of the Quebec government and the party is only marking time until they can decide upon a competent successor before they announce the resignation.

Other speculation, which is probably more reasonable, contends that Premier Taschereau will lead the government and the house during the next session but will step aside and his position taken by Hon. Honore Mercier. Political writers on the Montreal (Continued on Page 3)

Varsity Wrestlers, Boxers, and Fencers Entrain for Montreal This Week-end

NOW HELD BY QUEEN'S

By George Vair
This week-end Varsity's boxing, wrestling and fencing team entrain for Montreal in an effort to lift the Tom Gibson Memorial Trophy won by Queen's last year. Preliminary bouts will be held tonight with the finals scheduled for Saturday evening.

This year's boxing team is generally regarded as one of the strongest to be seen in university circles for some time. Boxing in college circles has never been up to the standard of downtown amateur bouts but this season Frankly Brown has been matching the students with outside local punchers and the results have been promising. Besides this the collegiate leather slingers held a meet with O.A.C. and have only recently finished the senior assault, all of which points to the fact that they are in tip-top condition. Tudor Atmosphere At Arts Ball

King Henry VIII and Sir Thomas More looked down from the wall in amicable interest on the gaily bedecked dancers celebrating the Tudor program at the Ontario College of Art Ball last night. Effective paneled walls, jewel toned "stained glass" windows and portraits of famous Elizabethan characters, all done by the students provided a perfect setting for the costumed revellers who ranged all the way from black-clad executioners to Queen Elizabeth, herself.

After the presentation of prizes to Miss Lillian Cribbs as Anne Boleyn and Mr. Stewart MacKenzie as Henry VIII, a hearty supper was served in the true old English tradition on long board tables downstairs.

For Interchange Of Academic Ideas

The distinguished men who, from time to time, come here from other universities to deliver public lectures bring with them an exchange of ideas and a stimulation of thought of great value to the life of a University. We do, however, feel that there is a decided lack of exchange of lecturers in specific fields between the Canadian Universities.

Particularly in those subjects which depend for their significance on the point of view of the professor, as for example, the political and social sciences, is the need felt for a system which would permit men from another University to deliver classroom lectures. Here at Toronto we have professors in these faculties who have made definite contributions to their particular study and who have written books on it and yet are practically unknown as far as the student body of other Universities are concerned. The same is true of accomplished men in the other colleges of Canada.

Public lectures have an undeniable value but the public lecturer must of necessity confine himself to a general discussion of his topic in language comprehensible to his audience. Under the system which we are advocating the lecturer would be free from this handicap. He would deliver a lecture similar to those he gave to his own students and as he would be addressing only students who understood the subject there would be no restriction on the use of technical language.

The effect on the students of a few lectures by an outside professor would be not only increased knowledge of the subject but much keener interest resulting from the comparison of different points of view. Nor is it inconceivable that the lecturer himself might profit thereby.

An experiment of the kind was conducted by the department of English last fall when a member of the Toronto faculty went to an American University to deliver several lectures and the visit was later returned. It is to be hoped that the difficulties which lie in the way of the general adoption of the system will not prove too great and that before long these exchanges may become a regular part of University life.

Statesmen Ruined By Outside Pressure

The recent rumours from Montreal to the effect that Premier Taschereau is due for an eclipse does not come as a surprise when it is considered that he has led the Liberal party to victory in Quebec for the past sixteen years. While not taking any political view of the situation it is apparent that few if any men can remain at the head of an administration for any great length of time without getting themselves into difficulties. These difficulties may be real or imaginary, but in many cases they are real.

In Montreal the Taschereau regime has been subjected to criticism for partisanship. Figures are published to show the number of friends and relatives he has employed through the civil service. These may or may not be true. But the chances are there is room for complaint if he has been in a position to hand out jobs for sixteen years. Jobs which draw a salary from the tax-payer's money, are usually obtained through influence rather than ability. True, ability may count, and where it is a choice between a man of known ability who is known to the employer, and a man who is not, there appears but little fault to be found with choosing the man who is known. But as long as men can get votes for handing out jobs, they will do it, often without considering the merits of the case. Otherwise they will not get the votes. Where then does the fault lie? With the prospective employee or the employer? Most politicians, or rather statesmen, are sincere, and if not subjected to pressure from the electorate would be only too glad to act freely and impartially.

However, history tends to prove that men left long in charge of public organizations either yield to the pressure from without or within and conclude their efforts by being discredited. Canadian history is well decked with figures of this sort—men who served their country well—but attempted to serve their friends equally well.

Just how this situation can be avoided is a problem which the future alone can solve. But when it is solved a Utopia will have been attained. No organization, public or private, can function to perfection unless the officials of the organization are perfectly fair and honest. And few men elected to office by the public vote can afford to be perfectly fair and unbiased in all respect if they have ambitions which depend for realization upon the continued support of the electorate. The fault lies with the electorate as well as the official, but when the end comes the official is sacrificed on the altar of public opinion. A reputation is stained—but it is not always the fault of the official.

Clearing Up A Situation

The Editor, The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

In your issue of 19th February, 1936, under the heading of "Speaking of Sport" on page 3, the following statements appear regarding Mr. C. A. McCatty, that he "will be unable to compete due to that mysterious and peculiar ruling that haunts Trinity College", and that he has been declared eligible for intercollegiate competition by the University but that same Trinity rule now blocks his path to intercollegiate laurels.

The ruling under which Mr. McCatty was this session debarred from intercollegiate competition was established at the opening of the season by joint action of the four Arts colleges, and consequently applies to all students in the Faculty of Arts. Hence, it cannot properly be described as peculiar to Trinity College as it applies with equal force to students enrolled in University, Victoria, and St. Michael's Colleges.

Further, I am at a loss to understand the statement that Mr. McCatty has been declared eligible for intercollegiate competition by the University. So far as I am aware no official of the University has made, or would be in a position to make, such a declaration. Individual members of the staff of the University may have expressed their opinion that he should be eligible, but such expressions of opinion could not constitute an official declaration of eligibility.

In closing, I may say that the ruling adopted by joint action of the Arts colleges is their interpretation of the definition of eligibility which appears in section 2(a) of Part 3 of the constitution of the C.I.A.U.

I shall be grateful if you will publish this letter in the columns of The Varsity in order that the misapprehension which evidently exists regarding this ruling may be corrected.

Yours very truly,

A. B. Fennell,
Registrar and
Secretary of the Faculty of Arts.

After a lengthy and heated controversy England has finally won the Olympic hockey title and Canada, for the first time, has been forced to relinquish the crown. The play-off system which the officials devised seems to have caused most of the trouble.

If the committee had given 3 points for a loss, 2 for a tie, and one for a win the whole system would probably have been greatly clarified.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Victoria Dramatic Society

That a professor of Milton employs his spare time profitably was yesterday demonstrated with the production of Nineteen Seventy-Six, written by Roy Daniels of the staff of Victoria College. Forty years from now Socialism has the world in its grasp but is already losing its grip. Demonstrators in the street wave placards that cry down with Socialism and up with the new Monarchy, and revive such slogans of the capitalist era as "Pooley to you sir!"

The laughs come every other line in this original comedy, and the only criticism that can be made is that the in-between lines were not of sufficient length and unimportance so that the actors could have barged straight ahead without pausing interminably for silence as they were so often forced to do. Harry Beer as the grandfather who led the socialist revolt up Yonge Street in the good old days, fooling the fascist forces by switching all the stop lights against them, turned in an excellent performance.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crockower

The big gym at Hart House is certainly in for a busy week-end with the women cagers struggling for the coveted Bronze Baby and Warren Stevens' Varsity basketball team taking on the Mustangs. The ladies start their warfare tonight with a double bill and end up tomorrow. The men take over after the women have finished serving the oranges and present a double bill tomorrow night. As stated previously in this column the Senior Blues must win all their remaining games to stay in the running, and with the added incentive of averting their last defeat at the hands of the Purple and White crew Steve's lads will probably be on their very best behaviour this week-end. In the preliminary game Mac McCutcheon's Seconds will take on the Purple Seconds and should have very little trouble in keeping their record intact.

Speaking of the Blue Seconds reminds us that this very little publicized crew is deserving of some delayed praise. We watched Mac's youngsters perform up in Guelph last week and were very much surprised to see the lads perform in such pleasing fashion. The Seconds are a well-coached crew and are by far the class of the Intercollegiate Intermediate group. There are a number of potential seniors in Mac's crew, notably Nelson Hogg, "Red" McLaughlin, Percy Singer, Charlie Peters and a few others. It wouldn't surprise us very much if these lads perform in senior ranks next year.

Down in Montreal the Intercollegiate Assault will no doubt furnish some keen entertainment. As usual the coaches of the four participating squads have each claimed this year's title with adequate proof for their cocky assurances. However, as demonstrated on Wednesday night in the White Hope tournament, anything can happen at one of these assaults and we prefer to sit tight and wait for the results before we start cheering. We will say, however, that should the Blue boxers hold up their end of the struggle the title will return to Varsity as Mr. Martin's wrestlers will be tough assignments for anyone.

He will be offered as a sacrifice by the Liberals to placate the constituents who showed considerable antagonism against the government in the election of last Nov. 25.

The Gazette contends that the revamped Liberal party will go to the country next summer under the leadership of the probable new leader of the government, Hon. Honore Mercier, in an endeavour to determine whether it is Taschereau the citizenry object to or the Liberal party itself.

Despite the fact that the new "rebel" party, Actione Libérale Nationale, which broke away from the old-line Liberals, are riding the crest of the wave, staunch Liberal sources in Montreal believe a reunion between the two groups is next to impossible. Even the resignation of Premier Taschereau, who is the main target for the national group led by Paul Gouin, would not placate them, it is generally believed.

One observer stated that the Actione Libérale Nationale might join with the Conservative element and shove the Liberals out of office. They have only a slim majority in the legislature at present.

But Premier Taschereau is on his way out and one of the most colourful and fiery politicians in the dominion will withdraw from the political battlefield on which he fought for over three decades. He was elected to the Quebec legislature in 1900 and, after holding several cabinet posts, assumed the premiership in 1920. He is also attorney-general and minister of municipal affairs.

Political corruption, graft and patronage is alleged to be the price paid by the Taschereau government for their long period of office.

Besides being premier, Taschereau is director of one bank, six insurance companies and several corporations.

Political enemies have levelled a barrage of criticism against the premier for what they contend has been unprecedented extension of political patronage to members of his family and political satellites.

The Liberals in Quebec have made it the stronghold of the party for two decades but now their power is tottering before the criticism of Gouin and his rebel group and the pressure of the more conservative sections of the province.

BLUES DETERMINED TO AVENGE DEFEAT GIVEN BY MUSTANGS

Will be at Full Strength for Saturday's Game with Western

ARE AT PEAK OF FORM

Intermediates Are Expected to Win Their Encounter without Trouble

The air around the gymnasium these nights reeks with the spirit of revenge, as the Varsity seniors prepare for the Saturday night invasion of the Western basketball squad. This Purple and White squad, by virtue of their one-point victory over the Blue team at London, put Varsity on the spot, greatly lessening their chances of winning the intercollegiate title. However, Warren Stevens' charges are leaving nothing to chance, and are out to give the naughty Mustangs a good spanking.

Wednesday's victory of Varsity over Danforth revealed the students at the peak of their form, and Western will be meeting a team who are travelling at top form right now. No injuries resulted from the grueling tussle, against the Danforth bush-whackers, so Western are due to meet a vastly different team from the one they defeated before.

The intermediates appear to have a cinch in their encounter with the Mustang seconds. Mac McCutcheon's quintet are easily the class of the league as they have shown by decisive victories over the other teams in the group. Larry Powers is back in the line-up, and should add what looks like unnecessary strength, while Dougherty and McLaughlin are due to go on at a scoring spree.

TOM GIBSON TROPHY AIM OF BLUE TEAM

Johnnie Millson, at 118 lbs, will be the only Toronto pugilist to be defending an intercollegiate title and the shifty red-head should come through in his bouts. Freddie Smith, who suffered a tough break last season when he took a wild swing on the chin from Snolkin of Queen's to put him out of the running, is back again and looks to be more than a "hope" in the 126 lb. class.

An old face, but new to the uninitiated, will enter the squared circle when Len Lossing enters the ring after coming out of retirement to take the 135 lb. senior assault title last week.

Ciarley Pocius will be Toronto's heavy-weight entry while Bolter (155) will wear the Blue as a result of his win in his assault. "Jock" Pigott, a newcomer to senior fight ranks, has scaled down to 165 lbs. and must be regarded as a strong contender for the middle-weight belt. The light-heavy class is not being contested by Toronto.

Johnston, who grapples in the 125 lb. division, will be the only wrestler with an intercollegiate title at stake. The Toronto mat-men won two decisive meets with Buffalo and although somewhat of an unknown quantity in intercollegiate competition will provide the opposition with plenty of tricks. The team consists of Austin (118), Robertson (135), Houle (145), Cruickshank (155), Newell (165), Van Allen (175), Lathrop, heavyweight.

The fencing crown won by McGill last year will be contested by Michell, Bachert and Tushingham of Toronto.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Tonight's the big night, in women's intercollegiate sport, as we've been telling you for some time, and by tomorrow afternoon the possession of the Bronze Baby will have been decided for another year. The Western team, Varsity's opponents tonight, are arriving at noon, and the McGill and Queen's squads will be here by dinner time. The intercollegiate basketball series is held here only once in four years, so this is your opportunity to see women's basketball at its best.

All the universities claim to have strong teams this year, but nevertheless

St. Hilda's won their game with U.C. last night so now these two teams and Vic Seniors are tied for the inter-faculty championship, and playoffs will be necessary. Elaine Knight and Gladys Carvoth scored the two goals for the Saints, who were leading 2-1 at the end of the second period. Having secured the lead the Trinityites settled down to maintain it, and spent most of the last period shooting the puck down the ice. Jean Atkinson was unable to play for U.C., which was rather too bad as she is a moral support to her team as well as its stellar defence man. It is to be hoped she will be able to appear on the ice in the playoffs, the dates of which will have to be decided by the Hockey Club Executive.

Don't miss the games tonight in Hart House. They ought to be good.

Let's Go Places

Uptown—
We have always enjoyed Harold Lloyd pictures. Ever since our very first picture, when we fell out of our mother's lap in delight at his antics, he has had the power to send us rolling into the aisles.

His latest picture, "The Milky Way" is no exception. All the old Harold Lloyd wit and whimsicality are there in generous doses, and the picture ranks among this star's best.

In "The Milky Way" little Harold becomes a prize fighter through no fault of his own. He manages to get into a brawl in the early stages of the picture from which his opponent, a burly individual, emerges with a black eye. Harold emerges unscathed, and with a reputation as a fighter.

The rest is simple. A friend arranges a flock of set-up fights and a lot of publicity for Lloyd, and he is well on his way to national fame. The trouble comes when the new fighter begins to believe some of the things said about him.

There's a light romantic touch throughout the film. Helen Mack supplies it in typical Helen Mackish style. We have seen this rising young lady in better performances, but nevertheless, she fits into the scheme of things very well. Maybe she realized what is obvious to all who have seen the picture, that a Harold Lloyd production is not expected to star anybody but Harold Lloyd.

professor in geography. He believes, however, that there is room for about twenty more professors on the subject in this country.

As an example of the practical work being done by geographers Professor Taylor mentioned the Tennessee Valley Project (the T.V.A.) now under way. Seventeen eminent geographers, under the direction of one of his former pupils, have been hired by the government to assist in the farm planning.

Dr. Griffith Taylor was appointed to the chair of geography at the University at the beginning of this school year. This was the first chair of its kind established at a Canadian university and the other day Dr. Charles Cammell, Deputy Minister of Mines, congratulated the University of Toronto on "leading the way in Canada in the matter of providing facilities for advanced geographical instruction."

political problems was much overrated. "Unless the student is interested in politics as a vocation, political discussion really doesn't mean much," Mr. Broughall declared that adequate discussion of political issues was to be had in special study groups or in fraternity arguments.

The woman's view of the question was expressed by Ann Ferguson, U.C. III, who is a member of the women's intercollegiate debating team. "I think women have a potential capacity to debate on current affairs, but in actuality, the men exercise their capabilities where women do not," she said. The validity of the subject is not the essential factor in debate, according to Miss Ferguson; the real purpose is to convince by means of rhetorical ability. "Some of the best debating I have listened to has been on unusual or facetious subjects," Miss Ferguson concluded.

"Students are not impartial enough to discuss political issues calmly," said Kay Knight, Trinity I. "When we graduate, we ought to be able to take part in politics, instead of sitting on the sidelines sneering at politicians," declared Roxalyn Read, of the women's intercollegiate debating team. Mary Burnham, Trinity IV, president of the St. Hilda's College Literary Society, was of the opinion that women haven't enough brains to argue on weighty

Dr. Thomson attributed much of the success enjoyed by the "Little Red School House" to the ability and efforts of John Galbraith, its founder. "Without him," said Dr. Thomson, "I should never have graduated." Dr. Thomson was almost entirely deaf when he came to college. He experienced difficulties in following the lectures of some of the professors, but not those of Galbraith.

"Dr. Galbraith, instead of allowing me to approach as close as possible to the platform, would come and stand by my chair while he lectured," stated Dr. Thomson. "He was never known as Dr. Galbraith, or Dean Galbraith, but chose to be called simply Professor Galbraith."

Since leaving the University, Dr. Thomson has retained an active interest in the affairs of the Engineering Society. He outlined his early efforts to make the organization solvent. "About 1900 I circularized the 700 graduates of the School. The Engineering Society would have been richer had I saved the postage and added it to the funds," he remarked. "Then Dr. Galbraith came to the rescue. He assessed each undergraduate one dollar, a custom which has existed since that time, and which has ever since kept the society solvent."

R.G.A.

The H.C. Players' Guild

Under the direction of Gordon Robertson, the U.C. Players' Guild last night presented four short plays at the Women's Union. The predominating note in the evening's performance was comedy as three of the plays were of a humorous vein.

Of particular interest was Ever So Humble by Professor Louis McKay. This skit is a highly amusing bedroom episode with an inebriated husband and caustic wife being the only actors. Although the other three scenes were taken from well known successes, Professor McKays production was the most appreciated by the audience. Iris Gibson and John Osler handled the roles with the minimum of embarrassment.

The Sisters' Tragedy by Richard Hughes provided the tragic relief in the entertainment. The setting is in Wales and deals with a very moving episode in the lives of a family whose ambitions are thwarted by their sense of duty to a deaf mute brother. It was an extremely difficult assignment for a company with the barren facilities of the Guild and they are to be complimented for the manner in which the atmosphere was maintained in the major part of the scene, rather than condemned for the parts in which it was broken. Lucy Jane Grabbell portrayed the younger sister in a very effective manner.

The strength of the lines in The Crusades from 1066 and all that and Victoria Regina by Lawrence Housman was sufficient to make the offerings enjoyable. They were not brilliantly produced but well enough not to distract from the genius of the playwrights.

A Jewish program has been arranged for this week's recital which will take place at 5 p.m. next Friday in the Music Room of Hart House as follows:

I—Hebrew Melody, Joseph Achron, Eugene Kash, violin; Weldon Kilburn at the piano.

II—Yon Kipur Zu Minche, Henry Leskowitz; A Chosen'dl Ois Shabos, arranged by Leo Wow; The Driver, P. Lampkovitz. Adolph Wantroff, baritone; Margaret Sisley at the piano.

III—Nigun (Baal Shen Suite), Ernst Bloch; Stenpenyu, Joseph Achron; Hebrew Song and Dance, Zimbalist. Eugene Kash, violin.

IV—Lament (Die Klage), N. Goroshin; Vait, Vait, L. Shreicher; Ba Der Arbet, L. Shreicher. Adolph Wantroff, baritone.

St. Thomas Church

Next Sunday is called Quinquagesima Sunday, the Sunday before the season of Lent. It will be the last opportunity of hearing a brilliant setting of the Eucharist by Lovecock, a contemporary English composer. The Rector will preach at the 11 o'clock service and the choir will sing an adaptation of Cesar Franck's "Panis Angelicus", the Rev. J. R. Davies, B.A., will preach at the 7 o'clock Choral evening when the Choir will sing Dr. Moore's setting of "God so loved the world".

Eaton Auditorium

Last night's concert at Eaton Auditorium was presented by Gregor Platigorsky, a young giant, who made his cello look like a fiddle and sound like anything he pleased.

The first half of his program was devoted to formal works, including an 18th century sonata, a Beethoven sonata and a short work by Weber. The works were characterized by their precise clarity, and the restraint—unusual, but most suitable—with which they were played.

The second half opened with Toccata by Castelnuova; a new work, extremely vivid, and not too modern. Two delicate impressionisms, by Debussy and Ravel, were played with a poetry which left the artist reluctant to relinquish the last note, and the audience hesitant to break the spell by applauding.

The remainder of the program consisted of musical fireworks, interpreted with a playful abandon of which only a master like Platigorsky is capable.

BLUE BASKET BOYS WALK OVER WESTERN

Varsity First Team on Rampage Piles Up Huge Score at Hart House

MARKS, CONNELLY STAR

By J. Charles Mondo

It was "all riot on the Western front" Saturday night in Hart House gym, as a determined University of Toronto quint, playing inspired ball, whipped into submission in convincing style, a rugged, fighting but totally inferior Western aggregation, 40-22. It was the invaders' local intercollegiate debut of the current season in the hardwood pastime and the home forces were out to give the Meandering Mustangs a warm reception.

However, in their anxiety as hosts, the Varsity hoopers became a bit too zealous and made the reception rather torrid—too "hot" for the dribblers of Lew Davies to handle. We are still wondering how the Purple and White managed to eke out a 26-25 victory over the Toronto tossers in London a few weeks back. In either case, it was revenge night along the Blue and White way and the Stevens machine proceeded to spell it with a capital R.

On the opening tap from centre, Western obtained possession but lost the sphere on an out-of-bounds play. Right here and now, Varsity hung out the "no fooling" sign and began to zip the leather at a dazzling pace. After Rider registered from the charity line, Connelly found the cords on a (Continued on Page 4)

PROFESSOR R. V. BLOEN TO TALK ON ECONOMICS

Professor V. W. Bladen of the Department of Economics will deliver a lecture on "Modern Trends in Economics" in West Hall of University College on Tuesday, February 25, at 5 p.m. This is the fifth and last lecture of this series for the present term.

Professor Bladen's lecture will be instructive as well as interesting. It will also be most enlightening to students who have no real conception of the study of economics, and an aid to those who have done some work in it. Students generally should not miss this opportunity for learning more about a subject that is vital to every individual.

Representatives of the various Colleges and Faculties are requested to call at the Warden's Office between 12:30 and 1:30 to-day for their tickets for the Sunday Evening Concert, March 1.

SCHOOLMEN FROM FAR AND NEAR HERE FOR MEETING AND DANCE

Dr. Haultain, First President Addresses Engineer's Society on Fiftieth Anniversary

CODY, MITCHELL SPEAK

Mr. Thompson, Founder of Body, Revives Old Memories for New Schoolmen

LAUOS FIRST S.P.S. DEAN

By John C. Dent

Over a thousand Schoolmen and graduates gathered on Friday to celebrate the semi-centennial of the Engineering Society in the traditional style of engineers. Before noon a salute of fifty blasts of explosives announced that the event was under way. Then followed a parade to the Great Hall for lunch, and afterwards down to the Royal York, all led by the skirling of bag-pipers.

President Cody was first speaker at the meeting held in the Royal York Convention Room. The President announced that the year had special significance for him since it marked the fiftieth year of his association with the University. Even at the first the engineers shows surprising force, and it appears to him that they have gone from strength to strength. He thought that no other faculty exhibits the same unity and the same enthusiasm.

"As times improve," said the Doctor, "you will be perhaps the first to sense the improvement and take advantage of it. We must always keep moving forward. This is a country where you have to keep running as fast as you can to remain where you are. You have a splendid president in Mr. Lawson and never was there a body of more pleasant, meek and peaceful undergraduates than you have at the present time."

"A fiftieth anniversary must, if it celebrates at all, celebrate a long time," said Dean Mitchell of the Engineering Faculty, pointing out that the society had endured through three reigns, corresponding to many cycles in Canadian conditions. The history of engineering (Continued on Page 4)

VIC NOMINATES NINE FOR MOSS SCHOLARSHIP

Permanent Executive Names Will Come Up for Election at Same Time

Victoria graduating class met on Friday to nominate their candidate for this year's Moss Scholarship. The list of nominees from whom the candidate will be elected, probably next Friday, includes John Harwood-Jones, Freda Crotcher, Ray Irwin, Bernard Taylor, Beth Good, Ross Munro, Fred Evis, Harvey Whiting and Ronald Dalziel.

At the same meeting nominations were made for the permanent executive of the class. Rex Boyd and Roger Priddle were nominated for president; Isobel Weddell, Helen Babe, Ruth Moorhouse and Joyce Scythies will run for associate president.

Other nominations were: for vice-president, Ray Smith, Art Reynolds, Carl Brown, Ted Wingard, George Morrison; for treasurer, Bill James, George Morrison, George Hutchings, Jack Thompson and Art Jessup; for secretary, Betty Barton, Alice Carscallen, Aileen Hancock, Marge Gillespie and Grace Workman have been nominated.

The elections for this executive will take place at the same time as the other for the Moss Scholarship.

College Officials Emphatically Deny Standards Lowered

True in American Universities but not Here, Is Opinion of U. of T. Mentors

ACTUALLY RAISED

Commenting on a statement by Dr. G. F. Rogers, chief inspector of secondary schools in Ontario, to the effect that universities have lowered their standards by cluttering themselves up with undesirables, officials of the University of Toronto maintained that such a charge cannot apply to this institution.

They declared that, far from having been lowered, the standards of the University have actually been raised during the last few years, particularly with the insistence on Upper Matriculation standing as an entrance requirement.

DENTS CELEBRATE AT EGLINTON CLUB

Mueller's Varsity Entertainers Supply Snappy Music for Happy Couples

VOCALIST ACCLAIMED

The Dental At-Home at the Eglinton Hunt Club Friday evening featured the Music of Karl Mueller and his eleven-piece orchestra. The club was decorated throughout with garnet and sky-blue, the Dental colours. Ninety-five couples filled the building with fun and laughter, taking some time to express their sympathy for Bill Twible, the student president, without specifying the cause for commiseration.

Mueller shone for the sheer variety of his entertainment, ranging all the way from Strauss waltzes to swing music. He featured piano, violin, trumpet, and his singer also won acclaim.

A supper of several courses was served in the club dining room, with turkey in the main course.

Doughty and Determined Med Crashes Dance With Wig on Head

The "nickel-plated sledge-hammer" awarded to the best gate-crasher of the 1935-36 social season goes to a certain Med student for the most spectacular, daring and ingenious performance in crashing through the line of special police, Hart House men, and house-dicks, guarding the portals of the School At-Home last Friday night.

Undaunted by this formidable array of the guardians of the law, this protégé of Julep's wagered 10c to $10 he could crash the party. Tying his evening scarf around his neck, he borrowed an ermine wrap, a long green velvet skirt and put them on over his dress clothes. He covered his head with a nicely marcelled wig adorned with a diamond tiara, and hid his masculine hands under long white gloves. A few heavy coats of rouge and his cheeks took on a virginal hue.

Escorted by one of his friends, he fluttered gracefully by the unsuspecting sentinels, right on to the dance floor. Unfortunately they arrived at the wrong end of the ballroom, where there was no place to remove the feminine attire. The music started and what else was there to do but dance all the way down to the other end.

When they arrived in this supposed haven who should be there but President Cody and the receiving line. Mumbling something about the lady not feeling very well the blushing escort led his "girl" back on to the floor.

Finally the harassed couple succeeded in getting a number of their friends to crowd around while the wig, skirt, etc., disappeared.

Then the sweet creature who had so demurely tripped into the ball now boldly strode out, immaculate in his tails and nonchalantly received the coveted pass-out check.

Enthusiasm Mounts For U.C. Arts Ball

As the day for the University College Arts Ball nears, enthusiasm for this great function has pervaded the whole of the undergraduate body. The committee has made arrangements for receiving the unusually large number of dance-goers that promises to be present.

It has been pointed out that the facilities of the Crystal Ballroom of the King Edward Hotel are such that there will be no overcrowding on the night of Friday, February 28, however great will be the number sharing in University College's social dividend.

BEAVERS LOSE GAME TO POST OFFICE

Though Defeated 6-3 Varsity Puts Up an Exciting Battle in T.H.L. Tilt

PENALTIES PLAY BIG PART

The Varsity Beavers gave the highly regarded Post Office sextet quite a struggle before acknowledging a 6-3 defeat up at the Arena on Saturday afternoon in their T.H.L. contest. The crucial break came at the end of the second period when the Mailmen ran in three goals while Sissons, Varsity rearguard, was serving a penalty.

The Varsity first line of McIlquham, Lenahan, and Stavert provided some lively action in the scoreless opening stanza. "Shorty" Miller missed the net for the red team after tricking the defence neatly at the three-minute mark.

After five minutes of the second session, Patterson, P.O. defenceman, was waved to the jug for upsetting McIlquham and the Blue power play was exercised. Boddington took a rebound off goalie Worter's pads and struck the string with the first score.

Shortly before the bell rang Post Office counted twice in rapid order as Varsity were short handed.

"Pinky" McLean made it 3-1 for the letter-litters. The Blues promptly staged a vigorous attack which almost climaxed in McIlquham's score. Post Office quickly returned the favour on a goal by Summerhill and Houston. McIlquham again, on Stavert's pass-out, and Miller, on a solo sally, concluded the counting at 6-3.

Post Office: Goal, Worters; defence, Sutcliffe, Patterson; centre, Miller; wings, Houston, Summerhill; alternates, McLean, Maundrell, Lampont, Bruyca.

Varsity: Goal, Shipman; defence, Sissons, Jeffery; centre, McIlquham; wings, Stavert, Lenahan; alternates, Creasy, Boddington, Lindsay, Craig and Wilson.

GERMAN CLUB AMATEURS TO BE PRESENTED TONIGHT

Emulating Major Bowes himself, the German Club are staging an amateur hour tonight at eight in the Women's Union.

They will sing the "Music Goes Round and Round," in German and a quintet of Quintuplets will give a rendition. Pretzels, liverwurst and synthetic beer will be served.

Boxing, Fencing Championships Taken by McGill, Settle Issue

QUEEN'S SECOND

By George C. Vair

Montreal, Feb. 22.—Saturday night Lew Ruschin's gloved hands brought McGill their first intercollegiate boxing, wrestling and fencing title in six years when the shifty heavyweight scored a technical knockout over Charlie Peck of Queen's in the final bout on the card to give the Redmen a slight margin in points.

Considered as dark horses to lift the Tom Gibson trophy held by Queen's the McGill team led the field with 5 points to 4 2-3 for Queen's, 4 for Toronto and 3 1-3 for O.A.C. McGill failed to score a win in the wrestling bouts but the eastern leather slingers coached by Bert Light sprang a definite surprise when they captured four boxing titles plus the fencing championship.

Queen's, top heavy favourites to retain the honours had eleven men in the finals with O.A.C. running them a close second with 9 entries. Varsity and McGill trailed with six finalists each.

The assault-at-arms was one of the most closely contested in history and provided the greatest number of upsets with champion after champion going down to defeat. The Varsity contingent looked to a few points at least from the boxing squad but Lady Luck rode with clean sweep in the finals, gaining four (Continued on Page 3)

DEBATE COMMITTEE HAS NEW RULING

Candidates for Elections Will Not Be Allowed to Speak from Floor

With a cabinet minister from Ottawa as guest speaker and two visiting debaters from McGill University, the debates committee has been obliged to rule that no candidates running for election for next year's committee will be allowed to speak at the Hart House debate this Wednesday.

The elections will be held on Wednesday night and although it is customary for the candidates to speak, the committee has been forced to disallow candidates speaking this time due to lack of time to allow all candidates to speak from the floor. Any other undergraduates who are not running for the committee will be able to address the house, however.

"Owing to the fact that Hon. C. G. Power, federal minister of pensions and national health, will be present and speak as well as two speakers from McGill, time at disposal for floor speeches has been greatly curtailed," S. F. Rae, secretary of the committee, said last night. "Because of this fact, the debates committee has ruled that rather than allow certain candidates to speak and exclude others, there be no speeches from the floor by those running for election for next year's committee."

Leon Smart, a coloured student from McGill, will oppose the motion, "That Quebec nationalism is consistent with Canadian nationalism," in company with A. D. Harris of St. Michael's. Bernie Shaffer of University College and C. Gross of McGill, will speak for the affirmative.

Minister of health Powers will wind up the debate, speaking for 40 minutes.

Barbarity In Athletics

It was pointed out in rather picturesque terms in Saturday's Telegram that the Canadians of today or the civilizations of today were little if any advanced from the stage in Roman society where they held public holidays with gladiators supplying the entertainment by either getting killed or killing some one else. The case to which the editorial referred was that of one Mr. Matthews, who was knocked out and severely injured in the amateur "White Hope" boxing tournament.

There seems to be little need of going off the deep end in the particular manner in which the Telegram did. While the injury the boxer sustained was serious it was purely accidental and of a very unusual nature. It will be remembered a few years ago that the Star went on the warpath in an effort to do something about the injuries which football players were receiving. However, that campaign did little if anything to remove the danger from the game. The same is likely to happen to the Telegram's efforts. It will effect very little.

Individual cases of injuries will seldom be taken as a serious condemnation by any serious minded sportsman. They are more likely to defeat their own purpose than achieve anything. But the case does merit some consideration.

As long as men are what they are they will demand some sort of violent exercise for entertainment or personal pleasure. Nor is there anything to regret about this fact. There might be cause for regrets if this were not the case. The regrettable thing is that there seems to be no way of telling men when to stop. This is particularly true where it is a professional enterprise.

Most men who enter active athletics as a form of livelihood find themselves after a short period of time unfit or uninterested in any other forms of enterprise. Having no desire to do anything else the athlete remains as long at his trade as he is permitted. Then in most cases he is entirely unfit for anything else. Here is the great tragedy in sport.

As long as a man of his own free will wishes to participate in sport and is willing to take the abuse which goes with it in order to get as much personal satisfaction as possible from his activities all is well. But when he is in there, not because he wants to be, but because he has no alternative or has not intelligence to realize his position, and his participation is harmful to himself, then the tragedy enters. Boxing offers perhaps the most numerous examples of this. It is a condemnation to our society to permit such things to occur.

Men were born with an urge to play. But our present day sports which are erroneously labelled as play are even more exacting than work. Men have become slaves to sport to such an extent that it is no longer play but exercise, a term usually associated with compulsory or necessary physical exertion.

If Canadians, instead of relegating themselves to the category of barbarians because one competitor is injured in competition (there have been but three minor injuries in boxing in the past five years in Toronto) would seek to prevent permanent injuries to men who are unfit for competition they would be performing a more useful purpose in society. If men too old or too young or physically unfit for competition were excluded from violent forms of exercise the accidents would decrease. If sport were not a commercial enterprise this would not be necessary. Or if amateur sport was what it should be it would also help.

A Truth On a Canvas

"Gassed" is the title of a huge painting in the British Imperial museum at South Kensington. John S. Sargent, eminent English artist who painted the picture, did not have to draw upon his imagination to make his startling, if silent, declaration of charges against war. Sketches for the painting were made in the summer of 1918 at a dressing station at Bac-du-Sud, France, when hundreds of soldiers, blinded by mustard gas, were arriving from the front lines.

Artist Sargent painted only what he saw—squads of sightless men being led to a place of safety away from the murderous rattle of rifle fire and the ceaseless chatter of machine guns, hundreds of them stretched out on the ground waiting for the over-worked doctors and nurses to get around to them.

The sketches, made with the distant rumble and roar of a mighty conflict in the background, seem to have imbued the masterful painting with an unfathomable power over all who view it. School children visiting the war museum in class groups with their teachers, enter in high spirits characteristic of youngsters, but when they halt before Mr. Sargent's great painting "Gassed", the laughter dies out as if by a signal, and their faces sober. A hush settles over the group as the truth of the awful reality of war grasps their imaginations. Men and women have been known to stand motionless before the canvas for an hour as though bound to the spot by some mysterious force, and hundreds of them have returned again and again to ponder the tragic but simple truth of the picture.

In recent months, when it has seemed that England has been on the verge of war so many times, the number of visitors to the war museum has been increasing steadily. World war victims have stood silently and seriously before the picture of the tragedy they witnessed and participated in, and have left the spot silently and with bowed heads. . . . And as the chances of another great war seem better day by day, the lines of a still greater conflict—between those millions who would have no great stakes in such a war and those few who do have such stakes—are being more clearly drawn. Meanwhile, those millions who have no real, tangible stakes in such a war are joining those thousands in England who walk silently away from the great picture in the South Kensington museum, and are thinking.

Hall Attendance Steadily Increased

The Hall Committee of Hart House has recently published figures to show the gratifying results that the institution of the new chairs in the Great Hall at Hart House, and the recent changes in price and value on the menu, have brought about. For the five days ending February 22nd, 1935 (that is last year), the average attendance was in the neighbourhood of 540 at luncheon. For the five days ending February 6th, or the week previous to the installation of the new chairs, the average attendance was around 580. While the average attendance at luncheon for the five days of the week in which the new chairs were first fully tried out was somewhere in the neighbourhood of 620.

For the four days ending February 21st, 1935, the average attendance at dinner in the Great Hall was 165. For the four days ending February 6th, or the week previous to the installation of the chairs, the attendance was 191. And it seems that there has been no marked increase of this for the weeks since the chairs were installed.

The results seem to show that the chairs have had a great effect on the attendance at luncheon but not on that at dinner. However, the committee hopes that the student body will soon realize the advantages open to some of them in the dinner service at the Hall, and expects that the new arrangements and accommodations will serve to attract them there.

The nicest compliment we could pay the Professional Playwright on the debut of his first-born, "1976", would be to pass on the scrap of conversation we picked up on the way out of the Theatre on Thursday afternoon. A group of hefty looking lads, possibly engineers but certainly hailing from some far flung outpost on the campus, were pushing their way out with the crowd. It was one of these who remarked, "That's the first darn thing I've ever seen around here in which I've been able to get the references and implications—they didn't all refer to Victoria!"

The possibility that the crack might have been directed at this department, among other "University" activities, failed to spoil our mood, which was one of gladness inner glow of contentment. . . . The specialized farmer who was making beans his single form of self-expression. . . . "Of course, you must remember that Russia (1976, please) is still in the experimental stage" . . . The plan to scrape away the Hamilton Mountain, which started revolution in that quarter and brought the threat of Hamiltonians to secede and form a Crown Colony. . . . And the invading Sailors, taking a red light by storm. Glorious, glorious!

C-C

The blonde gal reporter who breezed in on the author in his Emmanuel hermitage we fear created some confusion in that sector, but the sparkling "advance" on "1976" which her interview provided seemed to catch the spirit of the thing and had much to do with the record crowd that was on hand. The nickel collection contributed by that full house, if it all went to the charity, would net that worthy woman some twenty-five dollars. She must have thought the Shriners were in town.

C-C

What with one thing and another we suspect that the Playwright-Professor may feel that he has come in for more than his share of attention from the "college bards and grub street hacks" during the year and a half since his welcome addition to the local faculty; but this must be his fate, for as he writes good copy (per "1976") so does he make good copy. And what if it be his lot to provide the scribbles of this and other campus publications with inspiration and anecdote for the duration of his professional career? So long as he does not take to politics and attempt to undermine the morale of our youth with C.C.F. propaganda, or become so foolish as to suggest that Toronto University is mildewed with discretion, such a career should prove as long as it would undoubtedly be entertaining.

C-C

And those billowing clouds of smoke that poured out upon the stage the other afternoon from offstage, right, had nothing to do with the mob scenes or the production of highly discriminate vegetables. An expectant playwright (Continued on Page 4)

Imperial—

The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo besides providing the answer to the printers' union prayer, also furnishes an hour or so of quiet entertainment at the Imperial this week. The strength of the plot varies inversely as the length of the title, but the picture is well acted and directed and the result is more pleasing than many grandiose efforts, in which around reel five the hero becomes absent-minded about his accent or the heroine's look of virginal purity begins to fade under the glare of the arc lamp.

The story deals with the struggle of a Russian prince, Ronald Colman, to recapture some of the prestige that was his before the revolution. Instead of adopting the Midvinter manner, he goes to Monte Carlo, and, SURPRISE, breaks the bank. From that the setting shifts to stage nine, or if you prefer, Switzerland, and deals with the efforts of an adventures, Joan Bennett, to lure Colman back to the gaming tables. There is nothing obnoxious about the picture and it is a lot better than a mere outline of the plot would indicate. The Bronze Baby has gone back to Western after eight years. The Western team certainly earned the trophy, and congratulations are in order. They played a beautiful game to defeat Queen's Saturday afternoon in the final, and Varsity was never able to overcome their lead in the first round game Friday night. Mary Wong, on the forward line, and Dot Timpany, on the defence, stood out as the two stars, but the whole team was good, and Western played the best basketball of the series.

As the ranking goes, Queen's stands second, because they reached the finals after defeating McGill in the first round. Varsity is in third position, losing to Western Friday night, but defeating McGill in the consolation game, thus putting McGill in the cellar position.

The McGill-Queen's game, what we saw of it, was very sloppy basketball at first and Kay Boyd stood out as the star player, scoring twenty-five of the thirty-one Queen's points. The Varsity-Western game also degenerated into a general scramble at times, and Phil Griffiths and Marion Henderson, the referees, had to use their whistles a great deal. Varsity ran Western close at times, at one time being only two points behind, but the Western girls called time out, and then started another brilliant offensive, and held their lead to the end of the game.

The final game between Western and Queen's was exciting to watch, but the Western lead was never seriously challenged. A very unfortunate accident occurred in this encounter. Georgina Ross, Queen's captain, after potting a spectacular shot, fell on the floor, suffering a severe ankle sprain. She was carried off the floor and taken to the hospital, but very sportingly attended the banquet and dance that night on crutches. Two Varsity girls also suffered injuries during the series. Kay Brown, the captain, had all the ligaments torn in one thumb, but played brilliantly in spite of it. Betty Jenkins, on the guard line, had to be taken off the floor a few minutes after the game with Western started, with a cut in her hand which took eight stitches to close. Alice Bassnett went in, in her place, and played a sterling game, preventing the Western forwards from piling up a much larger score.

U. OF T. TRIMS WESTERN IN SWIMMING MEET

By the score of 41-23, the Varsity swimmers overwhelmed the Western team in a rather slow-moving meet in Hart House pool Saturday afternoon.

The results were as follows:

Medley Relay: 1. Toronto (Dilworth, Collins, Main), 3.36 3-10.
Diving: 1. Wood, Toronto; 2. Wallace, Western.

50 Free Style: 1. Loerring, Western; 2. Otter, Toronto; 3. Bull, Toronto, 25 9-10 secs.

300 yd. Free Style: 1. Hampson, Toronto; 2. Vipond, Toronto; 3. Symington, Western, 4.06 4-10.

100 yd. Back Stroke: 1. Clark, Toronto; 2. Douglas, Western; 3. Forristal, Western, 1.18 1-10.

100 yd. Free Style: 1. Earl, Toronto; 2. Scott, Toronto; 3. Froud, Western, 59 6-10 secs.

200 Breast: 1. Collins, Toronto; 2. Loerring, Western; 3. Campbell, Western.

200 Free Style Relay: 1. Western. Toronto disqualified. Time 1.57 8-10.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George Vair

McGill certainly staged a "Frank Merriwell" finish last week-end when they nipped the Tricolour at the last turn, took the outside route and then beat them to the tape! They got a break when Wolfe of O.A.C. outsmarted his heavier opponent, Abe Zvonkin, in the heavyweight wrestling match and deprived the Tricolour of a point which meant the difference between first and second place. With two boxing bouts to go and two entries from Queen's and the same number from McGill the fans were roused to blood heat. The Redmen needed two wins and how they went after them. Gilbert took everything Champion McLean had to offer and handed back enough receipts to get the nod. Two footballers out in the open and no interfering referee for yardage penalties gave the boys a chance to swing and they certainly took advantage of it.

Lew Ruschin took the Gibson cup to Montreal when he won a technical knockout in the final bout over Charlie Peck, late of St. Michael's College. Peck deserves credit since he never donned a glove until a week ago when no heavyweight candidate was in view and the big boy stepped in to fill the gap. That is college spirit for you!

The wrestling bouts were close enough to be interesting but the boxing events reminded us of the late "white hope" tournament. Almost every bout was a fight and not a boxing match. The Queen's pugilists concentrated on knockout punches which left them wide open.

Here is a suggestion which we think might be wisely adopted in subsequent assaults. Why not hire professional referees and judges rather than those of the voluntary type and almost invariably home town supporters? We do it in every other line of sport and after last week-end's assault we recommend it as a suggestion. We are not complaining but the officials were undoubtedly below par.

Illegal punches and fouls went unheeded on more than one occasion. Glickman handled the boxing matches as though they were exhibitions while the judges' round by round point scores were ludicrous, contradictory and amazing. In one bout between two contestants of which neither was fighting under the University of Toronto colours the point results were incredible. The winner scored by a wide margin in every round while the loser, although continually sinking hard body blows evidently received no credit for them just because the receiver did not hit the canvas or slow up noticeably. In another bout one judge decided 5-2 for one contestant while his mate across the ring gave it to the opposition by the same margin. It looks bad when such things happen and the only way to rectify the situation is to hire impartial judges and professional referees.

For those who are wondering how it is possible to score 2-3 of a point in a wrestling match read and digest this excerpt from the blue book of intercollegiate rules: "Three points shall be given to the winner of a final bout who scores one or more falls and one point for the final bout in which there is no fall. The points in wrestling shall be divided by a factor so that the total of the points shall be 8." Take a pencil, slide rule and paper and figure it out! When the point came up one coach had never heard of the rule. Reminds one of the 1932 Olympic winter games.

titles from four entries. O.A.C., competing for the second time in senior competition, won all their points in the grappling game. Queen's and McGill divided the battling (it was) honours with four wins each.

Austen, 118 lb. wrestler, began the second night's show with a spectacular offensive against Ivan of O.A.C. and gained a well deserved fall in the first four minutes. The Blue colour bearer was never in difficulty. Johnstone lengthened his string of intercollegiate 125 lb. grappling victories to five when he gained a decision over Thomas, who is regarded as one of the Tricolour's best matmen.

Houle won an easy victory over Macdonald (O.A.C.) in the regular time to win the 145 lb. belt. The Blue entry had a decided edge in strength over his opponent and used it to advantage. Houle wrestled brilliantly on Friday evening when he was drawn against Ellyett (M). Van Allen defeated Vickers (O.A.C.) for the 175 lb. title in a match which saw the winner have an advantage in height while Vickers was the stronger man. However, Van Allen matched strength with experience and kept the Aggie on the defense. In the final minute he threw Vickers heavily to the mat and only the bell saved a fall.

Dr. Les. Black's 7-man boxing team was reduced to two finalists in the first night's fighting. Freddy Smith, a crafty boxer, again fell before the wild, unethical swings of Smolkin (Q) when the latter landed a haymaker in the second round to end the bout. Lossing, at 135 lbs. lost a close decision to the champion Irving of Queen's, who went on to beat Livermore in the final.

Tom Powell punched Gray into submission in his semi-final bout but lost out by the judges' 2-1 decision to the final to Quinn (M). At times Powell appeared nervous and failed to follow through but at other times he ripped in and threw punches that had Quinn clinching for a "breather". Bolter and Gay (O.A.C.) met in the 155 semi-final and put on an exhibition of hard slugging which had the fans cheering their courage and gameness despite the announcer's previous precautions. Gay was awarded the decision.

Pigott and Ross (M) displayed the best boxing talent of the first night and the latter won the decision or toss as it may have been. Certainly a split decision warranting an extra round would have been preferable.

Charles Pocius, Varsity heavyweight, took a ten count in the second round after having Peck (Q) in difficulty in the opening three minutes.

Johnny Millson lost his 118 lb. title after boxing his way into the finals to Frederick (Q) who has dynamite in both hands, but a clumsy style of getting rid of it. Johnny, a top rate boxer, never got started against the speedy Tricolour man and lost on a T.K.O. in the second round.

McGill repeated their previous victories in the foils competition but only won from the Varsity students by five points, 21-16. Van Reet, a left handed foil expert, won 9 points out of a possible 9.

THE BRONZE BABY*Varsity Lost to Western Team

from McGill*QUEEN'S RUNNERS UP

By Joyce E. Tenenbaum
Striving desperately to retain their trophy, Queen's University took a knockout blow in the Bronze Baby basketball finals at Hart House Saturday afternoon when Western handed them a complete trouncing by a score of 24-13. The Purple and White squad displayed their superiority right from the start, and obtained a lead which they maintained throughout the entire tussle. The preliminary matches on Friday evening witnessed the defeat of the Varsity team by the present champions, with the final count 17-9, and the Tricolour easily forced the McGill ladies to the short end of a 31-15 tally.

In the final session both teams seemed to settle down and play real basketball, but the losing squad was powerless to better their position very much, against the strong checking and speedy shooting of their opponents. At three-quarter time the score stood 21-6, and the Tricolour's hopes for taking the Bronze Baby back to Kingston went up in smoke. Mary Wong tallied some beautiful points for her team in this period, and she was ably assisted by Kay Crena Wallace and Dorothy Rintoul.

While Kay Boyd made two spectacular long shots for the losers. Although the Queen's players rallied somewhat toward the end of the half, the London girls were too far ahead and when the final whistle went, the 24-13 count told the tale.

Varsity vs. Western

Varsity was put out of the running in the competition for the trophy when Western downed them in a closely fought contest, by a score of 17-9. Mary in this game, scoring 11 of the 17 points made by her team-mates. Varsity was very unlucky on her shots, especially when Kay Brown sank the ball twice Wong was in the limelight once more in a row and both were disallowed. Ellen Wilson chalked up five points, while two baskets by Marg Glass and Kay Brown completed the Blue and White scoring. Dot Timpany was outstanding on the Purple defence and Billy McGarry shone for Toronto.

Queen's vs. McGill

The Kingstonians easily outstripped the Red and White squad, which it seemed were to become the black sheep of the series, best minus the services one of their best players, piling up a 31-15 tally in the encounter. The Montreal girls just couldn't get going, and before they realized it the half was over, and the score was 21-11 in favour of the Tricolour. The McGill guards were good, but they were no match for the flashy forwarding of Kay Boyd, who sank 25 points during the tussle. The Queen's defence effectively restrained the efforts of the opposing forward line to raise their count, which was 15, to the 31 of the finalists.

Varsity vs. McGill

The consolation game between McGill and Varsity was a well-fought affair with the Blue and White girls showing a definite superiority in both the shooting and defensive departments. The Varsity co-eds piled up an impressive total of 31 points with Kay Brown and Ellen Wilson doing their bit very efficiently. The Red and White lassies played desperately from the first whistle but failed to keep the home team in check. Betty Murphy and Eileen Crutchlow between them managed to compile most of the 11 points for their side.

LECTURE ON ANTARCTIC BRINGS HOME FACT THAT TORONTO NOT SO COLD

Shivering Torontonians began to think that they were not so badly off, after being taken down to the Antarctic continent by Professor Griffith Taylor in his lecture, "A scientist in the Antarctic", at Convocation Hall Saturday night.

With an average wind velocity of fifty miles per hour in comparison with Toronto's thirteen miles per hour, and a temperature that never rises to freezing point, the Antarctic is devoid of animal and plant life.

The continent itself is amazingly large, with a surface area easily covering that of Europe. Owing to the intense cold there is no ice erosion, and what there is occurred in past warmer ages. Indications of a time when a warmer climate prevailed are also given by the fossils which are found in considerable abundance.

smart one-hand toss to make the score 4-1. Phil Gold was then awarded a gift shot on a personal by Wolff, and he proceeded to sink it. In quick order Marks dropped in a two pointer and added a single. Wolff then converted a free throw but Connelly managed to pepper the cords on a sweet set-up, raising the count to 10-2.

With eight minutes remaining T. Sullivan was jiffed into the skirmish, replacing Neil at the point-getting post. With the Purple and White holding on tenaciously Wolff and Gettas flicked in long ones and after Marks pushed through a fielder, Western called a temporary halt in hostilities with six minutes remaining (score 12-6). Play resumed, Gettas tallied and Wilson hung up two quick scores for Western. McGregor's basket and Marks' foul concluded the Blue scoring for the first period. At half time, Varsity left the court holding a 15-12 lead.

In the final canto, the Varsity speedsters drew away from the visitors and with Hugh Marks in the feature role, with those same "hot" hands, the Blue eagles, showing a palaxy of pop shots which swished the netting with monotonous regularity, lost no time in making the count 24-13 in the opening six minutes of play by baskets from Gold and Connelly and a quintet of markers by Marks. With fourteen minutes to go, Western called another time out.

With the whistle resuming play, Rider netted a long basket and McGregor retaliated for Varsity with a floater from the corner. At this point Phil Gold was ejected via the personal contact route, and Bedford replaced him. Connelly then split the meshes with two fast scores. Western kept plugging along on a foul by Gettas and a dribble in by McWhia. Here play became fast and loose and incidentally a little rough. The leather was flying from all angles and a barrage of elbows provided the beatwave. Evidently officials Creighton and Irwin failed to report for the second half or did someone hide the whistle?

Varsity scored her remaining ten points on contributions by Marks and Connelly and Sullivan, the latter chalking up a basket and Hugh tossing in a set-shot and a trio of charities. Neil Sullivan abetted this offensive attack with a two-pointer and a foul. Western concluded their hoop-geranging with a field goal by Colgrave and a duo of "Annie Oakleys" by Gettas and Wolff.

It was obvious throughout that the London combination could not penetrate the Blue defence. Then, too, they failed miserably from the charity line, connecting only six times out of twenty-four attempts; thus throwing away the eighteen points that would have earned them a tie.

Marks and Connelly again furnished the spark that led the Blue warriors to triumph. Their combined efforts represented 30 of Varsity's 40 points. They gave a brilliant performance and a beautiful exhibition of sinking shots from difficult angles. Phil Gold played his usual steady floor game at the feeding station and Neil Sullivan showed a pretty brand of ball in the passing attack.

Varsity (40): Marks 16, Connelly 14, McGregor 4, N. Sullivan 3, Gold 3, T. Sullivan, Bedford, Dempster.

Western (22): Gettas 6, Wolff 4, Wilson 4, Rider 4, McWha 2, Colgrave 2, Elliott, Nareff.

is the history of Canadian achievement, the Dean said.

Dean Mitchell thought that Canon Cody would have made an excellent Schoolman. He expressed the hope that the present body of students will have the same affection for their professors that he has for his. He showed that increased industrialism has led to the increase of such courses as Chemical Engineering.

Professor Haultain, first undergraduate president of the Society, traced its early growth. Telling that the Faculty had only once tried to interfere in its management, and then got into trouble. When the Faculty withdrew, the society was able to adjust its affairs satisfactorily.

"It is impossible to work for a large corporation and be a citizen of the country," was the text of the speech given by Dr. J. L. Morris of the Department of Lands and Forests. "Why don't engineers go out into the far parts of the country and set up as lawyers and doctors do? I believe there are now four or five engineers in Parliament. It is a serious matter, this citizenship, no man has any right to join a company and not take any part in the affairs of the country. There is no freer man in the world than the independent engineer in a town or small city."

Bob McIntyre, who has had almost perfect standing in every year of his course, as well as taking a leading part in the business of the society, and who won the Massey Foundation scholarship, was presented with a large travelling case. President Bill Lawrason, chairman of the meeting, made the presentation.

MR. THOMPSON TELLS OF OLD "SCHOOL" DAYS

President Bill Lawrason and Committee Chairman "Chuck" Hoag.

Teaching in Canada has always been on a very high plane, he said, talking of his student days in Upper Canada College, Niagara Falls High School and the School of Practical Science. Discipline used to be much stricter in those days, said he, telling of receiving six strokes of the cane in September and still retaining blood-blister marks at Christmas. And he still has a deep affection for the master who administered that chastisement. He learned in high school not to cram at the last minute, and this, he believed, was responsible for his high marks.

"You will find nothing but love, admiration and respect for Canada in natives of the United States, and they envy your government and justice," he said, going on to pay tribute to the last four Chancellors of the University. He referred to Sir William Mulock as "that fine young man". Continuing, he spoke of former-President Loudon, father of the present Professor T. R. Loudon. He expressed his admiration for Dean Mitchell, for his professional ability and for his war record.

Principal John Galbraith, who was first head of the School of Practical Science, seemed to Thompson the finest type of man for his position. "I could never have been graduated had it not been for him," said the speaker. "He had offers from the biggest universities in America, but his heart was here and here he stayed." He told of Galbraith's discovery of the rich mineral deposits near Cobalt, and how the first Principal had refused to capitalize on his discovery.

"Don't try to get a permanent job, move around, and don't be afraid of losing a job but always do the work so that your employer will be afraid that you might leave him," were two pieces of advice which Galbraith used to give his classes and which the speaker recommended to the present graduating students. He also advised men to marry young, "and marry Toronto girls". He married a Toronto girl who had lived in Quebec, Ottawa, Hamilton and Washington and was therefore his idea of the perfect Toronto girl. They have five children, each of whom, he says, has more brains than their father.

He praised the men of School whom he knew, pointing out that many of the ablest of them failed to obtain their degrees. In the early years only fifteen per cent became graduates, while now, less than forty per cent go right on through.

Canadians looking for jobs in the United States should not start off by asking for work, but should say that they are Canadians, he advised. He told of a friend who applied for work at six different New York firms without result, then returned to Canada and wrote the same companies, receiving six offers of work by return mail.

Thompson was born in Buffalo, the son of the founder of the Canada and Southern Railroad. Since founding the Engineering Society in 1881, he has kept in close touch with the institution of his creation, appearing in person at frequent intervals, and contributing papers regularly.

OFFICIALS DENY STANDARDS LOWERED

Principal Wallace of University College admitted that there were a few undesirable. "But not many. We try to rid ourselves of these. The majority of students are hard working—perhaps too hard."

Principal Brown of Victoria College was of the same opinion. "While there are a few students who are not university people nevertheless the vast majority are profiting from their courses here. Far from having lowered our standards, we have attempted to raise them. If the standard is really lower today than it was twenty years ago, it is because the Department of Education has allowed the standard of the present Upper Matriculation to fall below that of the Junior Matriculation of a decade past."

Mr. A. B. Fennell, secretary to the Faculty of Arts, did not construe Mr. Rogers' statement as a criticism of the University but as an attempt to direct public opinion away from the general feeling of the last decade that a university education is a necessary equipment for life.

"As for the lowering of standards," Mr. Fennell continued, "it is truer of the American universities than of the Canadian. There they have only one course leading to an Arts degree. In Canada, our system of Honour courses saves us from lowering our standards. If a person cannot keep up to the standard of an Honour course, he is not thrown out at the university but is transferred to a Pass course."

Chancellor Wallace of Victoria College, replying to Dr. Rogers' suggestion that a record of a pupil's work and interests throughout his high school career should replace the trying of a few examinations, pointed out that a long step in this direction has been taken with the introduction of the recommendation system. "The suggestion is very useful," he said, "but the application of it is difficult."

HON. C. G. POWER TO SPEAK AT NEXT HART HOUSE DEBATE

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Many summer homes will be hit by the new tax which is being levied by the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests as a result of an investigation carried on by the department under Hon. Peter Heenan which showed that a large number of cottages were erected without any title to the land.

The fourth case of sabotage in the British navy is being investigated by the Admiralty as a result of damage done to the destroyer Velox, which is now being refitted at the Chatham dock yards.

A record-breaking run was made on the C.N.R. line from North Bay to Toronto last night, when Robert Gallagher of Timmins was rushed to St. Michael's Hospital in an attempt to save his right eye, injured in a hockey game.

Former Varsity Editor Now Trails Fire-bugs

Ontario Fire Marshall Scott Reveals Arson Cases to Varsity

PYROMANIACS ARE FEW

What becomes of Varsity Editors when they finish Varsity-editing? One at least of them has solved the problem of life work in an interesting manner. He is W. J. Scott, now Fire Marshall of Ontario, whose day's work consists of trailing down fire-bugs, incendiaries and pyromaniacs.

"A woman was put under observation two weeks ago for burning down her house because she didn't like her husband," said Scott, when asked if many fire-setters exhibited symptoms of insanity. "This is, of course, an exceptional case, and the woman will probably be committed to an institution. The difficulty is, that those who are sent to asylums as defective are generally released too soon, and come out to cause more trouble for us."

The department was bothered for several years by an arson ring operating in the Toronto area. When this group was disposed of, a similar gang in the Niagara district claimed attention. Two of the Niagara arsonists were killed in the explosion of a building before the ring was finally

YOUTH CONFERENCE TO DISCUSS PEACE

University of Toronto Student May Represent Canada at Geneva Conference

HAS VARIEO AIMS

Toronto is almost sure to be represented at the World Congress of Youth to be held at Geneva this year, in the opinion of Howard Darling, fourth year C. and F. student.

Darling pointed out that nothing definite about the personnel of the Canadian delegation will be known until the end of May. At that time, a meeting of the League of Nations Society of Canada will be held in Ottawa, and the representatives chosen. Thirty members will make the trip to Geneva as representatives of Canada.

The individual members will be sent at the expense of the unit supporting them. If a University of Toronto student is among those chosen to make the trip, his expense money will be raised through popular subscription among the undergraduates. In this respect, the procedure will be very much the same as that employed to send two representatives to the Brussels conference of last spring.

The Conference will meet from August 31 to September 7. Delegates will be sent from every country having a League of Nations Society; and it is hoped that representation from other lands will also be present, countries having membership in the League of Nations, but possessing no League of Nations Societies, and countries outside of the League altogether.

Although delegates do not have to be University students, it is expected that a large majority of those present

Regrets Expressed on Campus that Course not Adopted Sooner

Plans for the new common first year in Social and Philosophical Studies have definitely been established and will appear in the new Arts Calendar.

The courses involved are Modern History, Philosophy, Political Science and Economics, Psychology and Sociology.

"The idea is nothing new," Mr. Fennell, University Registrar, stated yesterday. "The same system has been employed for some time in the sciences very satisfactorily. It simply means that the five courses are pooled—entrance requirements being the same for each. In this way, the student finds his bearings before launching on a definite path in his second year."

The grouping of the courses has met with unanimous approval and plenty of enthusiasm on the campus, and not a few people are expressing regrets that the system was not adopted sooner. Even those students whose courses are not directly concerned are anxious for the plan to include them. Eric Moore, first year Political Science, considers

NEED FOR RESEARCH STRESSED BY COOY AT BANO BANQUET

The University of Toronto band, the boys who make the music during the football games, last night celebrated their achievement at the annual banquet tendered in Hart House.

Dr. Cooy, one of the staunchest supporters of the band, in replying to the toast to the University, spoke highly of the band's record and achievements during the past years before dwelling for a moment on the position of the University of Toronto in the realm of scholastic endeavour. Stressing the necessity of research in any great institution of learning, Dr. Cooy pointed to several outstanding men in medical research at Toronto whose work was made possible for the most part by private endowment. The support of the public was necessary if this was to continue.

Lost Cars Will No Longer Get Snowy, Dirty, Cold or Wet

By H. A. Clark

Has anyone lost a car?

A poor forlorn unattended automobile has been sitting outside Wycliffe College for six weeks, languishing in the vicissitudes of a harsh Toronto winter, waiting faithfully for its owner to return and restore it to its warm, sheltered garage. Can anybody imagine a more touching picture than this? Such a model of fidelity is seldom seen, and less frequently appreciated. The police say it is not a stolen vehicle, but perhaps it is misled by an absent-minded professor, who parked it, went in to Hart House or Wycliffe, and then forgot where it was that he (or she) had left it. Such negligence is quite reprehensible, for hasn't a car feelings? Regardless of the fact that it has been abandoned, that it has been gathering snow and sleet from every storm, and that it is up to the rims in ice, it must still cherish a deep affection for its owner. We feel that something should be done about this deserving case, and so we announce the founding of a new society, to administer to such cases, investigate them, and report. The organization will be called "The Society for the Prevention of Leaving Cars out in the Cold so that they get Covered with snow and Dirty". This is a very worthy club, and subscriptions will be gratefully received, addressed to the above names, in care of the Altruistic Automobile Owners' Sympathetic Society. If you hear of deserving cases, will you let us know, quick-like? A fleet of our brand new, non-slick reporters will be rushed to the scene, and take care of the details, such as the blonde in the rumble seat.

TALENTS REVEALED AT GERMAN CLUB

Amateur Hour Proves Howling Success As Quintuplets Divide Prize

TRAGIC NOTE SOUNDED

A long-felt campus need was satisfied last night by the University German Club Amateur Hour. A "talented group of ambitious youngsters" gave of their best, and the audience, mellowed by about two pounds of pretzels per person, was in an appreciative mood.

Preceding the real business of the evening the election of officers for 1936-37 was held. Mr. J. H. Lawless was elected president, Miss Peggy Fairclough vice-president, Miss Sylvia Nelson secretary and Arthur Bernstein treasurer. Art Wells was chosen as business manager and Miss Lois Fleming as social convener.

The program was opened by the Dionne Quintuplets (minus Annette, who had a date with Dr. Dafoe). The Famous Four gave convincing proof that the Drunkards' Song is a swell tune in any language.

A tap-dancer followed and then a soprano who coyly admitted that she had "come to college to get a man". (Our German is bad but we think the

Daffydil Night Already in Sight

Daffydil Night, the Meds' evening of fun and frolic, of glamour and gaiety will be held in Hart House Theatre on March 4-5-6th, three nights for the first time in the history of the show. Already two of the nights have been sold out; 150 tickets have gone to faculty members; and enthusiasm is generally high on the campus.

PROFESSORS LAUD EXCHANGE IDEA

A Beginning Has Already Been Made in the Economics Department

UNFIT FOR SOME SUBJECTS

Professors in this University, who consented to be interviewed, expressed themselves entirely in favour of a scheme of exchange professorships such as was advocated in last Friday's issue of The Varsity.

"We are just making a beginning along those lines," stated Professor Urwick of the Economics Department, "and we hope to be able to develop the idea further." He drew attention to the fact that, although no member of the Economics staff had as yet been sent out on exchange, a lecturer from a western university was spending this session teaching in Toronto. "The department prefers longer exchanges," remarked Mr. Urwick, "in order that professor and student might get better acquainted."

Praising the idea of exchange professorships, Professor Urwick declared that they would be of benefit both to the staff and the professor concerned. "For instance," he said, "Mr. Plumtree is going to Cambridge next year to lecture on banking. He will doubtless carry much valuable information on the Canadian banking situation with him, and when he returns, he will bring fresh ideas." Exchanges, he added, will also be of great benefit to students.

Dr. H. A. Innis of the Economics staff, also expressed his approval. The Economics staff, he pointed out, have had visiting lecturers come from leading American universities to lecture on subjects in their particular fields.

ARTS BALL FEATURES SONG HITS AND SKITS AND NOVELTY BANO

The Arts Ball scheduled for next Friday is featuring skits by the Glee Club, the hits from the U.C. Follies of '36, Norman Harris's novelty band which is relatively new and pronounced a knock-out and, it is rumoured, a chicken dinner. "What could a girlie ask more?"

It seems that the U.C. Follies was such a stupendous success that it left some extra money floating around which was turned into a "reserve fund" for future affairs. The Arts Ball is to be the sole beneficiary, so it is sure to be bigger and better than ever.

More Speakers Being Featured than Ever before in Hart House Debates

ELECTIONS WILL BE HELO

Leon Smart and C. Cross Are Outstanding Debaters of McGill

Hon. C. G. Power, federal minister of pensions and national health, who has been on the front page during the past week in connection with his new hospitalization scheme for pensioners, will come down from Ottawa and speak at the Hart House debate this Wednesday evening when the motion "That Quebec nationalism is consistent with Canadian nationalism," is debated.

Major Power's constituency is in Montreal and he will speak for 40 minutes, probably in defence of the motion. Two visiting debaters from McGill University will also attend and speak on the paper. One of them is a coloured student, Leon Smart by name, who will speak on the negative. Dark as the ace of spades, Smart is one of McGill's most outstanding debaters. His enunciation is reported to be nearly perfect and he speaks with a pleasing melodious drawl.

The other undergraduate from McGill will be C. Cross, who will speak for the affirmative. Two students of this university will speak on the paper with the McGill visitors. Bernie Shaffer of the law department and University College, will speak first for the motion and A. D. Harris of St. Mike's will speak for the negative.

VARSITY CHESS CLUB DEFEATED IN PLAYOFF

Toronto Club Victorious After Many Close Games Fought on into Week Hours

Varsity Chess Club lost 5 to 3 to a strong Toronto Chess Club team last night. The playoff match lasted until a late hour. At that time Varsity had won two, drawn two, and lost four. At top board R. B. Hayes, University champion, drew a hard fought game with D. A. Murray, the youthful Winnipeg champion. At second board Dr. R. K. Young put up a gallant losing battle against W. Watson. At board three, Professor V. G. Smith drew by perpetual with K. Kearns. A. D. McConnell won from A. E. Taylor. J. Hvilivitsky lost to Tighie in a well played game. Professor C. F. Morrison sacrificed a piece for three pawns to win against S. D. Balard. A. L. Rubinfeld unfortunately erred against F. Blumberg in a won position. A. P. G. Joy did likewise against J. P. E. Brown.

Debates Committee

Seven of the following candidates will be elected to the Debates Committee of Hart House for 1936-1937 at the debate which takes place tomorrow night in Hart House: F. E. Coburn, III Medicine; W. E. Curry, III Victoria; J. W. M. Dixon, III U.C.; D. G. Eisen, I U.C.; G. A. Fallis, III Victoria; A. R. Hicks, III Trinity; P. S. Miller, III U.C.; L. G. O'Connor, II U.C.; G. W. Peters, III U.C.; D. F. L. Scollard, II St. Michael's; A. A. Shaberman, II U.C.; C. Sheard, III Medicine; E. M. Shortt, III U.C.; and G. W. Stoddart, I U.C.

University Drama

Some time ago the editorial columns of The Varsity were instrumental in boosting the efforts of certain undergraduates and certain of the faculty in their attempts to form a University Dramatic Society to further the aims of dramatic art on the campus and to co-ordinate and round out the work of the various college and faculty organizations already existent.

After some weeks of deliberation and several days of action it was decided to stage "The Inspector General", by Nikolai Gogol, on Hart House stage on the nights of the 9th and 10th of March. Rehearsals began almost immediately and now, with the cast picked and already well versed in their parts, the undergraduate director is busy completing his plans and rounding out the crudities.

The student body would be well advised to support this presentation. Not only is the best talent available at the University in use, but the play chosen happens to be one of the wittiest comedies of recent years. We should feel it our duty to support this effort in a new direction.

The committee handling the affairs of the new society have brilliant plans under consideration for next season and, just as soon as their present scheme has been completed, they intend to make public several interesting and original suggestions for a theatre season on the campus next fall.

Commerce Journal

The appearance of the fourth edition of The Commerce Journal, published by the University of Toronto Commerce Club, calls for some comment. Rarely has a Journal of this type achieved such a wide degree of popularity and usefulness in so short a time.

The first issue in 1933 was composed of contributions from the Economics Staff and was well received by the students. Fear and trepidation on the part of the executive of that year as to the Journal's reception led to a search for a philanthropic Gestetner operator who believed in advertising. However, the favour with which the first effort was received rendered such a policy unnecessary in subsequent years. The second and third editions were even more favourably received and an increasing demand has arisen for back numbers.

The cause of such success may be attributed to a number of things. In the first place, the Commerce and Finance course itself has attained a position of prestige and importance in the eyes of both the University and the business world. Secondly, the fifteen-year-old Commerce Club has acquired an enviable record as a means of establishing a closer relationship between the students and the professors, and has been supported by an increasing percentage of the undergraduates registered in the course. Add to these the high calibre of the Economics Staff, and the reason for the Journal's success is placed against its proper background.

Contributions to the Journal have mostly been made by members of the Faculty, although the current issue carries an article written by a Bachelor of Commerce. The topics discussed are without exception of current interest and in line with the studies being pursued by the members of the course. The Journal is therefore of great value from an academic standpoint besides contributing to the spirit of co-operation and goodwill existing between students and professors.

The Dignity of the House!

We see from one of the daily papers that the Provincial Legislature has decided to inject more dignity into the visitors' galleries; from now on ladies must wear hats, no one must applaud and everyone must wait until the House is properly adjourned before departing. We wonder if an occasional member of the visitors' gallery may make a few suggestions regarding our honourable members.

It seems to us that more dignity would accrue to the House if the members would refrain from shaking their fists at the Opposition during heated debates and from making insulting remarks, supposedly facetious or otherwise. We would also suggest that they refrain from shouting their remarks, and while there may be nothing wrong with slapping desks, it rather reminds one of a school-room. And would it not be a little more impressive if the members generally would at least pretend to listen while speeches are being delivered?

Undesirables

Authorities from the various colleges in our University have emphatically denied the charge made by the chief inspector of secondary schools that universities had lowered their standards and were cluttered up with undesirable students. Certainly Toronto with its admittedly high standards of academic ability is the last institution against which such an accusation may legitimately be levelled.

If, however, as one member of the faculty suggested, the criticism was directed at that public opinion which considers a university education a necessary equipment for life, it is very well founded. It is greatly to be regretted that the majority of students are at the university, not for academic achievement but because they think a better class of position is made possible by a university education. In this sense Chief Inspector Rogers' statement is only too true and universities are indeed "cluttered up with undesirables".

As he suggests democratic education "does not necessarily mean education along academic lines. It means, also, education in shop, business house or on the farm." Far too many people believe that education is only education if it is accompanied by the tangible evidence provided by a diploma. A string of letters after one's name implies the attainment of a great deal of learning but it does not necessarily imply education in its broadest sense. True education can be acquired in many ways other than from books.

While this blind mistaken faith in the efficacy of a university degree persists among the public, colleges will continue to be filled with students whose time would be more happily and more profitably employed elsewhere. The presence of this large group within the university while not noticeable in any deliberate lowering of academic standards yet reacts unfavourably upon the idea of a university. It means that these students, to many of whom academic work is actually distasteful, are getting by in the pass course and in the lower ranks of honour courses, more or less by the skin of their teeth. They study just enough to pass.

Of course it cannot be denied that college education is not without value for these people. Canadian universities as they are constituted confer much more than mere book-learning. The other aspects of university life are not lost on the huge majority of students who do not achieve first-class standing. The whole problem depends on whether or not one believes that the sole purpose of a university is the dissemination of learning. Apparently Mr. Rogers believes that it is, and that students not of a high intellectual capacity should be excluded. But such an assumption lacks evidence and would tend to destroy many of the real values of a university.

If the Shakespeare films are hits, the old boy may soon come to be classed up with the big boys such as George M. Cohan and Eugene O'Neill.

Hollywood—

The French movies have at last brought us that darling of the legitimate stage, Gaby Morley, and we were much impressed. Teamed with Charles Boyer in Le Bonheur, she made that film one of the most enjoyable we have yet seen. She is not only a good actress, she is also beautiful and can sing. Boyer was at his usual high level in this presentation and we like him so much more speaking his own language. The play, by Henri Bernstein, is Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Let me make a plea for moderation regarding essays. It is now almost time to begin intensive spring study, and there are students of certain courses who have never yet had a respite between essays in which to begin general study. The result is that now they find themselves with a couple more essays on their hands, and the disheartening knowledge that most of their course has yet to be covered by them.

I am far from condemning essays unconditionally. Without question a certain number are necessary in many courses and their benefits are obvious. One of these benefits is the opportunity afforded for specialization, but when essays are so numerous that they exclude all other but the most pressing outside work, the student finds himself specializing along lines which do not particularly interest him but which are forced upon him by his tutor.

My plea is for a reasonable number of essays which will allow a student to devote some of his time to general study throughout the year, and allow him to do some special work about subjects which he finds of special interest to himself. The student whose course requires him to devote the greater part of his time to writing essays is under a definite handicap.

FORESTERS AND PHARMACY BATTLE TO SCORELESS TIE

First Game of Home and Home Series Leaves Second Place Undecided

WINNER MEETS U.C.

If Return Game Results in Deadlock, Tiebreaker Will Be Played

Last night at Varsity Arena Pharmacy and Forestry played the first game of a home-and-home series to decide the second place team which will play U.C. next week. Both teams displayed plenty of fight, although they lacked combination and were a little weak on the skates. After 40 minutes of hard and fast play, during which time plenty of the rough-stuff was handed out, the game ended in a dead heat, with the score 0-0.

The first period started out with the teams taking alternate rushes up the ice, and although Pharmacy had better combination, Forestry had more scoring opportunities, and a hard defence. McConnell took a rest for slugging after 8 minutes of play, but the Woodmen held well, and even threatened to score several times. With two minutes left to go, Pronger got a penalty for a too-rough body check, but Forestry couldn't bang the rubber in.

The last session opened up with a bang, when Campbell was sent off for tripping. The game was a free-for-all, and the boys roughed it up considerably. Campbell and Evans led some nice attacks, but couldn't beat Ballantyne, and Garneau kept the slate clean for the Foresters. Carlson played a very good game, and though he was slow starting, usually carried the puck well down into enemy territory. With eight minutes to go, Pronger had another penalty for tripping, but at all times the team at a disadvantage played better hockey.

Both sides missed many opportunities and were evenly matched. Evans, Campbell and Pronger stood out for Pharmacy, and for Forestry McConnell, Carlson, Powell and Johnstone were best.

If the return game is a tie, ten minutes of overtime is permitted, and if they are still deadlocked, another game will be played. The schedule for the rest of the playoffs will appear this week.

Pharmacy: Garneau, Evans, Pronger, Ellinghausen, Souliere, Campbell, Ramsay, Coulter, Baltimore, Johnstone.

Forestry: Ballantyne, McConnell, T. Powell, Murcheson, Reynolds, Dyer, Johnstone, Cowan, Carlson, Grinnell.

EMMANUEL UNBEATEN AS KNOX SUCCUMBS TO SPEEDY BASEBALL

The Emmanuel College baseball team maintained their unbeaten record by staging a last inning rally to defeat Knox 4-3 last night in Hart House. This game was one of the best of the season and furnished the two or three spectators with a real air-tight game. The speed ball twirling of Edwards for the winners was the determining factor in Emmanuel's victory, as he repeatedly made the ambitious Knox batters stir up the empty air in a vain attempt to connect with the sizzling pill.

Emmanuel got to Warren for two runs in the second inning, but they saw this lead fall before a determined Knox rally in the fourth, when the Presbyterians denied the platter three times. In the final stanza Emmanuel filled the sacks with none out and finally counted two runs to win the game.

Emmanuel: Dyke, Young, Martin, Crosby, Birch, Moffat, Edwards, Taylor, Beare, Witzel.

Knox: Weir, Smith, Adams, MacDonald, Evans, Stewart, Sinclair, Warren, Campbell.

Swimmers Prepared For Coming Meets

Five Universities Coming Next Week-End — Coach
Announces Team

TWO TEAMS

With the invasion of the cream of Canadian university swimmers next Saturday, the U. of T. splashes face an array of swimmers which, according to all reports, is going to be the toughest bit of opposition the local swimming team has ever faced.

McGill, Western, McMaster and O.A.C. are sending teams to compete in the two meets—intermediate and senior. McGill is sending a particularly strong team.

Coach Roy Lowndes yesterday announced the swimmers from which the Varsity team will be chosen. All are asked to be on hand at practice every night this week. Tonight at practice, captains will be chosen for the two teams.

The provisional line-ups run as follows:

Senior meet—
Medley Relay: Dilworth, W. McCarty, Earl or Main.

Diving: Wood.
50 Free: Otter, Bickle, Scott.
440 Free: W. McCarty, Main.

100 Back: Dilworth, Clark.
100 Free: Earl, Scott, Main.

200 Breast: W. McCarty, Collins, Hicks.

200 Relay: Main, Otter, Bickle, Scott, Earl.

Intermediate meet:
Medley Relay: Clark, Hicks, Summers, Staples, Tedman, Vipond, Gardner, Collins, Hampson.

Diving: Stratton, J. Millar.
50 Free: Stratton, Summers, Bull.

300 Free: Vipond, Hampson, Gardner.

100 Back: Clark, Staples, Gardner.

100 Free: Hampson, Vipond, Kirby, Miller.

200 Breast: Tedman, Hicks.

200 Relay: Summers, Stratton, Bull, Hampson, Gardner, Vipond.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Clarke Hood

A busy week is in store for the senior basketball team, with two Big Four games as well as an all important intercollegiate fixture. Tonight Warren Steven's quintuplets take a stroll down Danforth way and engage the Sunday Morning Class of that avenue. Nothing but superlatives could describe the set-up of this game. Four points are the prize to the winning team, with Danforth desperately in need of them. In their last engagement at Hart House the Blue team came out on top by a single point, so this engagement looks like the "most thrilling ever".

On Friday night the Queen's starry collection pay their long awaited visit to Hart House. Varsity must win this game to retain a mathematical chance of coping the college championship. If they take the game, then it's up to Western to pull one of their surprises and take the Kingstonians on Saturday night. Should this happen, Queen's and Varsity will be deadlocked at the top of the heap.

Tonight under the fatherly eye of Coach McCutcheon the intermediate eagers enbus for Hamilton to meet McMaster. It is a case of Mac's men meeting the Mac men or if you prefer the Men of Mac meeting the Men from Mac. Anyway, despite all this, it looks like a win for the men of Mac McCutcheon, as they have repeatedly demonstrated their superiority in this loop.

Tomorrow night at the local running oval the Varsity track team meet one of the strongest athletic clubs in the city, the Achilles by moniker. Among the super stars on the roster of the visiting team are Sam Richardson, Bill Christie, George Watson, etc. The latter youth hails from Creemore and is considered one of Canada's most promising half-milers. Richardson and Christie are well known to all followers of the running sport. The Varsity team which defeated Broadview so convincingly last week are favoured to win this meet. Their chances were somewhat dimmed by the forced withdrawal of Ashenbrenner, who injured his ankle. The rest of the team are in the pink and Coach Phillips is confident that his charges will garner more points than the visitors. All this speaks reams for the track ability in this U. Some of those favoured to garner points are Conway, O'Connor, Cooper and Delaney. The meet will consist of all the running events and the high jump, and gets under way at eight o'clock.

The heavily muscled gymnasts under the watchful gleam of Charlie Zwygard are putting the finishing touches on their timing and what not in preparation for their meet with McGill this Saturday at the Quebec Metropolis. Fran Buck and John Farrar are the veterans of the squad, while much of Varsity's hopes hinge on the performances of the three capable newcomers, Crossland, Schumacher and Patterson. The McGill team are strengthened by the acquisition of Donnelly, who learned his stuff at St. Andrew's College, the same school that presented Varsity with her present interfaculty champion, Stewart MacDonald. However, the Blue squad look plenty good enough to cop the title they so convincingly copped last year.

Last Friday night a scheduled baseball contest was declared no game, when an official made an incorrect ruling regarding a player who had batted out of turn. Such occurrences as this are all too frequent, especially in the baseball loop where there are tricky ground rules. In an attempt to avoid such occurrences the Athletic Directorate should issue a set of ground rules in booklet form, which will meet the requirements of playing conditions in the gym. This condition pertains not only to baseball but to all sports that operate under ground rules. Arguments which arise from the decision of unenlightened officials wastes the time of players and officials, costs the university money, and occupies the gym floor for a useless cause.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Tonight the Varsity hockey team plays its return game with the Toronto Ladies at nine o'clock in the Varsity Arena. In the first encounter Varsity came out on top of a 3-0 score, and it is to be hoped that the girls will be able to repeat their victory. Unfortunately Jean Atkinson will probably not be playing, because of her ankle, but Bunty Lang, Elaine Knight, Molly Selater and the rest of the team should be good enough to take the Ladies.

Betty Mark has called a meeting of the Hockey Executive for today at five, Room 82, U.C. to decide about the play-offs between Vic Seniors, U.C. and St. Hilda's. One team will have to have a bye, and this will probably be decided by a flip of the coin, or else by total goals. However, that is for the executive to decide.

This week and next promise to be busy ones for the swimmers. Tonight preliminaries will be held in the Hart House pool to decide which girls will travel to Hamilton Thursday, for the meet with McMaster and Macdonald Hall. Wednesday night the St. Hilda's meet will be held in the U.T.S. pool. Next Tuesday night the interfaculty preliminaries will be held in Hart House, and next Thursday, March 5, will be the interfaculty meet itself. So the mermaids in this university are going to have plenty of practice and competition.

What a man really marries for is to get a clique.—Dorothy Dix.

Any woman with a true aim makes her mark in this country, says an educator. Yes, but in so many cases it's necessary to bury the target.—Jacksonville Journal.

QUEBEC NATIONALISM TO BE TOPIC OF DEBATE

Never before in the history of Hart House debates have so many speakers been featured. With the cabinet minister and the two visitors from McGill attending, the debate will without a doubt be the most outstanding of the year.

The elections for next year's committee will also be held Wednesday night. A new ruling by the debates committee will prohibit candidates running for election from speaking at this final debate of the year. However, undergraduates who are not candidates will be permitted to speak from the floor.

SR. BLUES TO MEET DANFORTH S.M.C.

Varsity Looks for a Win to Entrench Blues in First Place

LIVELY GAME EXPECTED

Tonight at Danforth Tech. the Varsity seniors will match strides with the Danforth S.M.C. basketball team. This is one of those double point games that Varsity have agreed to play on the opposition's court, cancelling a home encounter.

Should the blue team capture the four points they will be firmly entrenched in first place and will be hard to dislodge. Danforth must win this game to stay in the running for the Big Four honours, so a lively game could be the only corollary to such conditions.

The Varsity team are hot right now and are steaming along with all valves open. Their huge score against Western on Saturday night displayed the real scoring power that is theirs. Last Wednesday they defeated this same Danforth club by a single point which gives this game added interest.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Royal Alexandra

Three Men on a Horse, rated the second funniest show in New York, is by far the funniest show which has hit Toronto this year. The combination of an Irish gambler and his cronies and the writer of Mother's Day verses in doting out the races is a sure fire success from beginning to end. The comedy is good, occasionally bawdy, and quite completely funny.

Chester Clute in the part of Erwin Trowbridge, besides fulfilling the physical requirements of a writer of Mother's Day verses, played the part of a humourless little man with all the humour which the situation could possibly contain. Sheldon Leonard in the role of Patsy gave the situation of the turning of the worm an admirable build up from start to finish.

The comedy itself depends in part upon the meek but conscientious little man as well as upon the pithy realism of the gamblers, and is concluded satisfactorily when the little man "gets mad" and socks the brute. The valentines and other sentimental verses which inspire him, as well as the winning horses in the races produce a delightfully impossible situation which no one wants to take seriously anyway. Three Men on a Horse is a splendid place to spend an evening if you want to laugh and if you don't we prescribe it anyway. M.K.H.

PROFESSORS LAUD EXCHANGE SYSTEM

Professor Robins of Victoria College agreed that the scheme was a very good one, but doubted that it could be put into practice in the English department, as the teaching of the staff was broken up into so many different subjects. He considered that exchanges could be better effected where the teaching duties were more specialized as in the Economics department.

Dr. Saunders of History remarked that his department had often considered the idea, but as yet nothing had been done about it.

ALL STAR TEAM MEET SR. S.P.S. IN WATERPOLO

Interfaculty Champions Will Demonstrate Ability
Alumni Night

Can an all star aggregation beat a championship team that features team play? This is the question to be decided when Sr. S.P.S., interfaculty waterpolo champions, meet an all star team Alumni Night, March 20, in the Hart House pool.

Sr. School demonstrated their great spirit and cohesive playing when they beat the starchy Jr. Meds and Victoria teams to take the Eckhardt trophy. The Alumni, aware of the attracting power of a good waterpolo match, had a team of stars selected from all the other faculties. Although the job of choosing the outstanding players was most difficult the following have been chosen. Parish, Dents; Brown, Penfold, Statton, McGill, Jr. Meds; Earl, Scott, Runnels, Victoria; and Morgan, U.C.

These players will have several practices together to get organized as a team. The first work-out will be held March 4 at 5 p.m. Those players who have not done so are asked to see Mr. Winterburn as soon as necessary arrangements.

BASHFULLY, we discard the cloak of anonymity and sign our name to today's and each succeeding column. At the same time we take the opportunity of dressing up our title. The Editor-in-Chief's position covers a multitude of sins, but henceforth we must accept our own criticism. Ever since the days of our youth we have realized the importance of not giving our right name, but even the mighty fall for the desire for notoriety.

A REAL LIVE BEAR was brought back to the University of California at the beginning of the semester. His fraternity brothers immediately bled themselves to the corner drug store and bought all the peroxide in stock, producing a first class "golden bear" as a college mascot.

RACKETEERING is rife on the campus these days, the most daring gyp of the season having been pulled in the vicinity of the Varsity office over the week-end, when an enterprising gentleman succeeded in selling "U.T.A.A. Sweepstakes Tickets". These turned out to be student's season tickets for athletic events. The season is almost over now, and the man with brains took this way of paying for the tickets he had failed to use.

"SHOCKING KISSING" is a problem at the University of Minnesota since the cold dry spell has been on. It seems that when the young Romeo shuffles toward the door and turns to kiss the one-and-only good night, the result is likely to be a resounding spark, instead of a smack. The cause—static electricity, and the cure?—that is their problem.

OUR IDEA OF A REAL BARGAIN is the offer made in an advertisement for the University of Southern California Book Store:

SENIOR BLUE BASKETEERS TAKE LEAGUE LEADERSHIP

Debaters To Discuss Status Of Quebec's Nationalism In Canadian Federation

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Tokio: Japanese officials are reported slain as a result of a military coup d'etat. Tokio is also reported under martial law.

Toronto: Toronto Maple Leafs moved into first place in the Canadian division of the N.H.L. by virtue of a tie with the N.Y. Rangers. Montreal Maroons lost ground by losing to Chicago.

Ottawa: The Canada-U.S. trade treaty was introduced into the House of Commons yesterday for the purpose of ratification.

London: France has suggested, owing to the proposed Anglo-German-American naval treaty, that England, Italy, France and the U.S. sign a treaty, and that following this England should make her treaty with Germany.

Rome: Preparations are said to be under way for the closing of Italian ports to sanction ships should the fight over sanctions become more bitter.

Chicago: Floods due to the sudden rise in temperature are threatening numerous areas of the United States and Canada.

Elections for Next Year's Debates Committee to be Held

C. G. POWER TO SPEAK

Tonight in Hart House student speakers will clash with a cabinet minister from Ottawa and two visiting debaters from McGill University in the last Hart House debate of the year. Discussion of French-Canadian fur traders, Orangemen and St. James street financiers will enter into the forensic contest.

The motion will read "That Quebec nationalism is consistent with Canadian nationalism". Bernard Shaffer, senior in law at University college, will speak first for the affirmative. Shaffer has been a star in the last two productions of the University college folios and is noted, aside from his debating ability, as an impersonator of University officials. He is a member of the Hart House debates committee and has frequently spoken in Hart House debates and the U.C. Parliamentary club.

A. D. Harris of St. Michael's college, will speak for the affirmative. From McGill University, C. Gross will speak for the affirmative and Leon Smart will speak for the negative. Smart is a colored student and one of McGill's most brilliant debaters.

Minister of Health C. G. Power will come down from Ottawa today to speak (Continued on Page 4)

CAMPUS POLITICAL CLUBS TO HOLD JOINT MEETING

The Student League will be hosts to the four campus political clubs, the Macdonald-Cartier, the 20th Century, the C.C.F. and the Communist Club, Tuesday, March 2nd at an open forum in the Women's Union, M. Wayman announced yesterday.

The various clubs will outline their respective political platforms, and the meeting will conclude with an open discussion.

Mr. Wayman stated the next issue of "The Student" would be off the press on March 10th and would take the form of a "Peace Issue".

Other activities of the League planned for the near future are the presentation of the social play, "Waiting for Lefty".

VICTORIA ATHLETES TO HOLD DANCE ON FRIDAY NIGHT

The sturdy Men of Might from the north end of the campus will be able to lord it over their effeminate colleagues at the Vic Athletic At-Home next Friday night as they back in the limelight of Annesley hero-worship and receive the coveted V's, given for athletic prowess in the interfaculty wars.

The wearers of the renowned Scarlet and Gold sweaters will conform to Black and White traditions for the dinner in Burwash Hall to be served in the best Burwash manner. Here the V's will be presented, and then the company will proceed to Wymilwood, there to dance to the right-rhythms of (Capt.) Fred Evis and his Class-Party-Pleasers. The dinner in Burwash is for the athletes (and their frills) only, but the executive of the V.U.A.U. wish it to be known that everyone in the faculty is welcome at the dance in Wymilwood.

A. D. HARRIS

... he looks askance at French culture in Quebec.

BERNARD SHAFFER

... for him French-Canadian nationalism is no threat to Canada.

Squash and Camera

Nominations for the Standing Committees and the Camera and Squash Racquets Committees close tonight at 6 p.m. Withdrawals will be accepted until 6 p.m. tomorrow.

PLAY UNQUALIFIED FOR DRAMA CONTEST

"Waiting for Lefty" Winner in British Columbia Contest

NEW TECHNIQUE EMPLOYED

"An unfortunate regulation prevented the Toronto production of Clifford Odets' play 'Waiting for Lefty', being entered in the Dominion Drama Festival," said Martin Loeb, one of the directors, yesterday. This play won the regional contest in British Columbia last week, and will be presented the last three evenings of this week at Margaret Eaton Hall.

"There seems to be a rule which requires that a group be formed for at least a year before it qualifies for the Drama Festival. We wanted to put our production in for we have worked it up to or near perfection as possible. It has been in rehearsal for twelve weeks," continued Mr. Loeb.

About the play, Brooks Atkinson, dramatic critic of the New York Times, wrote, "People who want to understand the times through which we are living" (Continued on Page 4)

'STUDENT' MAGAZINE TO REAPPEAR SOON

Many Feature Articles by Prominent Writers Is Forecast

TO COME OUT MARCH 10

On March 10, "The Student", the official publication of the Student League of Canada, will reappear on the campuses and in the high schools.

This magazine is the only one in the country that concerns itself solely with the general run of student problems and events which involve students. It is a pioneer in the field.

Financial troubles, familiar to all self-run publications, has stilled its control. (Continued on Page 4)

VIOLINIST GUEST ARTIST OF SPANISH-ITALIAN CLUB

Miss Margaret Ingram, violinist, and pupil of Mr. Rye of the Hambourg Conservatory, was guest artist at the Spanish-Italian Club, held last evening at Wymilwood. Miss Ingram played several selections accompanied by Miss Lillian Calvert.

Professor J. G. Alford of the Fine Art Department was present, but was unable to give his lecture without a lantern.

The club, after being welcomed in Spanish by Professor Goggio, participated in community singing of Spanish and Italian songs.

A Spanish one-act play is to be presented on March 10.

IF YOU LIKE DIRTY STORIES

Here's Mud In Your Eye

This served as Toronto's theme song yesterday as snow melted, automobiles swished by, pedestrians cursed, and proprietors of cleaning establishments for men's and women's clothing gazed gloatingly at the slushy streets and chuckled maliciously.

"Here's Mud In Your Eye"

Wishing to get student opinion on the weather we interviewed various people on the campus, but almost all of them would say for the press was "Garumphslushphooey, X(=) (.)". One fellow, however, (he may have been mad because we interviewed him just after he had fallen in the campus slush) sprayed us with muck and muttered malignantly.

"Here's Mud In Your Eye!"

After wading through the campus and reach Hart House we heard rumors that in thawing times they had trouble with the sewers and that during a thunderstorm a few years ago water got into the locker rooms and reached a depth of over a foot. Our fears were soon dispelled, however, when we enquired at the Hall Porter's desk and a gentleman with a black moustache informed us that the snow was not melting fast enough to flood the sewers; that if it should the valves could be turned off to prevent an overflow; that Hart House would not float away; that there was no danger; and that it was not advisable for us to increase our life insurance. We thanked the gentleman with a cheerful

Connelly, Marks and Bedford Are High Scorers for College Team

FOULS MAR GAME

By Don Robb

Varsity's fast travelling senior cage team came through with another great game in the Big Four loop last night by trouncing the Danforth Sunday Morning Class to the tune of 43-31 at Danforth Tech.

The Stevens-coached squad repeated their victory of a week ago but this time by the decisive margin of 12 points.

The game last night being another double point affair, the blue and white team are now assured of finishing first in the league, although they still have two games to play.

Both teams started cautiously with tight defensive play and Marks started the scoring with a good foul shot, followed by a field goal from the hands of Bedford. Minicovich countered with a beautiful shot from the centre of the floor which rippled through the twine without even touching the backboard. Watson counted on two foul shots for S.M.C. with Marks doing the same for Varsity. Then Minicovich broke away on a dash up the floor, sinking another basket and giving Danforth a 1 point lead with the score 6-5. Murchie dropped 2 more foul shots through the twine for Danforth while Connelly scored 1 for Varsity. Then Eisen shot a pass up the floor to McPhee who dropped one through the Varsity hoop to make the score 10-6 for Danforth.

STUDENTS RUN AMOK AT PANCAKE FEAST

Doughty Deeds of Valour Done to Spear a Flaccid Flapjack

PRIZES AWARDED

Of all things to do to pancakes! Nice, big, golden brown, moon-faced, delectable dainties. But over the bar they went, and then began the wild scramble. Pancake Tossing as tossed by Charles Soady, Superintendent of Buildings at the Model School and as caught by senior fourth and high school boys, is a feat of extreme delicacy and should be included among the finer arts. You have not lived if you have not scrambled wildly with a half dozen others of the same species, on a hard floor, after as much of a gooey mucky pancake as possible. We have seen rugby round-ups, hockey mix-ups, and basketball bang-ups, but—Mr. Sharpe's boys take the cake—or rather the pancake—and the way they took it! Then each pair of stockinged feet emerged and strangely enough, to each pair belonged one body, one shining and very dirty face, and two grubby fists holding pancake in the raw, and the one who grabs the most gets a prize. In this case the prizes were two, to Allan McKay and to Allan Ward, each of whom got a dollar, the first to go to the Humane Society and the second to the Star Fresh Air Fund. What fun for the privilege of giving. And not only did the participants enjoy it but the (Continued on Page 4)

BLADEN REVIEWS ECONOMIC TRENDS

Holds that Many of World's Ills Due to Economic Apathy

ECONOMICS NO PANACEA

Professor Bladen linked up the trend towards monopoly in economic society with the lack of any definite trend in the science of economics, in his lecture on "Modern Trends in Economic Thought", which he gave yesterday afternoon at University College.

As the birth of the science of economics was part of the same development which was manifest in the rise of individualism and free competition, it was inevitable that the decline of free competition and the emergence of monopoly as the typical condition in modern industry should be accompanied by a "sickness" in modern economic thought.

Professor Bladen thought that this division among economists was not important in so far as it arose from the different ends which they were pursuing and the different means which they were using to attain them, but it was important in so far as it indicated a weakness in economic analysis. There was great danger that economic reasoning would be exploited by political partisans, such reasoning being moulded to and accorded with a predetermined end rather than an attempt being made to solve problems with an unbiased mind.

While economists are capable of being of assistance in dealing with minor problems in an existing situation, they are not able to provide wholesale nostrums or panaceas which are often extolled. (Continued on Page 4)

Women's Status Solved at Last

For the past ten years we have listened attentively to our older and wiser contemporaries attempt to solve and define the position of women in our civilization but have as yet heard nothing which answers the problem. So with characteristic confidence we will attempt to settle for once and all this problem and let the world turn its attention to something more serious. If the problem is not solved by the time we reach the bottom of this column there is no solution to it.

Women today have reached a new high in the matter of freedom of endeavour. All the professions are open to them. They are at the present time in the act of storming that last stronghold of masculinity, the ministry. When and if they do this they will have at their disposal all the professions, except prize fighting, which are available to men. The father of the family will many times be out of employment because the daughter has a job which he could have been doing. Men will be displaced to a large extent by women. They will have shaken themselves loose from the shackles which have for centuries hampered their ambitions. But they will be hurt and disappointed when men refuse to politely lift their hats to them. They will expect courtesy in street cars, on sidewalks. They will expect protection from difficulties which arise—but they will insist they are the equals in every respect to the male of the species. It is all slightly inconsistent.

The inconsistency has an explanation. Women are women. Men are men. Both have their purpose in life. Each can do certain things better than the other. But the women can only do women's work better than the men. And the men can not do women's work as well as the women. The solution to the problem then should be simple enough. If some one can come forward and establish what is a woman's work and what is a man's and have the species act according to their capacities then one of the world's major problems would be solved. The world would be much happier for the solution. But no one seems to be able to establish what a man should do in this world that a woman should not and what a woman should do that a man should not.

The truth of the matter seems to be that women do not want freedom. They, like all mortals, spend their lives in a ceaseless pursuit of what have been erroneously termed ideals. Freedom sounds like a step in the right direction so they strive for it. Having attained what they fondly believe to be freedom they find it is not at all what they wanted. They are merely exchanging the chains of convention for the coarser harness of competition.

The creative instinct within a woman refuses to be satisfied with the drudgery of a routine office job. The stenographer who is satisfied to remain a stenographer is a rare being. Women want homes. And a home is in a realm apart from an office. The women who come to college for purely educational reasons are far outnumbered by women who come to college with the vague hope of securing a husband. There is nothing wrong with this state of affairs. The woman who secures a degree in the nature of a marriage certificate is much happier than the woman who gets a B.A. Why they will not be truthful and admit it is probably a commentary on our civilization rather than on the women themselves.

When and if women realize their position and are honest enough to admit the truth they will find the attitude of men change toward them. They can no longer hope to retain the respect and faith of men if they attempt to be men themselves. Courtesies were extended to women by the male race probably because they possessed the qualities which the men admired but to a certain degree lacked. The respectful manner in which they were treated during the past centuries is a tribute to their qualities as women. A waning of this respect will indicate nothing more nor less than a waning of the characteristics which engender respect.

Men do not touch their hats to men. And if the Lord had wanted women to be men He would certainly have equipped them with more muscles.

ED. NOTE—After all there probably is no solution.

Pep Up the Debates!

The Hart House debate tonight will take on the dignity and prestige of a regular house of commons session with a cabinet minister coming down from Ottawa to speak.

With the exception of the faculty debate of several weeks ago, the debates this year in Hart House have lacked a fire and a vitality which is essential to their success. It is to be hoped that tonight the undergraduate speakers will make it a debate and not just a seminar where prepared papers are read to a sedate audience.

The Warden has advanced the debates till they are becoming part of the tradition of the House. They are one of the worthiest institutions we have on the campus but if undergraduates persist in standing up and spouting platitudes from elaborate manuscripts instead of taking definite points which have arisen in the debate and arguing the issue, the debates in Hart House are certainly in for a decline.

Speakers should come prepared, it is true, but to have every speaker tonight, including the four speakers on the paper, address the house without flourishing a huge batch of notes would be a great tribute to the debaters. Experienced debaters all contend that prepared and elaborate notes merely impeded and harassed the speakers.

If debates in Hart House became more extemporaneous and lost their somewhat stilted and stiff character they would be better attended.

With Hon. C. G. Power, minister of pensions and national health, and the two debaters from McGill University, the debate tonight can be made into a memorable one if the speakers will but forget their pompousness and swing into the debate with verbal enthusiasm. Quebec nationalism is a potent and controversial question and offers great scope for able debaters who will battle it out on the floor of the House.

A Country Needs A Father

Every country needs a father. Some have more than one father, and some get rid of one father in favour of a new one. Look at Germany, with Hitler for a step-father. And Italy, with a new father whose jaw is big enough to shelter all Italians and about half the Ethiopians.

But the United States has a father, George Washington, who is not likely to be supplanted. He has survived the products of the legend-makers, including the cherry-tree calumny, and he has survived the works of the debunkers.

He wears well, and the beauty of him is that he is so elastic. One can prove anything by him.

People fail to resent attacks upon him not because they have forgotten him, but because they have a feeling that their father can not be damaged much.

This feeling, even if it may be based on acceptance of text-book platitudes, does not do any harm.

What does it matter if his feet were on the table and his breath smelled of mash? The facts we have about him seem to prove that he did a pretty good job of fathering his country.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Convocation Hall

"The Messiah" by Handel, will be sung in Convocation Hall by the Conservatory Choir, assisted by four prominent church choirs with soloists and an orchestra of fifty selected from the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. This performance, which will be under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan, will take the place of the regular Saturday symphony at Massey Hall on that date.

The featured soloists include Dorothy Allan Park, Marion Copp, W. F. Thompson and Robert Hatley.

Special student tickets, at reduced prices, makes it possible for all student lovers of music to enjoy this great performance. These student tickets may be purchased only at the Conservatory of Music and at Hart House Theatre Box Office. It is hoped that a large number of students will avail themselves of this rare opportunity.

Massey Hall

Last night, Dalies Frantz, young American pianist, presented something new in piano recitals. Mr. Frantz himself, conforms to no type, being neither urbane nor dramatic—being just a very American self.

His playing displayed much of his offhand personality, and if he was brusque to a fault in the Mozart Sonata, he was to perfection in the Bach works. His reputation for a tremendous technique, no doubt, causes him to place so much emphasis on it, in such numbers as the rather tedious Liszt Sonata.

The second half of the program was somewhat more interesting. The limp Brahms Intermezzi were close to melodic perfection, as were the more brilliant Chopin works, which were played with all the crystal-clearness of arpeggio and balance of theme so essential to Chopin.

Two short modern pieces were played: the eccentric March from Prokofiev's Love for Three Oranges, and the delightful Serenade of the Doll by Debussy.

Probably the most successful play to be produced on the stage of St. Michael's new auditorium ended a run last night. G. K. Chesterton's three-act drama, "Magic", was first produced two weeks ago and ran for two nights, one for college students, both St. Michael's and St. Joseph's, and the other for the high school. It was so enthusiastically received that it was shown twice again last week and was brought to Loretto College for production on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday evenings the show was open to the public.

VARSITY SECONDS DEFEAT McMASTER CAGERS 34-20

Fast Going Blues Retain Lead
Throughout a Rough Game

HOGG STARS

By Norm Brown

Varsity Seconds clinched the Intercollegiate basketball championship by downing a fighting McMaster quintet 34-20 in a rough game played in the Westdale gym at Hamilton last night.

The game came close to being a free-for-all at times and once the referee had to stop play to caution the gladiators. Even then the Ambitious City's squad lost three players via the personal foul route, vainly trying to stem Mac McCutcheon's squad, who took the punishment without retaliation. The champions outclassed their formidable opponents in ball handling and defensive work as well as being more aggressive throughout. Hogg played brilliantly at guard and was the outstanding man on the floor.

Varsity started off on the right foot when Hogg netted one in the first two minutes of play and followed it with another counter on a foul shot. The Blues ran this early lead up to eight points before the Macmen scored their first basket on a nice shot by Moore.

The zone defense and the hard checking of the Hamilton quintet held Varsity from gaining too big a lead in the first half. Dougherty, the object of several personal fouls, made excellent use of the opportunity to add three points, besides netting several baskets to aid the cause and make the half-time score 20-14 for McCutcheon's squad.

The Macmen opened the final session with a short-lived offensive that did little to threaten the Blue lead. Varsity then displayed the brand of ball handling that had the Hamiltonians bewildered and on the defensive. The result was that they gained a 29-19 lead while the resisting Macmen lost three men in quick succession for personal fouls.

Even with a ten point lead McCutcheon's squad took the game to their opponents and Hogg, with Singer, on the defense, frustrated many breakaways by the Garnet and Gray.

The calibre of the champions was proven by the stubborn fighting McMaster crew who finally succumbed 34-20. Hogg was the high scorer of the evening, closely followed by Dougherty, also of Varsity. Singer, erstwhile forward, turned in one of his best defensive efforts of the season, while Cooper's and Peters' general aggressiveness, supported by stellar teamwork, demonstrated that the Varsity Seconds are of true championship calibre.

For McMaster, Holland's general offensiveness and Fielding's marksmanship kept their squad close behind their conquerors.

Varsity II: McLaughlin, Hogg, Peters, Dougherty, Cooper, Singer, Powers, Marling.

McMaster: Atherton, Holland, Young, Moore, Connor, Haist, Sephton, Fletcher.

ALL WOMEN ORATORS INVITED TO COMPETE IN FORENSIC CONTEST

The St. Margaret's Public Speaking Prize Contest will take place at the Women's Union on Monday, March 9th at 8 p.m.

Each candidate must be fully registered in University College in order to be eligible as an entrant and two or more entrants may choose the same subjects.

The candidates will compete for a prize of twenty-five dollars and will speak for seven minutes each. This time limit may be altered according to the number of candidates entered in the contest.

Miss Dorothy Walker, who won this contest last year, is not eligible to this year's prize for that reason.

All U.C. women who are interested in public speaking and wish to enter this contest may sign their names on a list which will shortly be posted in the women's cloakroom.

JUNIOR MEO CAGERS WIN OVER VICTORIA IN SCRAPPY CONTEST

Captain Jack Denne's fast-flying Junior Meds whipped the younger Victoria cagers last night at Hart House by a 29 to 14 score. The Scarlet squad gave a scrappy display every minute of the game but failed to check the doctors' speedy passing plays.

Kinsey's four field goals featured the first half in which Meds earned their 12-6 margin on the period's play. In the second half Doug Tickner led the Victorians with four scoring points but their checks ran on a wild rampage to add seventeen additional marks to the medical total.

Jr. Vic: Sheldrake 2, Maitland, Warren 2, Lang 3, Tickner 4, Amos, Phillips, Ward 3.

Jr. Meds: Fenner 4, Wise 8, Barrett 2, Denne 2, Stewart 4, Kinsey 8, Cash, Holden, Epping.

BERT HOULE

Bert Houle, IV S.P.S., is 145 lb. intercollegiate wrestling champion. He won the title for Varsity at the recent assault in Montreal.

Bert started to wrestle only a year ago last fall and won a place on last year's team after a succession of alternating decisions with MacKenzie. In his first two years, he got his exercise in the boxing room.

Then, realizing that his height of 5' 3" and his superb muscular development was better suited to the grappling game, he turned to wrestling and has been very successful in this line. He has simply outclassed the opposition. He won the senior interfaculty in fine fashion, made a very impressive showing against a tough-looking mug from Buffalo, and went to town in a big way at the intercollegiate assault.

Bert comes from Massey, in North-ern Ontario. Here's hoping a post-graduate course keeps him at Varsity for another year or two. The wrestling team needs him.

RULES ANNOUNCED FOR OFFICE-SEEKERS

To Govern Aspirants to Camera and Squash Raquets Committees

The following are the regulations governing the elections to the Camera Committee:

The Camera Committee is elected by the undergraduate membership of the Camera Club and nominees must be undergraduate members of the club. The elections will be held on the same day as the general elections, 4th March, in the camera rooms at the following hours:

12.15 p.m.-1.45 p.m.
5.15 p.m.-5.45 p.m.

The following are the revised regulations governing the elections to the Squash Raquets Committee:

Those candidates shall be elected who poll the four highest votes provided (a) that each candidate elected shall poll at least 40 votes, (b) that the college or faculty of the member carried over shall not be considered in the election and (c) that only one candidate shall be elected from a college or faculty unless there are not sufficient candidates eligible under section (a) for election, when two candidates at most may be elected from a college or faculty.

Nominees for the Squash Raquets Committee must be undergraduate regular squash players and must have had their names on the reservation lists at least half a dozen times during the current academic year. Members entitled to vote for the Squash Raquets Committee must be undergraduate regular squash players. The elections will take place in the art gallery of Hart House on the same day as the general elections (4th March) at the following hours:

12.30 p.m.-2.00 p.m.
5.00 p.m.-6.00 p.m.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Jim Tiller

The final scene of a modern tragedy was enacted yesterday afternoon at the burial of Fred Matthews, who died from injuries received in the boxing ring in the recent White Hope tournament. There is no blame attached to Patrick Flannigan, his last opponent, who knocked him into that state of coma from which he never recovered. The tragedy is that there should exist in what is commonly called a civilized land a state of affairs that not only permitted such a misfortune but really courted such a disaster. The wonder is that there was only one fatality.

It is not pleasing to remember that a sell-out crowd, maddened by a blood-soaked canvas, cheered lustily as Matthews received his death blows and sank to the floor, the victim of a monstrous publicity racket. When ancient gladiators battled to the death they at least knew what they were doing. Matthews didn't. He didn't know he was flitting with it by entering the ring half-dazed from previous bouts. There were several men in the building that night who must have known. Then, why didn't they stop the fight?

Such a savage disregard for limb and life will kill this mushroom revival of professional boxing just as surely as unethical methods of management have already reduced the business to a new low. This is unfortunate. Handled in the way it was intended to be handled, boxing is one of the finest sports in the world for both participants and spectators.

In the above paragraphs appear the reasons why University boxing bouts are often stopped when both competitors are on their feet. The officials are taking care that no fatal accidents shall occur. This is the reason for the numerous technical K.O.'s. It's not because the college boys are soft.

The Blue and White speed artists are hoping to be able to show the runners of the Achilles Club the way around the track in Hart House tonight. The Achilles have several star performers, notably Sam Richardson, and somebody from Creemore, but Phillips' team can really burn up the track, no foolin', and it should be a good meet. Several of the Varsity boys turned in fast times last week when they scored a decisive win over Broadview Y. Al Forrest ran the mile in 4.53 and that's some stepping. Kibblewhite was only a yard behind the Broadview man who covered two miles in 10.03, and that's good time too. If you don't care for the debates, come to the track meet.

If only it wasn't for that one-point loss to Western, this would be another big year for the Varsity cagers. They really got going against Danforth last night, and this time Bedford led the way. Although he has always been one of the slickest ball-handlers in these parts, Bedford never really broke loose with a scoring splurge until last night and then he ripped the twine for 15 points. What's more, he held the shifty Eisen to only 4. Connelly and Marks turned in another one of their spectacular performances, and this time they came out even in a scoring way with 11 points each. All right, bring on Queen's. We'll beat them here anyway, whether Western does or not.

Here's one you might have read in "hither and yon". They're handing out degrees in football below the border now. The University of Chicago are leading the way by conferring a degree of "Master of Football Arts" on a fellow by the name of Jay Berwanger. What next.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO IN A CASE LIKE THIS?

Evanston, Ill., Feb. 25.—Here are some of the answers given by journalism students in a recent test at Northwestern University:

Addis Ababa, king of the Rif; Sir Anthony Eden, captain of the stricken liner Dixie, Maxim Litvinoff, king of the Bulgarians, Nicholas Murray Butler, governor of Oklahoma.

Sir Samuel Hoare, according to one embryo reporter, is commander of the French fleet. Richard E. Byrd is a senator from West Virginia. I. C. C. stands for Illinois Conservation Camp, "a branch of the CCC". Mickey Cochran is a professional swimmer and diver; Fred Perry, an intrepid Arctic explorer. J. Edgar Hoover, wrote another bright young lad, is a former President of the United States and has just completed a book called "The White House Gang".

C.O.T.C. VERY OISMARING TO ANCIENT RIVALS

Refuse Loan of Service Rifles for Play Sponsored by Student League

To some students the C.O.T.C. is one way of obtaining P.T. credits. To others it means a chance to wear a snappy dress uniform (There is something about a soldier that is fine, fine, fine). But to that hardy band of pacifists, known as the "Students' League", it is an object of hatred, a source of militaristic propaganda, and a spawning-ground for future war-lords.

The League has fought (verbally, of course) the C.O.T.C. on every front with commendable determination. But even a militant pacifist must have relaxation and recreation. "The play's the thing" So the League decided to stage a play. All went well until someone discovered that a number of militia rifles were a necessary stage property. Even guns have their place in the drama. (There's something about a soldier that is fine, fine—fine!)

Alas! the League possessed no armaments of any sort. But the C.O.T.C. did. The thought, in the Students' League, is father to the act. A senior officer of the Corps was located and was very politely requested to lend a number of rifles. Muttering under his breath something about "gunning for us too long", he very impolitely refused. (There's something about a soldier . . .)

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. K.

Varsity blanked the Toronto Ladies 1-0 last night at the Stadium in a close encounter. The puck was down at the Ladies' end of the ice most of the night and there were no serious threats for Maisie Cowan and Marg McDonald in goal to contend with, while the Varsity shots felt thick and fast around the Ladies' nets.

No goals were scored in the first period but in the second Varsity put on a power-play with all forwards and defence players bearing down in a strong attack. With five minutes to go Gladys Wagg shot one in from a tricky angle and Varsity held their own from then till the end of the game.

With Vic. U.C. and St. Hilda's in a three-cornered tie for the interfaculty hockey laurels the draw was made yesterday to see who got the bye. Vic was the holder of the lucky number, so on Monday at one the Saints and U.C. will battle it out in the semi-final game. The winners of this bout will meet Vic on Wednesday in the first of two final playoff games. All three matches will be held in the Stadium so adverse weather need not keep you from turning out to support your team.

Only a few mermaids showed up at Vic's swimming meet Monday night and Peggy Bailey won all the events except the plunge. Jean Carmichael placed second and I. McIntosh third. Tonight St. Hilda's is having an inter-year meet to decide on their team for the interfaculty swim.

The U.C. badminton is being run off nicely, with only three teams left in the doubles and D. McCallum, M. Hughes, D. Downey, and M. Ecclestone in the singles. Their star player, Dot Dempster, has graduated, but they still hope for a strong team to retain their championship. At St. Hilda's, Betty Clement, Elsie Chisholm and Mary Becker are fighting it out for first place, and Alice Parker and Gladys Carvillat will probably complete the quintet.

BLUES TAKE DANFORTH'S
BY SCORE OF 43-31

Bedford for the blue team really got into his stride, sinking 3 baskets in a row while Gillespie sank 1 for Danforth, then Marks sped up the floor to sink a basket as the period ended, which along with numerous foul shots made the score 21-18 for Varsity at the end of the first half.

The Varsity squad checked and passed the Danforth boys into the floor during the second period. S.M.C. managed to keep pace with the blue and white team until the score reached 27-21. Neil Sullivan of Varsity and O'Hara of Danforth went out of the game on personals.

The Varsity boys ran up a lead of 12 points before Murchie scored the last field goal of the game for Danforth.

Marks went out of the game via the foul route. Connelly shot a pass to Bedford beneath the basket, who dropped the leather through the hoop to make the score 42-28 for Varsity. Danforth scored the last 3 points of the game on foul shots, making the final score 42-31.

Bedford for Varsity was the best man on the floor. He couldn't miss on his shots and garnered a total of 15 points, running circles around Eisen, who was trying to check him. Connelly and Marks were as usual among the high scorers with 11 points each. McGregor at centre for the blue and white team was another star of the game, while Eisen, Murchie and Min-covich were the best of the Danforth squad.

Varsity: Connelly 11, N. Sullivan, McGregor 4, Marks 11, Bedford 15, Willis, Hemel, T. Sullivan 2.
Danforth: Eisen 4, Murchie 5, O'Hara, Min-covich 4, Sanford 4, Harrison 2, Carter, Watson 5, Sellers, Mc-Phee 3, Gillespie 4.

ALLIANCE FRANCAISE TO OFFER THREE PLAYS

Junior Members of the French Staff Included in Tonight's Presentation

The success of the three-plays-in-one-night policy has led the Alliance Francaise to again present for our edification and amusement three comedies at Hart House tonight. The program includes "La Farce des Bossus", "Le Carrosse du Saint-Sacrement" and "A Lower Meuble".

The Thespians include a goodly number of young professors, e.g., Finch, Assie and Houpt, as well as popular members of the city's French colony. "The Farce of the Little Hunchbacks", is a well known medieval play showing how a beautiful young woman is rid of her grouchy camelous husband. The locale of "Le Carrosse du Saint Sacrement" is Peru during the Spanish regime when a viceroys presents his favourite actress with a coach. Since it was before the days of quick paint jobs and floor-over licence plates there ensues a scandal, but all ends well for the quasi-ingenue.

"A Lower Meuble" deals with the trials of a Commissaire de Police who unwittingly rents a villa from two thieves who are burglarizing it and then is in possession when the rightful owner arrives.

PLAY UNQUALIFIED FOR ORAMA CONTEST

can scarcely afford to ignore it." The play is set at a strike meeting of the New York taxi-drivers union and shows the manner in which the idea of striking against low wages grew up in the strike leaders.

The technique used will be new to Toronto audiences. It combines many of the better innovations of the modern continental theatres and uses them to produce a vital, American drama. Odds' has been hailed by many as greater than Eugene O'Neill but is conceded by all authorities as one of the most important writers in the history of American literature.

The Toronto production boasts of an amazingly fine cast. The players include such well known actors as Jack Graham, Arthur Pettipiece, Arthur Bernstein, Blair Cutting, Hazel Kilman and Helen Coleman. It is under the direction of Miss Jim Watts, a recent graduate of University College, and Martin Loeb. Tickets may be obtained at Hart House Theatre Box Office from twelve to two each day or at Margaret Eaton Hall.

The play was an excellent choice. It was more than trivial comedy. The philosophy of Chesterton was evident in every situation, and although the fine points of writing and the delicate nuances of philosophy were incomprehensible to many of the audience, they could understand and enjoy the basic thoughts which the playwright wished to express.

The play received a careful and able production in the hands of Father Joseph O'Donnell of the staff. Actors were well chosen and settings and lighting effects added much to the general effect of the play. Henry Maloney carried the principal role with ease and delivered a forceful performance. The role of Patricia was rather woodyly acted by Joseph Coughlan, but his feminine disguise was excellent and he made a pretty actress, even if a bit stiff.

Archie Harris, whose excellent knowledge of comedy values made his role instrumental in carrying the only comedy relief of the play. His part was overdone, it is true, but intentionally overdone and was highly effective. Justin O'Brien was especially good in putting across the tension of the 'devil' scene. George Delhorne, William Shea and Peter Swan completed the cast.

ABSENCE NOTES must be furnished by Theological students at the University of Manitoba. The would-be ministers are using a good deal of unprofessional language about the new ruling, on the grounds that they are of an age of responsibility, but rules are rules, and the student who wants to try final examinations in a subject, or apply for bursaries and scholarships must bring a written excuse for absence.

GLAND HUNTING is the job of Dr. George W. Crile, who returned recently from Tanganyika. He was engaged in a scientific expedition to study the glands of healthy animals living in their natural state. In a laboratory set up in the wilds, he and his staff dissected some 200 specimens, ranging from a monkey to a seven-ton elephant. Crile is an expert rifle shot, killing the animals in such a way as not to hurt any part which he wants to study.

CANADIAN COLLEGE STUDENTS are more slovenly speakers and letter-writers than English ones, according to Mr. Henry Button of the Dent publishing house. However, Canadian students show a laudable spirit of democracy not shared by the English. In the men's Varsity office we found the worst situation of all. It seems that while most of the student body had their goloshes and overshoes the poor "scribblers" had no protection whatsoever—against the slushy weather. The boys, therefore, have decided to take up a collection to buy themselves rubbers. We feel certain that the collection will be a success for, after all, the Sharpe announced a special prize of a dollar to the boy who should write the best account of the ceremony before leaving school today. He told them that he didn't want a formal essay, but rather one written in the newspaper style, thus leaving them with lots of freedom. Insults, that's what!

One of the things that goes with newspaper writing is a strong constitution. For even after that we had the nerve to order pancakes for lunch, and at the debate tonight. It is very infrequent that a cabinet minister will fulfill a speaking engagement when the house is in session and the debates committee feel gratified that they were able to obtain Major Power as a guest speaker.

Elections for next year's committee will also be held at the debate tonight. Nearly a dozen candidates have handed in their nomination sheets and the results will be known at about 11.30 tonight. Special arrangements have been made to handle the large number of undergraduates who are expected to attend.

Candidates for election to the debates committee will not be permitted to speak due to the lack of time for floor speakers. It is believed several prominent debaters among them George Ignatieff, the Rhodes scholar, and Ken Woodsworth, will speak from the floor.

STUOENTS AT MCGILL PETITION FOR RETENTION OF RETIRING PROFESSORS

McGill University, Montreal—Students of McGill are petitioning the Board of Governors to retain Professor Stephen Leacock and Dr. Martin, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, who have been dismissed in accordance with the University age limit retirement rule.

The Leacock petition has been signed by 150 students of Economics and Political Science, and states that they feel Leacock still possesses sterling qualities as a lecturer and exerts a great inspirational force on his students.

The petitioners state that they do not wish their action to be construed as an attempt to take issue with the Board of Governors, but wish to present to the authorities some idea of the deep sense of loss felt by the students over Leacock's dismissal.

QUEBEC NATIONALISM UPHELD AT HART HOUSE DEBATE

OFFICIALS CONSIDER COLLEGES

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Tokio, Feb. 27: Government officials have been advised that they had control of the situation in which the rebel units had attempted to seize the Japanese capital to establish a military government.

Ottawa, Feb. 26: Government officials have been advised that no Canadian citizen was injured in the fighting in Tokio.

London, Feb. 27: There is an unconfirmed rumour here that Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator, has been shot in the head.

Toronto: All Ontario is covered with a layer of water. Broken wires have interrupted Hydro service, streetcar and other transportation facilities have been thrown out of commission, residents of river areas are preparing for serious floods. The weatherman, however, promises cold weather in the very near future.

Toronto: Former Mayor W. W. Hiltz died suddenly at his home last night as a result of a heart disease.

Toronto: The local tax rate will be the highest in history this year—34.75 mills.

UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY CONCERT ON SATURDAY

Conductor Weinzwieg Plans Varied Program of Classic Gems

The University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra will make its annual appearance on the campus Saturday afternoon, February 29th, when they give a concert in Hart House Theatre. This will be the second year for this organization and already they are beginning to take an important place in the campus musical world.

The orchestra is made up of students from every faculty and includes several students who are specializing in music. They are sponsored by the Students' Administrative Council. On Saturday they will have as guest artist Miss Winnifred Noy, pianist.

CLAIMS NEW PARTY TO BE SHORT-LIVED

Visitors Give Opinion on Newly Formed Political Party in Quebec

VIEWS ON FRATERNITIES

An opinion that the new L'Action Nationale Libérale party in Quebec will not last was expressed by both L. Smart and C. Gross, visiting McGill debaters, in an interview yesterday.

Both men are of the opinion that the new party has come into being as a gesture of people "playing politics" and that when the newcomers get the political spoils they are after, the dissension within the Liberal party will disappear. They pointed out that the complete platform of the new party is nothing but a reiteration of the platform which the old Liberal party have held for many years.

Leon Smart hails from Kingston, Jamaica. He is in his fourth year in medicine at McGill, but still finds time for debating and for an active part in the Student Peace Movement. He has lived so long in Canada that he feels that he knows the country better than many natives, and characterizes himself as a real Canadian. He is.

Smart believes that some kind of state medicine will become a reality in Canada in the near future, and he favours the idea. He pointed out, however, that there are many different forms of state medicine; he would prefer a loose type of system, a system in which people who prefer a private doctor could have one, but in which comprehensive medical care would be provided for the needy.

The Feasibility of University Constituencies Discussed by Member

A VARSITY CAMPAIGN

Possibility that the King government may look into the feasibility of University constituencies was expressed last night by Hon. C. G. Power, federal minister of pensions and national health, in an interview with this paper.

Mr. Power said that the possibility of such constituencies was an interesting one, and should be considered. "The committee," he said, "is being set up now. It will begin to function next week." Its terms, he continued, should be broad enough to include such an investigation as would have to be made.

The practical difficulty in the face of such an innovation, he said, would be that it might involve double voting by graduates. "Public opinion," he said, "would never stand for that." Because a man is a graduate of a university, he continued, is no reason why he should have advantages over others in the matter of government.

In England, he said, graduates are sent ballots through the mail, on which they vote for the university candidates for university ridings. It is understood that they have two votes in this way, voting also in their own constituencies.

The Varsity last term attempted to have university constituencies introduced in this country. Mr. Power's words are the first intimation that there is a possibility of the government's taking action along these lines.

Categories of Mutes Listed by Scribe

Important Facts Revealed not Understood Before

WEIRD NAMES, NOISES

It is a well known fact that purveyors of jazz speak a language all their own, that they refer to bass violins as dog-houses, that they talk of swing music and the like. But that the man who plays the trumpet has also a language of his own is much less known. Such, however, would appear to be the case.

It is likewise a well known fact that those things which the trumpeter sticks over the bill of the trumpet, to make it create weird noises, are called "mutes". But this is not all. These various mutes have various functions to perform, and various names which form part of the language spoken by trumpeters.

The purpose of these mutes is to soften, deaden, or colour the tone, or to give it high piercing qualities, or things. Two of the commonest types of mutes are the voca-tone and the tonal-colour. These are used to mellow the (Continued on Page 4)

ENGINEERS HEAR ELECTION JOKES

Doubtful Quality Propaganda Issued at Turbulent Meeting

In true School style, approximately fifty thousand engineers assembled in C22 yesterday afternoon to hear the speeches of candidates in the forthcoming annual elections. In opening the meeting, President Lawrason exhorted his audience to vote on Friday; not to mark the ballot at random, but to vote according to the merits of the candidates. He said that the members should get to know the candidates; what they did—but to leave their private lives out of it.

The speakers took full advantage of the absence of members of the staff to regale their listeners with the traditional election jokes. The full account of the proceedings is not published, as it is feared that the campus police force might take upon themselves the duties recently assigned to Chief Draper's men. If the "questionability" of the jokes was a measure of the importance of the office to be attained, most of the candidates would now be (Continued on Page 4)

S.A.C. MEETING

The ninth meeting of the Joint Executive Students' Administrative Council was held yesterday afternoon at 5 p.m. in the Women's Council office, Room 82, University College, with the President, Mr. Shaw, in the chair. The following items of business were transacted:

1. Appointment of a committee to draft certain constitutional amendments.
 2. Agreement to budget for visit of the British debating team touring Canada under the auspices of the N.E.C.U.S. in the fall of 1936.
 3. Appropriation for office equipment for Employment Bureau.
 4. Vote of congratulation to Miss E. B. Bealey, a member of this Council, upon being awarded a War Memorial Scholarship.

Lady Luck Assists In Defeating Beavers

Royal York Squad Give Heart-Breaking Block to Local Hopes

By Meredith Fleming

Lady Luck herself must have been wearing the Royal York colours up at the Arena last night as the brown and gold sextet defeated the Beavers 4 to 3 in a rip-roaring overtime battle. Varsity would have piled up a margin as large as Mrs. Astor's horse had it not been for the over-anxiousness of the blue attacking division around the Yorkers' citadel.

Bradshaw scored the winning goal for Royal York when he rammed Murphy's rebound off the Varsity goalie into the hemp after half a minute of overtime. Stavert later missed an opportunity to tie the totals on a pass from Lindsay as the misbehaving disc struck House's pads.

Varsity dominated play throughout the first forty minutes with Creasy's count in the second session being the only mark on the score sheet. The blue and white forward lifted the puck over House, sprawled at the goal-mouth, and the little black rubber obliged by taking two jumps and then into the net.

The Yorkers assumed the lead in the third period on Stanhope's duet of goals from Bradshaw's passes. Lindsay made it 2 up with five minutes to play by a speedy breakaway and a burning backhand drive from just outside the crease. Then Lindsay gave Stavert a pass to net the third Varsity score (Continued on Page 3)

Successful Session Marked by Discussion of Place for French-Canadians

MAJOR POWER PRO-FRENCH

Roman Catholic Church's Place Considered by L. Smart of McGill

Winding up the Hart House debate last night with a vigorous and earnest speech in defence of French-Canadian nationalism, and paying tribute to the new political party in Quebec, the Action Libérale Nationale, Hon. C. G. Power, federal minister of pensions and national health, swung the house to the affirmative side. The motion, "That Quebec nationalism is consistent with Canadian nationalism", was upheld by a vote of 126 to 70.

A near capacity house turned out for the last debate and listened to the most successful session the house has held this year. Regionalism, religion, language, patriotism and Orangemen featured the discussion which, while complex and controversial at times, never reached the stage of being rabid. Several speakers were obviously discreet in their remarks concerning the French-Canadian language and religion. Following a fighting speech by F. Molinaro of U.C., who pleaded for a retention of the French influence in Canada and made digressions as far back as Columbus, Hon. Major Power member for Quebec South, spoke for the motion and showed the fundamental importance of French culture through all Canadian history.

He prefaced his remarks with a few sentences in French and strongly applauded the new youth movement in (Continued on Page 3)

CHEMISTRY SEMINAR

At the Chemistry Seminar yesterday, Mr. S. O. Thompson spoke on the solubility of gases in liquids. He cited the research work in this field, of many scientists: Bohr, Henry, Bunsen, Philip, Bancroft, Ostwald and others. Mr. Thompson discussed the relation of solubility to chemical properties and pointed out that a better relationship might be worked out if the physical properties of organic substances and of gases were investigated.

WHAT'S NEW IN PROFESSORIAL DRESS

Do our professors read Esquire? Yes, but do they go on and read the advertisements? Or where else do they get their ideas of What the Well-dressed College Man Wears? Anyhow, while the lads are waiting around to be graduated with Ph.D.'s (hon.) they appear often in costumes reminiscent of the late Joe College.

It's too soon after Christmas to take off marks for scarves and ties, but after all a suit is no one's fault but the wearers. We wonder if the professor who wears the coat that doesn't match the vest that doesn't match the trousers realizes that he has been weighed in the balance and found too light—in a word frivolous. (Incidentally we should like to draw the attention of certain faculty members to the following fashion-tip, hot from Paris, "Purple Pants are Passe, Oxford Bags are OUT").

We would institute a reform in this matter of matching up the ensemble, but we fear the beige-vested interests of Baldwin House are too strongly entrenched. Surely, however, something could be done about the newest member of the flock there, who has apparently been inveigled by unscrupulous sales-clerks into buying a suit in three shades of grey. A trusting soul. It must be sheer joy to explain about delayed essays to him.

An anxious search revealed the fact that none of our professors have sunk as low as a coon coat, but we did encounter a chubby little fellow in a sort of teddy-bear skin and (we swear it) Romeo slippers.

Another bit of local colour is supplied by the proud possessor of a woollen tam with bright scarlet pom-pom and a scarf of equally brilliant hue. (He also uses the scarf to wrap up strayed cats when he wants to carry them up Yonge St.)

And speaking of personal adornment, we must not forget the young aesthete with the blonde marcel. We were sure at first that it was Pember's, but we are being slowly forced to conclude that it is God's. In which case he too must be forgiven.

When Orators Orate

Every so often one of our amateur orators feels it necessary to the life, liberty and corporate happiness of our civilization that he rise in his wrath and in the sanctity of the council walls denounce our institutions and customs as dangerous, destructive and demoralizing. Their attack is merely lent momentum by the insignificant fact that they know nothing of what they are attacking. Such is the certainty lent by ignorance.

We have recently been accused of being unfaithful to the cultural centre which the paper represents by using six column lines on the front page. This we are told is merely patterning ourselves along the lines of the downtown press. This has often been charged to The Varsity and no doubt in future the charge will again be made. It is significant that the charge is usually made by men who know nothing whatever about the elementary facts of journalism. The obvious answer to this charge is that an organization which has been practicing journalism for centuries just might possibly know slightly more about it than students who are strictly novices in the business. We may of course be wrong. Perhaps we should tell them how to run a paper.

During the past year The Varsity has made an attempt to publish the news of the campus as completely and as quickly as possible. We have made no attempt to colour the news in any respect. The charges of yellow journalism merely because we use a streamer on the top of the page each day is too absurd to merit comment. The charge of concentrating news is also slightly reminiscent of school-boyish politics. One of the functions of a daily paper is to keep its readers informed as accurately as possible of current events. To do this the news must be presented in a manner which will be easy to find and equally easy to read.

There is little if any use in publishing a paper if it is not going to be read. Few papers will be read if they are uninteresting looking. Nor will the publication of long and involved essays act as an inducement to readers. It has always been regarded as quite an achievement to absorb culture from literature which is not read.

If The Varsity is to fulfill its purpose on the campus it must be readable and as far as possible accurate. It must also maintain as high a standard as possible. But it is certainly unfair to suggest that we are lowering the standard of the paper merely because we attempt to produce a well balanced and interesting front page.

Why Read?

Why don't university students read more, outside their actual course of studies? A survey of the undergraduates whom we meet from day to day seems to indicate that comparatively little outside reading is done by most of them. This is surprising when one remembers that everyone here is ostensibly interested in getting an education along the broadest possible lines.

Perhaps it is natural for the student to read detective stories and light fiction as a relief from the heavy task of studying, but we wonder how many have really tried the books which are accepted as classics. After all, enlightened public opinion over the course of years is a pretty good guide. Dickens did not become England's greatest novelist because he wrote books of many pages. He did get those books read, in spite of their length, because his writing was always interesting, his language and style ever fresh and original. The same may be said of every outstanding writer. It would be a good idea to read them, if you have not done so. You could find time for some of them at least.

Unless students study the writers from Chaucer to Sir Walter Scott in their classes, they seem to pass over the entire group. It seems generally to be accepted that the older novels are long-winded and dull. It would be better to try them and see, before passing opinion.

Again, there are whole schools of modern writers such as James Joyce, Virginia Woolf, Aldous Huxley, John Dos Passos, William Faulkner, and many others that are blazing new trails in the fields of literary endeavour. Apparently the great majority of students have scant acquaintance with these modern authors, except for a vague idea that their books are "pretty dirty".

It isn't suggested that the student become a "book-worm", but we do feel that a night or so every week devoted to the reading of better books would give every student of the University a great deal of satisfaction and a cultural background deserving of pride.

Appearance and Character

"Appearances make the man", is a saying with a great deal of truth. But we can scarcely rely purely on appearances for a judgment of good or bad character.

The art of character judgment has lost much of recent years. In the days of history it was a necessity and a part of the equipment of every successful soul; for, after all, those were days when limited companies and corporations, laws and law courts, the spirit of common good and common benefit, were still plagues of the future and not of the then-present. Today we are so protected, so surrounded by the mass of our fellows and so bound up in the affairs of others that character has somewhat ceased to play as important a part as hitherto. Today the weaknesses of a man have at least a fifty-fifty chance of never being shown the light of day—and when such an event does occur the result is, more often than not, of negligible importance in view of the immense complexity of the social system. No longer do parliaments, industries and other ventures (and there are few enough of these latter) hang so desperately upon the actions of the mere individual. Education, over-much philosophy and the great steps of transportation have voided the value of character to an infinitesimal degree.

Howsoever, appearances still "make the man", and the traits of human powers and weaknesses are still shown in many unapparent and obtuse ways. And although character no longer plays the important part of yore, we may still derive at least a certain amount of amusement and mental exercise from the pursuit of this interesting study.

University Traffic Problem

If it was not sufficiently stressed before, then the recent hard winter and terrific thaw must surely have brought to the notice of the responsible authorities the poor conditions of traffic regulation and direction within the University circle. We speak of the complicated system that requires a car to cover three times the adequate distance between almost any two buildings where lectures are held.

A road to connect the front campus with St. George has been mooted before this. Suggestions are common in regard to the control of the one-way arteries around Queen's Park and the back of the parliament buildings. Mention has even been made of some means of driving to the Economics Building without the loss of fifteen minutes at present involved in the complicated procedure of reaching there, say from any of the S.P.S. or Medical group.

Really, in this day and era of the automobile, when even University undergraduates drive to their daily work, the facilities provided for them are remarkably poor. There is not even adequate parking space to handle the present contingent of cars that make their daily appearance outside the lecture halls. And as to those poor drivers that live in residences or fraternities in the neighbourhood—their cars either clutter up the streets at night or are illegally parked in spaces allotted to the staff. Great care is taken of the latter body. Almost every faculty has its parking space for staff cars. The students also merit consideration.

Life comes before literature, as the material always comes before the work.—Phillips Brooks.

The previously mentioned journalist with a yen for debating was not entirely off his reportorial guard during the recent invasion of Montreal. After reading the rather feeble "agony columns" of the local papers for many years he decided that a personal column which is really personal, is news, and as such should be clipped from the Montreal Herold and passed along for the benefit of readers in this quarter.

"WOULD THE YOUNG LADY who so graciously accepted peanuts from a fellow onlooker at Sunday's hockey game and then got lost in the crowd care to get better acquainted? If so, will she please acknowledge here. More peanuts in both pockets. Box 759."

"O.M.M.—Where were you on the night of the 7th—LETTY G." Sounds more like Frank Regan. "RAWDON—Have girls on New Year's Eve Skating Party, forgotten evening get-together promised boys—GRAY BEARD & CO."

Yeah, They don't like your Co., and were just pulling your beard.

"IRENE—Three days off. Windsor lounge, 6 p.m. tonight—N.N., Guelph." So that's where you spend your weekends on these Montreal excursions.

One we can't vouch for because we haven't seen the clipping ourself, but one which the boys swear they read in the Moral Star, goes something like this:

"Will man in Buick who has been picking up advertiser's wife on corner of _____ and _____ kindly desist or _____"

Another from the Herald. "VESTIG—Fed up, leave them alone. He'll get tired.—T.L.O."

And so will you if we keep this up too long,—but we won't stop before we give you the prize collection of the bunch:

"TO ONE AND ALL — Thanks boys the response was tops—Therese."

Hml —The Yorker.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Alliance Francaise

The three comedies chosen by the Alliance Francaise delighted their packed house last night. The first, a farce, featured an adorable song by three little beggars, including Doris Sheil, Jessie Gillespie and Solange Rochereau. The trio departed, separately, stiff corpses to be dumped in a waterhole, and though had been most sympathetic we were much amused.

The Carriage of the Blessed Sacrament seemed rather long but was sustained by the consistently good performance of Gontrand Rochereau, Margaret Eaton was quite convincing as the actress of many loves but we thought the bishop almost too young to have reached his high ecclesiastical rank through piety alone.

The last play was perhaps the best received as it was glorious comedy, expertly acted and produced. Mr. Dixon Wagner merits a bouquet for his Albert as does George Assie, a swell Tojo. Mr. Walters and Mr. Phene were their usual selves, meaning that as a bit of froth, A Lower Meuble finished off the fine program.

CHESS TOURNAMENT

After losing in the first round, R. B. Hayes carried all before him in the succeeding rounds to win the fortieth chess championship tournament of the University of Toronto with the fine score of 6-1. This is the second major triumph for the new champion, who won the Minor tournament held at the Canadian National Exhibition in September, 1934.

The human race has grown a full two inches in average height during the last century.—Yale Daily News.

Dear Dr. Cody:

Through an article in the newspaper I obtained your address.

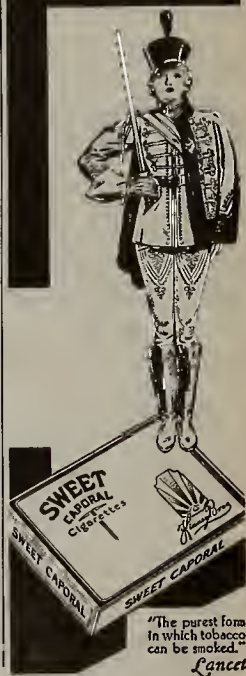

I am a stamp collector and I thought I may be able, through your office, to make contact with one or more Canadian stamp collectors. I would like to exchange U.S. stamps and stamps of other countries as well, for stamps of Canada, Newfoundland, and other countries.

Perhaps there are philatelists among your students who would be glad to exchange. I am especially interested in Canadian stamps next after those of U.S. and would appreciate the regular issues, Air post, special delivery, commemoratives, postage due, customs duty war tax, excise, electric inspection, bill stamps, postal note, pairs, strips and blocks, and stamped envelope stamps cut like samples herewith enclosed.

This is quite a philatelic centre and if there should be several students that are collectors they might go together and send selections and want lists of what they would like and between myself and other collectors we may be able to return what they would like. A friend of mine has been doing that with

Conway Wins Two

FORREST TAKES TWO MILE

Varsity track team fulfilled Coach Phillips' prophecy when they defeated the well known Achilles track club last night, winning five firsts in nine events and garnering 46 points to give them a narrow margin over the visitors of 40.

Achilles missed the services of Sam Richardson, the School-boy Wonder, but Varsity was also hampered without the services of Ashenurst, the S.P.S. ace sprinter who is out with an injured ankle, and Bill Kibblewhite, who was out due to academic pressure. The track was fast, especially in the short distances, with Fee of Achilles, taking the fifty and hundred yard sprints. Stan Harris added another win to his credit when he scraped through to win over Bill Christie, the far-famed sprinter of the visiting team. Conway, one of Varsity's Olympic hopes, came through without much trouble to take the quarter and half in excellent time, although his team-mate, Delaney, ran a nice race to finish right in behind him in the eight-eighty, and McMahon made Conway step out in the quarter to gain a win.

In the mile Watson for Achilles (the boy from Creemore) chased Forrest around the oval for eleven laps and then stepped away at the finish to win in 4:42. Haight of Trinity stayed in to finish third in a nice race for the first year man. Forrest came back to win the two miles in 10:17 a little later, with the pace-setting Huether finishing second.

The Achilles boys surpassed Varsity in the medley relay, Watson giving them a lead at the start, but Sandlos, first year Victoria, skimmed the bar at 5 ft. 8 ins. in the high jump to give the University a few more points. Next week the tracksters are holding a meet with the Tri-Y Club, which will complete their competitions with smaller clubs, and give them the finishing touches to go into the bigger meets at Hamilton and Maple Leaf Gardens next month.

Results—

100 yards: 1. Fee, Achilles; 2. Hawkins, Achilles; 3. Harris, Varsity. Time 10.8.

KNOX BASKETEERS DEFEAT WYCLIFFE

Anglicans Yield to a Six Point Margin After See-Saw Struggle

In a hotly contested fray yesterday afternoon in Hart House gym the Knox tossers daubed a six point defeat on the Wycliffe quint, 29-23. It was a tussle marked by the comparatively even strength and scoring punch of both clubs. Victory at no time was assured for either squad until the last few minutes of play when Knox put forth the rally that gained the verdict.

The first half saw both teams battling right from the opening whistle. Knox set to work and in the first few minutes rang up a lead of nine points on single baskets by Weir and Neilson, a pair of scores by Shaw, and a free shot by Smith. Wycliffe came back with eleven points, a rally to which Ruck contributed a couple of hoops and a duo of charities. Fairweather added two baskets and a foul shot to complete Wycliffe's scoring for the first half. With Weir's fielder, the half ended, making the score 11-11.

In the final half Knox added 18 counters. This offensive attack was featured for the most part by Neilson, with a trio of baskets and by Smith and Clements, who each garnered a pair of scores. Brown and Weir each sank set shots to aid the "brethren" and raise the visitors' total to 29. The losers ran up their points to 23 on a quartet of "swishes" by Ruck and a couple of scores by Fairweather.

Neilson, Weir and Smith paced the victors with 19 counters between them. Ruck and Fairweather did all the losers' scoring, the former gathering 14 points, the latter 9.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Frank Lamberti

The wheel of fortune spins and stops—over the week-end the intercollegiate sports calendar will have practically drawn to an end as the intermediate B. W. and F. invade London and the intermediate and senior intercollegiate swimming team is at home with the Big Blue natators defending their laurels. On Friday night the league leading Tri-coloured quintet meet Varsity and this game promises to be the equal of any of the traditionally hard fought battles with Varsity out to avenge the defeat on the Kingston floor.

On Saturday evening the Big Blue cagers will invade West End Y to meet the Y cagers in the last game of the senior series and with four points hanging on the balance the Varsity squad will find a battle on their hands playing two games in two days, with so much depending on their chances of keeping within the charmed circle of intercollegiate senior competition.

From Montreal it seems that everything international must emanate, as a proposed International "Amateur" Hockey Association is being proposed as an added attraction in Canada's national pastime. With several teams on the other side already having ineligible players and barred from competing with C.A.H.A. teams, this international loop will not be under the jurisdiction of the C.A.H.A.

It seems only a few years ago when a semi-pro hockey team representing Toronto in the international loop met with dismal failure and the formation of an international amateur section in Toronto will likely meet a like fate with so many hockey attractions. "Begorri it ain't cricket."

Through driving winds and blinding snow furries the interfaculty hockey series has carried on in quest for the Jennings Cup honours and with the semi-finals in our midst the boys will move to a haven of quiet at Varsity Arena and will attempt to solve the interfaculty hockey question.

The sports staff on The Varsity from time to time have some exponent in the realm of sport, and the feat of Al Forrest deserves honourable mention as he won the two mile run last evening after losing in the one mile distance. Last week Al gained first place in the one mile run at Broadview.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

The St. Hilda's swimming meet went off very successfully last night. About a dozen girls entered, the majority of them going in most of the events. The Ord sisters, Clara and Si, starred, with Vi taking the individual honours with eighteen points. Clara and Amy Britton tied for second place with fifteen points apiece, Amy winning both the plunge and the ornamental swimming. According to Billy Cochrane, Betty Edwards' free style record of thirty seconds for sixty yards may be broken by the younger Ord in the interfaculty meet since Clara made it in thirty-one seconds Tuesday night, even though she went crooked in her course.

The following girls will represent Varsity in the swimming meet at Hamilton tonight, Phil Haslem, Clara Ord, Molly Stevens, Vi Ord, Peggy Bailey, Midge Murphy and with this array of talent this university should do big things. For the girls' information, we announce here that they are to meet at 5:30 this afternoon in the Arrow Bus office, at Bay and Bloor. This is the first time that a girls' intercollegiate meet of any sort has been attempted and it is surprising that it has not been done before, considering that it is an ideal girls' sport, and that enthusiasm for it is very keen around here. Here's wishing the girls luck tonight.

Quebec, the Actione Liberal National. Expressing his sympathy for this new political party in Quebec, Major Power urged that a similar spirit spread throughout the dominion and create a fusion of youth in Canada which will lead to a greater nation.

"Never have the French-Canadians been so race-conscious as they are today," he said. "A new nationalism has found expression in Quebec through the Actione Liberal National. It has been a spontaneous reaction on the part of the youth against holding of the key positions in the province by non-French business and professional men."

Major Power claimed that if the French-Canadian be treated as a partner in the dominion "he will not endeavour to impose his race, his mentality or his culture on you. But treat him as a helot and not statesman in the dominion will be able to solve the ensuing problem."

The undergraduate speakers on the paper gave speeches of unusually high calibre. Bernie Shaffer, of University College, first speaker for the affirmative, stated his belief in the value of French culture. He contended that the French in Quebec could have two loyalties—they could share in French tradition and yet be Canadians. "Quebec contributes a distinct cultural personality in the dominion," he commented. Leon Smart of McGill University spoke first for the negative and received a tremendous ovation when he stood up to speak, as did his colleague C. Gross, also of McGill.

Smart brought the church question to the forefront. He emphasized the dominant position of the Roman Catholic church in preventing the French-Canadians in Quebec from working harmoniously with the rest of the dominion. "The church dominates the heart and soul of every Catholic in Quebec," he said. Mentioning the problems of law in Quebec, he felt they were inconsistent with any nationalistic trend in Canada.

Refuting his colleague from McGill, Clarence Gross eloquently claimed that the Catholic church had been an asset to Quebec in "keeping its citizens sober, clear thinking and healthy-minded."

A. D. Harris of St. Michael's College gave a sober, reasoned speech for the negative, claiming that nationalism is an "intolerant, prejudiced and ignorant religion which is not conducive to human betterment." Nationalism in Quebec is patriotic snobbery, he said.

The following were elected to the debates committee at the debate last night: W. E. Curry, II Victoria; D. G. Eisen, I U.C.; G. A. Fallis, III Victoria; A. R. Hicks, II Trinity; A. A. Shaberman, II U.C.; E. M. Shortt, III U.C.; G. W. Stoddart, I U.C.

SWIMMING TONIGHT

Tonight a strong Varsity women's swimming team will compete with mermaids from McMaster University and Macdonald Hall, Guelph, in the municipal pool in Hamilton. This is the first time that such a meet has been arranged and it is hoped that it will set a precedent.

Varsity is fortunate in having Phil Haslem, who swam on the British Empire team in 1934, to represent the Blue and White.

note. The cup mute and straight mute deaden the sound, and the solo-tone has the effect of strengthening natural notes (that includes sharps or flats), for solo work.

This is of course comparatively simple, but beyond this things get involved. There is the Derby, the plumber's friend, the cemo-yay, and the wow-wow. These latter two are doubtless examples of onomatopoeia. The idea of the Derby is to make the tones bell better; the idea of the plumber's friend to facilitate "lip-trill". The cemo-yay is even more complicated. With it one can imitate anything from a squawling brat, to a cat on the back fence talking long distance to a friend in Mimico. The wow-wow enables one to make a noise like a bow-wow complaining to the moon.

Then there is the maple resonator and the harmonic resonator,—but this has gone far enough.

These facts, however, are well worth remembering, and once remembered, will be retained if you lip till you're a hundred.

members of parliament.

The society has elected H. N. Potter by acclamation and the president-elect expressed his gratitude in fervent phrases. The high spot of the afternoon was the election speech by Potter, who said that as long as he had gone to the trouble to prepare the speech, he might as well give it. The "speech" was a pantomime concerning the activities of a business man and a red plush chair.

One candidate for vice-president told the engineers that if he were elected, "You will get what is coming to you." Not knowing how he meant this, many present said heartfelt prayers.

A candidate for treasurer gave as his reason for wanting to be elected: "In the next year I will need six suits, ten overcoats and forty-five cases of beer."

The men running for secretary spoke impressively. One said that if elected there would be free beer for all, and if there was anything else the boys wanted, to see him. Another exclaimed, "I hope to h— you can remember my name on Friday." The speech by the third candidate was the shortest of the afternoon. He spoke two words, then launched into his joke.

Due to the short time allotted to candidates running for the less important offices, these unfortunate fellows were unable to quiet the audience before their time was up, so many of the listeners missed the point of their jokes.

However, one leather-lunged orator managed to shout down the whole room full of engineers. He got loud and prolonged applause. After a few more speeches the meeting was adjourned, and the engineers dispersed to discuss among themselves the "relative merits" of the candidates.

C. Gross is in his fourth year of the Economics and Political Science course. He is president of a fraternity. Paradoxically enough, he is heartily in favor of the abolition of fraternities; he feels that they have outlived their usefulness, and that they tend to break up a complete University spirit. Asked about his ambiguous position, he replied, "Well, you can't blame a fellow for making a mistake in his first year, and then changing his views, can you?" Which about tells the whole story.

WHO OWNS OFFICIAL COLLEGE SONGS? That is a question bothering students at the University of Texas. Apparently a graduate secured the copyright on the Longhorn's special march, "The Eyes of Texas", away back in 1919 and now the University is trying to establish a prior right or else have the copyright waived.

One suggestion is that, since the song appeared in the 1918 year book, which was registered, the tune is thereby reserved to the University. Printed copies dating back to 1903 have been unearthed.

Clayton Bush and Edwin Silcox, who wrote "The Blue and White", turned over the copyright to the Student's Administrative Council, so that such a mix-up can't happen here. It will be remembered that Rudy Vallee once asked for permission to use it and was turned down. However, there is no ruling which says that an outside band can't obtain this permission. Fred Waring played it when he appeared here.

There seems to be something strange about a law which makes it possible for someone to reserve a piece of music for his own profit when he had no share in the writing.

BASKETBALL PLAYERS on the Pacific Coast believe in using originality. In a game against the University of British Columbia, a member of the Globe-Trotters team waved the ball back and forth before an opposing player's eyes and then handed the ball to that player. Supposedly a victim of hypnosis, the Ubysey man gracefully accepted the ball, and then dazedly put it down on the floor.

A SECOND YEAR SCHOOLMAN recently began to worry about having neglected the cultural side of college life, and decided to do something about it. Having been told that there was a public library on St. George Street opposite the Forestry Building, he wandered over and started looking for books. His surprise at not obtaining any and being forcibly ejected, was surpassed only by his chagrin at learning that he had been in the Children's Book House.

"RESTORE THE PUMP IN THE SQUARE" is the cry of a group of Harvard Alumni. In the early days, the pump was the only water supply on the campus, and students, if they washed, obtained the water from the pump and carried it indoors in buckets. The pump had a tin cup attached, and was frequently denounced as unsanitary, but was not removed by officialdom since a student riot in 1901 beat the officials to the job.

At present, a drink of water cannot be obtained anywhere in the campus yard.

"CAUTION MONEY" at the University of British Columbia will be turned over to the Union Building fund, if the students so desire. A committee has been formed to raise money by every available method. They have been holding dime-dances at noon hours but are troubled by crashers. It seems the lowest of low tricks to evade a fee charged for such a purpose.

The Union Building is to be modelled on Hart House and pictures of Hart House are used extensively in advertising the plan. The main difference is that men and women will both use the building.

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Certainly a woman's place is in the home or rather there would not be a home if it were not for woman and even the all-creative machine age has yet to find her substitute.

Every normal girl has as her goal in life, and I might add, as her right, a home, a husband and children. This is the highest and worthiest aim for any girl, but if this position is impossible, she must obey the old law of self-preservation and find herself another. Naturally she will not give up her first goal without a struggle, but failing that she must content herself with a second, which will probably be a career. There are those, of course, who stay at home and care for their aged parents or bring up their married sister's children, but these occupations are often impossible or more often undesirable.

The chief reason for woman's failure to devote herself to a home and husband, may be called a question of supply and demand. There is an over-supply of women for the number of men vis-a-vis. (Please note, gentlemen, it is not any mysterious desirability about you which causes female pursuit, but rather your scarcity of numbers) so you see, those females who are not fortunate enough to secure a mate, must put themselves in the and go out to earn a living. They may take jobs away from men and usurp their professional fields, but I assure you that in the case of a normal woman this is not done from choice but rather from necessity.

Perhaps the only solution to this problem would be the installation of the old institution, polygamy. If this were to take place, I am quite certain business and professional fields would be left ungrudgingly to the males.

But parents with the means feel that it is up to them to equip their daughters so that if need be, in the uncertain future, they will be able to look after themselves and not leave them with marriage as their only hope. Perhaps they send them to train for a nurse, to university or to a business school not in order that they may become wage-earners but that they may look toward the future with a feeling of security, whether they are lucky enough to have a home and husband or not.

So remember boys, when you give a seat to a working girl in the street-car, you are not giving it to one who is trying to take your jobs from you, but from one who has to pound a typewriter all day because Mother Nature did not provide enough of you to go around.

U.C. ARTS BALL AT KING EDWARD

Norman Harris and Novelty Orchestra to Supply Music

ALUMNI GUESTS EXPECTED

Academic worries will be temporarily forgotten tonight as some 400 undergraduates respond to the strains of Norman Harris and his novelty orchestra at the University College Arts Ball. All plans have been successfully completed and the committee in charge have been well repaid for their efforts through the generous response of the students to the ticket sale.

The Crystal Ballroom of the King Edward Hotel has been transformed into a huge cabaret ballroom, Parisian style. Dancing will begin shortly after nine o'clock and at 11.30 p.m. the famous Arts Ball chicken supper will be served to all. Novelty features by Norman Harris, special dances, and unique arrangements of University College song hits are among the highlights of the evening.

Those who have lent their patronage to this long anticipated event include Mrs. H. J. Cody, Mrs. M. W. Wallace, Mrs. C. N. Cochrane and Miss M. B. Ferguson.

Some University College alumni both in the city and from out of town have signified their intention of being present also, many former executives of the U.C. Lit. will be present. At the head table will be members of the present executive of the Literary and Athletic Society, and their young ladies, together with the patronesses and their husbands. Other distinguished personages of the college will be guests at this table. The rest of the dancers will sit at their own individual tables arranged around the ballroom.

The committee in charge of the Arts Ball includes J. J. D. Brunke, A. G. Rankin, W. C. Smith and F. D. L. Stewart.

Are Myths

ASSOCIATION HELPFUL

Is the old-fashioned objection to co-education true today? Do the "boys make the girls tough, and the girls make the boys sentimental"? According to W. Sherwood Fox, president of the University of Western Ontario, this statement is flatly contradicted by actual results of co-education.

Three generations of co-education have shown that by interaction these qualities have so modified each other as to prepare young people to live more naturally the joint social life that men and women are expected to live in the world of human affairs that comes after college, he contends.

The origin of co-education on the American continent was due to the pressure of circumstances. The early colonists were forced to put their daughters on an equal footing with their sons in the single schoolhouse if the girls were to receive any sort of education whatsoever.

Dr. Fox believes that such statements as "Woman is man's intellectual inferior," or even "Woman's mind may be as good as man's but it is different" are outmoded. Women's colleges offer essentially the same curricula as men's colleges. The divergence in the courses elected by men and women is due to differences in vocational interest rather than to interests naturally due to sex.

"The conspicuous short-coming to co-education is its tendency to divert from higher academic aims, students of both sexes who have entered university with no definite interest in higher learning," says Dr. Fox.

Nevertheless, the close association afforded by college life is conducive to happy marriages between former students, claims Dr. Fox, since it gives the brides and grooms exceptional opportunity to know before marriage just whom they are going to marry.

WILMA STEVENSON IN PIAND RECITAL AT MUSIC GROUP

A series of variations on the theme "Mary had a little lamb," formed the first part of the program at the last Music Group of the year at Wymilwood yesterday. Played by Miss Wilma Stevenson, the variations included selections from both classical and modern composers: Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Chopin, Tschakowsky, MacDowell, Grieg, Debussy and Liszt. The same theme appeared in each selection, but was of course treated very differently by different composers.

Following the variations, Miss Stevenson played another group of short pieces by modern composers, among which were Debussy's Puella del Vaso and Clair de Lune, Ravel's Basque and Sad Birds, Lord Berners' Funeral March for a Statesman, and a short composition by a little-known English composer, Edwin Benbow, called "The Dripping Tap". The program concluded with a march and gavotte by a young Russian composer, and the well-known Ritual Fire Dance.

Reverend Canon Iddings Bell Tells of University Aims at St. Stephens

PASS COURSE SHUNNED

"At St. Stephen's we tried to introduce the British tutorial system into an American university," said the Rev. Canon Iddings Bell, formerly warden of St. Stephen's College, Columbia University, when speaking to The Varsity yesterday.

"We worked on the theory that the burden of work must be on the student. When a man reaches university he should be able to concentrate and work intensively in a fairly small field. Suppose a student chooses English History, he will have a series of lectures on the general subject and certain general books to read, but also, with the aid of his professor, who really becomes a tutor, he chooses a particular problem. When he comes to graduate he will write a general examination and also another one based on his particular field and set by a man who has never seen the student.

"To avoid a too narrow outlook a man who, say, was taking Greek, would be allowed to attend Nineteenth Century English Poetry lectures or any other he wished just for general interest."

"Although we did give a Pass degree and had a few men in that course their chief value to us was for their fees."

When asked about the result of his attempt, the Canon said, "Our men on going on to professional colleges proved the value of our method for they had learned how to work. But as one professor could only deal with ten or twelve students adequately our cost was the highest per capita in America and as a result of the depression we could not keep going."

Canon Bell is in Toronto over the week-end to hold a Lenten Mission in Massey Hall. He will deliver a series of four sermons, one each night, in which the aim will be to bring the Christian face to face with the modern world.

CLASS IN JOURNALISM APPROVED BY SENATE

Summer Evening Course of Six Weeks' Duration Begins
June 15th

President H. J. Cody announces that the Senate of the University of Toronto has approved of the proposal made by the Director of University Extension that a summer course in Journalism be offered for six weeks commencing June 15th. It is likely that lectures will be given in the evenings so that those engaged in business may be able to take advantage of this opportunity. The instructor will be Vernon McKenzie, M.A., a graduate of the University of Toronto, a former editor of MacLean's Magazine, and now Dean of the School of Journalism, University of Washington, Seattle. Dean McKenzie has been so remarkably successful in his present post that advantage has been taken of his stay in Toronto during the coming summer to arrange a course. Dean McKenzie has recently published a book entitled, "These Stories Went to Market", which contains a great deal of information on writing the short story.

Whoever wins in the School elections being held today, the engineers may look forward to a year of "stable" government, if the signs displayed in the rugged, ruddy, ruin that is the little red schoolhouse are any indication.

One candidate, believing himself to be the pick of the lot, emphasizes his opinion with a real, old-fashioned pickaxe attached to a sign. The implement in question is rumoured to be a souvenir of a club trip to Buffalo not long ago. Another, believing that his supporters should not tire of working in the good cause, illustrates his point with automobile tires suspended from the ceiling at strategic intervals. Probably the most daring of the lot is the

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR TO BE GUEST SPEAKER AT LITERARY BANQUET

The last meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society will be held next Tuesday, March 3, it was announced last night by the executive.

The meeting will be preceded by the graduation banquet to be held in Hart House at which Lieutenant-Governor Bruce will be the guest speaker.

Nominations for the Lit. executive for 1936-37 will be received at the meeting following the banquet. Nominations for year executive will also be received. It is rumoured that several dark horses will run for the presidency of the Lit. for next year.

The final debate for the Robins trophy, emblematic of debating supremacy in University College, will be held at the Tuesday meeting of the society.

Political Science Club

A special meeting of the Political Science Club of the University will be held next Tuesday, March 3 in the Women's Union, Jack Graham, president of the club, announced last night. Prof. Macintosh, head of the department of political science at Queen's University, will be guest speaker and will probably address the club on the problems of foreign exchange in Europe or some such related topic.

Although the meeting clashed with the graduation banquet for University College seniors, it is anticipated that the club meeting will not convene until the dinner is over in Hart House.

$5,000 GRANT ENDS

Victoria College browsing room, the fame of which has spread far and wide in the short years of its existence, this year is faced with a complete lack of funds, it was learned yesterday.

Three years ago the Carnegie Foundation gave grants to various colleges for the establishment of libraries. The grant was of $5,000 a year for three years. Victoria College reserved a part of that fund to establish a room in which could be found books which had no particular bearing on courses in the University. Their purpose was to stimulate general reading interest among undergraduates.

Since its inception a short time ago, the browsing room which is the result, has earned for itself almost dominion-wide fame. On its shelves are to be found both books long famed and modern fiction which the average reader will find difficulty in obtaining in most libraries. Ranged in close proximity to Hardy's Tess is found The Enormous Room, of E. E. Cummings, the American writer of almost hieroglyphic verse. Translations of novels from foreign languages, particularly those

Has Reel Campus-Wide Representation

MAKES DEBUT MARCH 9

The most representative cast to appear on Hart House stage for many a year will be on hand when The Inspector-General is presented on March 9 and 10. Practically every college and every faculty on the campus will have at least one member on the cast.

University College has the best representation with the director and six members of the cast. Trinity is a close second with five cast members, followed by Victoria and Medicine with two, and S.P.S., St. Michael's, School of Graduate Studies, O.C.E., Architecture and School of Nursing with one each.

The part of the Inspector General will be played by Gordon Robertson, III U.C., while that of Marya will be taken by Anne Fromer, II U.C.E. Bromberg, School of Graduate Studies, will be seen as the corrupt Mayor, and L. J. Grabel of II U.C. will act as his wife.

The role of the Health Commissioner will be in the capable hands of W. B. Reid, II Trinity; F. K. Venerables will act as the Chief of Police, while John Russell of O.C.E. will be seen as the Judge. John Watson, I U.C., as School Superintendent and M. McKinnon of II Victoria, as the Postmaster, complete the panel of corrupt and delightfully dumb officials.

Two first year students are supplying a wealth of humour in their clownish parts. They are John Williams of U.C. as Dobchinsky and Graham Sanderson of Medicine as Bobchinsky. Anderson

Vic Browsing Room Merits Support

Shortly after we came to university we discovered that Victoria College had an institution called the Browsing Room, which is the finest thing of its kind we have ever seen. Since the time of that discovery we have spent a good many hours there, and in our room-reading books from those shelves. And we have never ceased to marvel at the completeness of that collection. We are not alone in our opinion of the Browsing Room. In the short years of its existence it has acquired for itself a most enviable name. When you come to a certain stage of reading a whole new field seems to open up before you. The books you will find in the Browsing Room cover that field most completely. They are not necessarily great books, but they are books you will want to read, and will enjoy.

In the news columns of today's Varsity appears a story telling of the financial difficulties which will face the continuance of the Browsing Room next year. The grant upon which it was founded has come to an end, and the regular library appropriation is not large enough to permit money from it to be turned over to the Browsing Room. Unless some patron comes to the rescue, Victoria College is faced with the necessity of letting the collection come to a standstill. And a standstill will mean that it will fall into disuse.

It would be disastrous to have such a thing happen. When the idea of the Browsing Room was first considered, there was great opposition from many of the faculty. It was thought that no such amount of money as would be necessary should be given to a library which would have practically no connection with any course offered in the college. Since that time we understand, though not officially, that continual opposition has been made to some of the books on the shelves. The die-hard of the faculty have put many difficulties in the way of those who wanted to have a thoroughly modern selection of literature. However, the room contains numerous volumes, access to which is usually difficult. Not that they have salacious literature there—but books such as those of E. E. Cummings and others, that go quickly out of print, books that are interesting only to those who have a genuine interest in literature.

Besides being of value to undergraduates the Browsing Room serves many graduates in a unique way. Victoria seems to have far more than its share of teachers. These often find themselves in rural hamlets, where books are impossible to obtain from public libraries. Libraries in large centres refuse to send them books from their shelves. To these people the Browsing Room is always ready to serve. We have been told of one graduate as far away as Cape Breton to whom books are regularly sent.

The work of Miss Ray, under whose care the Browsing Room has grown to its present importance, cannot be stressed too strongly. It is a great pity that her efforts seem doomed to come to nothing. Five hundred dollars a year would be enough with which to carry on. Surely some plan could be arranged to raise that money. We feel sure that there are enough graduates of Victoria College who would be willing to come to its support and keep this valuable library in the important place it now holds.

Professors Contribute To Student Lateness

A short time ago there appeared in these columns an editorial voicing a plea calculated to move our readers to show courtesy to their professors by endeavouring to arrive at lectures on time.

However we feel that this plea represented only one side of the question. The Faculty cannot hope to win the co-operation of the student body unless they extend a similar degree of courtesy to the students. The fact that professors refuse to stop their lectures when the hour is up makes it almost impossible for students from colleges situated at some distance from the scene of their next lecture to arrive there before the lecture starts.

Although we tremble to say it, there seems to be a liberal sprinkling of lecturers who are so interested in propounding the miscellaneous facts which they have laboriously gathered together during the time they spent in winning an M.A. or a Ph.D., that they lose all thought of the fact that their restless listeners have other lectures to attend.

Perhaps this failing is due to a misdirected zeal, which actually has our best interests at heart. It is also quite conceivable that the proverbial absent-mindedness of professors is an explanation of this complete disregard for the passing of time.

In our experience at least we have found that rather than inconvenience a professor by walking into a lecture five or ten minutes late, we prefer to stay away altogether. If this be the attitude of any great number of students, it would seem that the egotism or inadvertent carelessness of some members of the faculty detracts from the efficiency and usefulness of other lecturers.

The type of lecturer that is most objectionable is the one who uses the same notes each year; notes which he has pedantically divided into a schedule of a certain number of lectures, which must be rigidly adhered to, regardless of whether or not they can be delivered in the space of an hour.

Whatever be the cause, we are optimistic enough to think that if the offending professors would only realize that the "lates" who interrupt their lectures will do the same for the professor who may be lecturing in a building anywhere from a hundred yards to a quarter of a mile distant, they would try to conclude their discourse on the hour, and as a consequence make the day a better one for all concerned.

Interest Increases In Aquatic Sports

With the finish of the Intercollegiate Swimming Meets in Hart House Pool next Saturday, the Aquatic season in the University of Toronto, as far as competition is concerned, draws to a close.

This phase of athletic activity, which is centred around the Swimming Pool in Hart House, the finest equipment of its kind in Canada, has had an amazingly successful year. There have been more students making consistent use of the pool than of any other equipment around the House.

Mr. W. Winterburn, swimming instructor for the University, reports that he has had 208 pupils taking lessons in his "Learn to Swim" classes every week of the session. There have been 181 pupils enrolled in his life-saving classes, placed under the leadership of 12 undergraduate instructors.

The recent Interfaculty Waterpolo series, won by the Senior S.P.S. team, had an entry of nine teams or about 75 players!

This branch of athletics is one well-deserving of the support it has engendered during the past season. Medical authorities assert without exception that swimming is the one form of exercise contributing to the uniform development of all the muscles of the body. Waterpolo is without a doubt the most strenuous sport in existence, requiring extraordinary lung power and endurance.

Participation in these sports is all to the good. It is to be hoped that next year will be marked by an even more enthusiastic support of them, both from spectators and participants.

The rose has the greatest commercial value of all flowers. Besides its high horticultural value, it produces attar of roses, an expensive perfume, one ounce requiring forty thousand flowers.

Life seems so simple, when one is the least observant. Problems arise, vital, pressing and apparently insoluble problems, and are publicized in the daily press; and then it happens so often that different problems appearing in print about the same time suggest solutions for each other.

Three highly interesting letters have appeared in the columns of The Varsity within recent weeks. Surely no more simple touching appeal ever fell upon sympathetic ears than that contained in the letter which a British Columbia lumberjack addressed to the local Date Bureau, requesting a wife. Then, just yesterday, Dr. H. J. Cody, Principal, The University of Toronto (largest in the British Empire) Toronto, Ont., Canada, received a nice little note from a lad down in the States who expressed a friendly desire to trade stamps with the local students, or even the President himself, for that matter. And immediately below this epistle in Thursday's "Correspondence" column, was the effort of one who signed herself The Ladies' Viewpoint, to clarify the eternal fangangle regarding male and (Continued on Page 4)

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Margaret Eaton Hall

The production of Clifford Odets' "Waiting for Lefty" at the Margaret Eaton Hall revives the much debated relation of propaganda and art. But it does more, there is the author's use of a technique new to the conventional theatre; there is the director's forceful presentation of the play; there is some very capable acting. These elements combine to give not only entertainment, they give us something for discussion.

Mr. Odets' theme is "Workers Unite!" He presents it with an appeal that is at once logical and emotional. There is a snappy jerkiness in which he flashes on each episode. Each scene is one point in his argument, the whole is a finished brief for his case.

But the analogy is not that of the lawyer, it is of the soap box orator. There is verve and raciness achieved by the use of the vernacular, the choice of striking incidents from the lives of half a dozen men.

The acting and direction in this joint production of the Theatre of Action and the Student League keep pace with (Continued on Page 4)

BLUE CAGERS TO FACE THREAT OF TRICOLOUR TO-NIGHT

Tough Struggle Forecast With Strong Queen's Squad

Homesters Determined to Avenge Recent Defeat in Kingston

SECONOS MEET McMASTER

The eagers from the Kingston college will be in town tonight for the all-important game with Warren Stevens' twine-tippers.

Queen's are threatening an inter-collegiate basketball title for the first time in six years and are already dangerously close to their objective. They only need to win one more game, against Varsity here tonight or against Western tomorrow night, to clinch first place.

The Blue basketballers will therefore be travelling all out to not only win the game but to win it so decisively and ruggedly that the Tricolour will go on to London a beaten and broken team that the Mustangs will be able to handle and so put Varsity into a tie with Queen's for the league leadership.

The Varsity crew are right "on" these days and should be able to avenge their defeat in Kingston. A new star has appeared in the person of Bedford, who positively scintillated against Danforth last Tuesday night. Connelly and Marks are still the best in the game and Gold is back to his old-time form. If the Blues can follow their checks as closely as they did against Western a week ago, victory is assured for the boys have "hot hands" now.

Mac McCutcheon's champion II's meet McMaster in the curtain-raiser tonight. The intermediates have their title clinched, but they will be fighting for a win to close the season with not a single loss in two years of inter-collegiate competition. Their record is 17 wins in the last 18 games.

On Saturday night, the seniors play one of those "4-point" games against West End Y. The Blues are well in the lead in the Big Four race but need a victory tomorrow to clinch first place. They probably will.

JR. S.P.S. SCORE WIN OVER U.C. BASEBALLERS

Jr. S.P.S. managed to eke out an unexpected victory over their U.C. opponents yesterday afternoon in the Hart House main gym. Although U.C. started off with a bang, they slowed down considerably in the last two innings of the game to give the Science team plenty of opportunity to get the lead. The last inning of the game, which only the first part was played, clipped any hopes for a U.C. victory when the first three men were put out in 4 minutes of play. Sr. S.P.S. was leading 11-10 and didn't take their last inning. Self, Brisco, Lindsay, Holt and Ball each scored 2 points for U.C.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crocker

Chiefly because there has been very little about which to write at this late date in the year you have been told time after time of the two very fine basketball games and the swimming meet which are to take place at Hart House today and tomorrow and of the gymnastic meet at London. Therefore we'll dismiss those little items and talk of other things.

As the interfaculty season draws to a close the inevitable tie-ups and postponed games are now beginning to crop up. It would be very advisable for managers of all teams which are still in search for the various trophies to keep their eyes open for any sudden games. In an effort to run all schedules to a close with as much dispatch as possible games will be scheduled on very short notice and the managers should co-operate fully by trying to fill all their tilts on no matter what short notice.

As a last word we would like to say that we would like to see a sizable crowd out for tonight's eage tilts. For one thing it is a Queen's-Varsity engagement. For another, unless something queer happens up in London (and as Warren Stevens can testify, it has happened before) this will be the last intercollegiate fixture for Joe Connelly and Hughie Marks as the Tricolours must lose two games this week-end to create a tie and a playoff. The two lads in question are no strangers to Blue and White fans and have given Varsity supporters many exciting moments. As a parting gesture the fans really should turn out to witness the last performance in Varsity togs of these two modest lads from St. Mike's.

And then there is another reason for expecting a large crowd. With foot-balls of note like Sunshine and Edwards of Kingston and Marks and Connelly of Varsity trotting around we wouldn't be at all surprised if, for example, Sunshine would suddenly drop to a crouch and lunge at the flying heels of Connelly. If you get the idea you'll realize that tonight's game has possibilities.

SWIMMING MEET TOMORROW NIGHT

McGill, McMaster and U. of T. to Clash for Dominion Championship

SECONOS IN AFTERNOON

Hart House swimming pool will be the theatre of action in the staging of Canada's annual Intercollegiate Swimming Meet tomorrow. What is best in swimming circles at McGill, Western, McMaster and O.A.C. will be here to engage in the tactical struggle with the Varsity splashers.

Two meets are slated for Saturday, the intermediate in the afternoon and the all-important senior classic in the evening.

McGill, McMaster and Varsity will fight it out in the latter grind. There are no definite favourites but advance dope has it that McGill and Varsity will be at each other's throats in every event on the card.

The Blue and White has held the intercollegiate championship for the past year, much of their hope for holding it for another term will rest with the efforts of Winston McCarty, all-round star of the Varsity squad who will be doing his bit in the 1-4 mile and 200 yard breast-stroke events.

The three Bourne brothers will furnish the most spectacular competition against Varsity. Munroe Bourne vs. W. McCarty in the 400 free style will be a race well worth watching.

The McMaster outfit cannot be overlooked. Men like Prentice, Ivaniski and McWhirter are a formidable factor in any event.

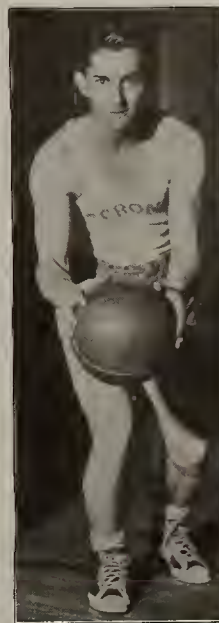

Coach Roy Lowndes has requested that all the intermediates be on hand for the heats at 10.45 a.m. The following seniors are to report at 11.30: Otter, Bickle, Dilworth, Clark, Earl, and Scott.

Here are the line-ups for the two teams:
SENIOR: Dilworth, McCarty, Earl, Wood, Otter, Bickle, Main, Scott and Clark.

INTERMEDIATE: Gardiner, Tedman, Vipond, Stratton, Trow, Summers, Bull, Hampson, Hicks, Kirby.

Need Student Support For Symphony Concert

"We are counting on the support of the students to make this concert a complete success," stated Mr. Jack Weinzwieg, Director of the Symphony Orchestra, in referring to the concert scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, in an interview yesterday.

The University Symphony Orchestra is as yet in its infancy, having been attempted only last year for the first time. "It takes a period of years for the complete development of such a project," Mr. Weinzwieg said.

The orchestra is composed of members who have had previous experience in high school orchestras, for the most part, and typifies the symphony, in that it is largely populated with violins.

In a University this size we should be able to have an eighty-five piece orchestra without any trouble, Mr. Weinzwieg said. There will be a guest pianist, Miss Winifred Noy, whose program will include selections by Chopin and Bach.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

It was amply demonstrated last night up in Hamilton that swimming should be a major sport among the girls, and that intercollegiate meets should be a regular feature. The Varsity co-eds who competed against McMaster and Macdonald Hall scored every point they possibly could, winning both first and second places in all four races, and taking the relay by a large margin.

The meet was held in the beautiful Municipal Pool, and quite a gallery turned out. As well as the competitive events, there were several exhibition events. Molly Stevens and Phil Haslem of Varsity demonstrated ornamental swimming, and were loudly applauded. David McWhirter, former senior intercollegiate champion, and Charles Corcoran, put on a very good diving exhibition, and two boys from the Dunbar Reformatory College supplied the comedy relief.

The meet was highly successful also from the point of view of developing inter-collegiate spirit. The McMaster girls were very friendly and the Varsity swimmers were welcomed in a very enthusiastic fashion, which they appreciated very much.

We also heard that the McMaster basketball team swamped the Queen's team 47-5, in the game played Monday night in Hamilton. Kay Boyd and Ruth Fishleigh were the only two Queen's forwards able to score, and in contrast the McMaster basketballers had a field day.

Government Upheld In U.C. Parliament

The resolution "Resolved that this House favours absolute support of Great Britain in the event of war," was upheld in the U.C. Parliamentary Club yesterday by a majority of one.

The Right Honourable Jack Minsky opened the debate for the Government. He appealed to the members to lay aside party opinion and as individuals to face the issue of participation in the next war. "We have no alternative but to aid our Mother Country," he said, "because of our economic and political dependency on her. A declaration of neutrality in the event of war will blast us into destruction."

Honourable Mr. McCrae, speaking for the Opposition, replied, "While Britain seals her doom in a war of suicide Canada can develop her internal resources, make possible her future advance, keep out of debt, educate the masses to the horror of war by pointing across the ocean, and let the munition makers starve, as they rightly deserve to do."

The Right Honourable Mr. Edward Shortt took the Speaker's chair, while the former Speaker, Mervin Minsky, spoke from the floor as a member of the Government.

one who is using one of R. B. Bennett's campaign posters, possibly remembering that School went strongly Tory in the Straw Vote last autumn.

The streamers, which cover every available inch of window, wall, and ceiling space in the lower floors of the building, are mostly fifteen feet in length, and show ambitious engineers riding to victory on every available animal from a belligerent bull moose to an Easter bunny.

Although Nev. Potter carried off the presidency by acclamation, the first time it has happened in years, most of the offices are being sought by a large number of would-be executives.

A band of kiln-clad pipers will lead the technicians in parade across the campus to Hart House at 12.15 today. After luncheon in the Great Hall, there will be a sing-song in the East Common Room, returning to School to vote. Voting will be from one o'clock until 2.45. According to a notice by the Dean, classes will be held as usual for anyone who really wants to work.

At seven o'clock in the evening the Schoolmen will assemble in Hart House for an entertainment of boxing, wrestling and music, aiming to please all tastes. Refreshments will be served in the Great Hall, after which the election results will be revealed. All the candidates are preparing stunts, all of which are calculated to be as surprising, and "Schoolish" as possible.

which have been awarded the Nobel Prize, have been featured.

The browsing room has been under the supervision of Miss M. V. Ray, assistant librarian at Victoria College, and instructor in English. Miss Ray was formerly associated with the Public Library and most of the selection has been hers.

In choosing books for the room Miss Ray has received co-operation from various college organizations such as the Music Club and the Dramatic Club. The result has been to include, along these particular lines, volumes of an outstanding nature. Dr. Pelham Edgar has contributed valuable suggestions for modern novels, and Dr. Pratt for poetry. Miss Ray said.

The use of the browsing room is not limited to undergraduates, it was explained. Graduates of the past few years are continually coming back for books. They are also mailed books upon request. Many students, Miss Ray said, look through the room during their undergraduate days, and return after they have their degree to read the books, the titles of which they have seen there.

The grant with which the room was established is now at an end. The browsing room is completely lacking in funds with which to carry on. Unless some benefactor comes to the rescue it is feared the room will not be able to add to its shelves.

female, or as Thurber has it in his grotesque New Yorker caricatures, the war between men and women.

Three urgent problems all crying to be solved,—together providing, unwittingly, their own solutions.

In the first place Mr. McCalvey of 145 Barstow St., Waukesha, Wisc., U.S.A., is on the wrong track entirely in his search for Canadian stamps.

Doesn't this young American realize that stamp collecting is no longer the simple hobby that used to amuse our fathers on the rainy afternoons of their youth? The gentle art of the philatelist is no longer a pastime but a racket, Mr. McCalvey, there is a student at this University who will gladly sell you all the stamps you wish to purchase, in quantity lots which will save a lot of money for you and your friends.

This had started in the stamp game as a hobby, just like you did, but he got wise and turned pro. He used to run the business in his spare time, but now it has grown so big (no fooling, he makes more money a week than most grads, including those who get jobs) that he has had to employ a secretary.

But in suggesting the old fashioned idea of trading stamps, Mr. McC. provides a solution for the other two problems. The lumberjack wrote for a wife, and according to The Ladies' Viewpoint ("Please note, gentlemen, it is not any mysterious desirability about you which causes female pursuit, but rather your scarcity of numbers").

Too many women in Toronto—too many lumberjacks in B.C. Apply the idea of trading, establish the Date Bureau as a clearing house, and the crisis is solved. Canada can continue her way unshaken.

We're just a tiny bit worried, though. There should be plenty of room in the wilds of B.C. for the shipment of Toronto women, but won't the lumberjacks find things a bit crowded in the Forestry Building?

Eaton Auditorium

The Pirates of Penzance as presented by the Eaton Operatic Society makes one appreciate the humble efforts of Victoria College's Music Society. Had the quittance of Chuck Jolliffe and Margaret Davis been injected into all last night's leads the performance would probably have been a howling success. The artistic direction was excellent, the colour blending of costumes and settings rivalled that of the Ballet Russe, the chorus was gay and charming, and yet the event lacked fire. There were amusing scenes, due to the genius of Gilbert and Sullivan, but the east didn't seem to care, so the audience could not be inspired to much enthusiasm.

However, the company passed from one song to another with great precision and we were impressed throughout by the perfect direction. As an imposing spectacle, it was magnificent, a performance before which we could doff our hats in respect.

As at a funeral.

The Choir will also sing "Receive me, my Redeemer" (Bach). On account of the Mission at Massey Hall, which is being conducted by Canon Iddings Bell of Providence, R.I., there will be no Choral evensong at St. Thomas' Church. Everyone is cordially invited to attend the Mission service at Massey Hall at 7 p.m.

Let's Go Places

Uptown—

The Petrified Forest, showing at the Uptown, strikes the most novel note in serious drama since Noel Coward's Scoundrel, but it more sensible, more appealing and more potent than the latter.

Bette Davis departs from her customary role to play the part of an unsophisticated maiden who has poetry in her soul, about to succumb to the advances of an All-American halfback when hitch-hiker Leslie Howard arrives and charms her with the cleverest array of epigrams and the unsurpassed confessions of a sentimental realist.

It all takes place at an isolated gas and hamburger service in the Arizona desert. The Duke, leading public enemy, pauses for grub on his flight from justice and herds them all in the little dining room where the emotions run the gamut in the heavily charged atmosphere. It ends in high tragedy that does not lose its effect. The whole picture is admirably conducted, the characterizations are excellent, the work of Leslie Howard is superbly impressive.

RADIO CAR IN ACTION

School of Science elections were held Friday in the usual Engineering manner. After a week of campaigning, displaying of signs and posters, and handing out advertising and free foodstuffs, the candidates got down to business shortly after noon. Brass cannons laid a heavy barrage in the general direction of the Medical Building, which was kept securely locked and guarded by policemen to prevent its being taken by storm.

A radio truck was parked in front of the Engineering Building, with an announcer describing the merits of the various candidates, while at the same time a kilted band led the Schoolmen in parade around and around the campus. "Archie," the University College janitor, saw them coming, and locked the iron gates against the horde. However, the mob soon unhinged the gates and paraded triumphantly through the college and on into Hart House.

During lunch in the Great Hall, a Medical student who thought his own faculty the best on the campus lost his trousers in a short struggle, and was saved from further indignity only by the intervention of Hart House officials. (Continued on Page 4)

STUDENT PEACE MOVEMENT PLANS MONSTER RALLY

Hour of Peace to be Observed in Canada by All Universities

WOULD JOIN AGAINST WAR

Students throughout the Dominion will unite on March 20 in a nationwide drive to denounce the evil of war and to perfect plans for peace, according to a bulletin issued by the Canadian Student Peace Movement. An Hour for Peace is being set aside on that date by universities and high schools in Canada so that students may participate at a specified time in meetings dedicated to peace.

The Movement is motivated in this design by a desire to solidify the sentiment of those who have been carrying on peace work here and there in isolated fashion. "A carefully organized Hour," states the National Executive, "will serve notice on Canadians generally that students do not want war; that they are united in their protest against it; and that they stand as one in their efforts for the maintenance of peace."

Principal Morgan of McGill is outspoken in his support of the Hour, and has consented to address the students at that university.

A National Peace Hour has never before been attempted in Canada. The S.P.M. is adopting its plan of action on the basis of the experience of the American Peace Movement which last year succeeded in rallying 500,000 students from all parts of the country to participate in a national peace mobilization.

Detailed plans for the execution of the Hour will vary in different universities, but a general program has been suggested by the National Executive at Montreal. They emphasize the fact that the meetings need not be too formal or solemn; "Peace is something we must think of as very much alive—it is not drab, passive or uninteresting."

Recommended for the program are addresses by the Dean, a member of the staff, and a prominent student; community singing; a play dramatizing an issue with which the movement is concerned; and orchestral numbers.

To carry out this project, the S.P.M. solicits the aid of all student societies, and of any group of students wishing to organize themselves for this purpose. At Toronto, the S.A.C., while not (Continued on Page 4)

McGill Mermen Are Swim Champions

Capture Swimming Supremacy from Blue Team in Saturday's Meet

MCCATTY STARS

By Don Robb

McGill's masterful mermen returned yesterday to Montreal taking with them the intercollegiate swimming championship. The McGill natators, by splashing their way to victory over Toronto and McMaster in the Hart House pool Saturday night, captured from Varsity the honour of senior intercollegiate swimming supremacy, which the blue and white team has held for the past year.

When the smoke of battle had cleared away and Mr. Winterburn, as chief scorer, had finished totalling the points, the final score stood: McGill 37; Toronto 23; McMaster 16.

As was expected the stars of the meet were Winston McCatty of Toronto and the three Bourne brothers of McGill. McCatty obtained the only wins of the meet for Toronto with thrilling victories in the 440 free style and the 200 yard breast stroke. McCatty was the only swimmer who was able to show one of the Bourne boys the way to the finish line. This he did in the 1-4 mile free style event. After trailing Bourne for most of the way Wins finally caught him at the 350 yard mark. They raced on even terms for two lengths and McCatty forged ahead in the last 40 yards to win in 5 mins. 40 secs, a margin of 3 secs. over Bourne.

The other Varsity victory of the meet was in the 200 yard breast stroke. Wins covered the distance in 2:44 3-5, clipping a full second from his old record. Once more the blue and white swimmers. (Continued on Page 4)

A Victim of Circumstances Poor Medico Loses Pants

By R. G. A.

An aspiring social climber who tried to join the elect of the four hundred incurred a horrible fate Friday noon, when the bright and smiling face of a Medico bobbed up midst a throng of Engineers in the East Common Room at Hart House. The SPSSers were well away to getting worked up for their annual elections and recognizing the alien among them hoisted him on high and tenderly urged him to join them in an Engineering chant. "To h— with you! Down with S.P.S.!" the brave medical stalwart upheld tradition with a defiant yell, but was soon working overtime to uphold his personal prestige, not to mention his pants. In both his attempts he was

VARSITY WINS IN BOXING

The purple and white colours of Western University on the crest of six boxing victories and three wrestling titles became intercollegiate intermediate B. W. and F. champions, pushing into the background by the narrow margin of one point the O.A.C. threat which was conspicuous until the last bout in the heavyweight boxing class, when Hugh Smith punched home a victory over Hugh McAdam of O.A.C., giving Western the 1936 championship.

The Varsity contingent with three boxers and three wrestlers entered, gained the lightweight boxing division title when R. Kemp put over two technical K.O.'s over Charlie Box and Fletcher of Western and O.A.C. respectively. The leaden punches of Kemp put his opponents "hors de combat" within two rounds.

The only wrestler to gain points for Varsity was Keefe in the bantam class, who gained the decision over Lockhart of Western in the finals. The University of Toronto carried away the fencing title but it added only one point to the total. In gaining the championship Western gained six out of eight boxing titles, with Varsity gaining one and O.A.C. one. The wrestling competition saw O.A.C. with four titles. (Continued on Page 4)

Senior Basketeers Edge Out Queen's

Tricolour Beaten for First Time in Season by Score
of 43-37

BUT WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

By George C. Vair

By virtue of a strong second half finish Warren Steven's senior basketball club handed Queen's their first defeat of the season in the intercollegiate series at Hart House Friday night by a 41-37 score. The largest crowd of the season was on hand and witnessed the best game to be played on the local court this year.

The Tricolour won the championship of the league the following night when they defeated Western by ten points to finish on top with 12 points while the Blues, late holders of the trophy, ended up in the second slot with eight points.

Both teams enjoyed practically equal possession of the ball in the first half but poor passing and erratic shooting by the Blues held them to a low score while the visitors made the best of their opportunities and maintained a three point lead at the rest period, 16-13. Queen's opened the game with a fast offensive and ran up a ten point lead (16-6) on long shots and an illegal type of blocking play which found the Blues at a loss to stop since one player was blocked off which his check found gap on field goals by Gold, Bedford the hoop with little difficulty. With five minutes to play, the Blues closed the and Connolly.

Queen's continued to be "hot" in the second half and a quick hoop by Sonshine and a long shot by Tilley made the score 20-13. At this point in the proceedings the bonesters found their feet or hands as it may be and seven consecutive tallies put both teams on even terms at 20 all. Hardpressed, the Tricolour called a time-out and for the next few minutes the lead changed hands twice, both clubs notching twenty points to bring the score up to 27-27. Varsity went out in front on baskets by Connolly, N. Sullivan and Bedford and from there in the Hart House representatives led the way. The losers (Continued on Page 4)

VOLLEYBALL TITLE GOES TO Y TEAM BEATS VARSITY TWICE

Central Y.M.C.A. won the provincial intermediate volleyball championship when they defeated the University of Toronto entry in two straight games after fighting their way through a six team round robin series played at Central on Saturday afternoon. Varsity held the crown last year.

Teans entered from Broadview Y, West End Y, the Jewish Community League and Richmond Hill, but fell into the discard before the stronger playing of the two finalists. The student team showed signs of weariness in the final set-to, having just battled their way to victory in six games and fell before the more experienced Central club.

Marling, Fallis and Shukens set the ball up for the Blues while Krakauer, Biskev and David did some excellent spiking. Johnston, Cook and Robin were the pick of the winners.

PROVIDES FOR NEW ENTRIES

International intercollegiate hockey, long regarded as the panacea for hockey ills at the University of Toronto, is practically assured according to Jimmie MacPherson, who represented the University at the meeting of the college delegates in Boston on Saturday. When the athletic directorates of the Universities meet to approve the action, international hockey will become a reality.

The action on the part of the University of Toronto may necessitate dropping out of the O.H.A. series but a ten game schedule which has been tentatively drawn up will assure the Toronto students of an abundance of competition.

The intercollegiate group has been arranged into two sections. In Canada the University of Toronto, Queen's, McGill and the University of Montreal will play two home and home games each season. The American teams of Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth and Princeton will play a similar series among themselves and in addition each team will meet the Canadian teams once each year. Two of these games will be played at home and two will be played on the road.

While the present system is arranged to include just four Canadian universities and four American it is understood that provision has been made to include the other universities of Ontario should the new system meet with success.

One of the minor difficulties encountered was the matter of rules. While the difference is small there does exist (Continued on Page 3)

U.C. ARTS BALL WELL ATTENDED

King Edward Hotel is Scene of Celebration by U.C. Lit.

MANY ALUMNI PRESENT

Almost four hundred gal celebrators profited by the "Social Dividends" issued by the University College Lit. Friday evening at their annual Arts Ball in the King Edward Hotel. A large group of recent alumni and members of other faculties was present to help revive this old U.C. traditional party which last year was abandoned, but was on this eventful evening reinstated.

The Crystal Ballroom of the hotel was transformed into a Parisian cabaret with party tables circling the large dance floor. The U.C. crest was taken from its place of honour in the Junior Common Room to grace the bandstand. Norman Harris's novelty orchestra entertained with special arrangements of "Little Nell", hit tunes of the U.C. Follies of 1935, and the Blue and White. Other highlights of the evening were a Leap Year dance and a Lucky Number dance, won by one of the younger "tights" of the faculty. An elaborate supper added the crowning touch to a well-planned party, which remains one of the outstanding social successes of the year.

International Hockey An Encouraging Sign

Five years of effort was culminated on Saturday afternoon when the delegates of eight universities, four Canadian and four American, met in Boston to declare international intercollegiate hockey a reality. This action has for several years been suggested as a cure for the hockey ills at the University of Toronto and its adoption should give the game a new birth in and around Toronto.

For several years it has been apparent that a club which offered the least financial inducements to the players would be the club which concluded its schedule firmly esconced at the bottom of the group. Several times interested parties have offered to remedy this situation by financing hockey players at the University of Toronto but their offers have been politely but firmly declined. Now, after a lapse of several years the University hockey team is apparently going to meet teams on an equal footing. It is natural to expect, under these circumstances, a revival of interest in the game at the University.

While the present arrangement includes four teams in Canada and four in the United States it is encouraging to note that provision has been made for the entry of the Ontario universities west of Toronto into the series. This growth in the direction of international intercollegiate sport has indicated a growing interest between the colleges on either side of the boundary line and has led to a greater feeling of international goodwill than has ever existed before.

Much of the success or failure of this new venture will depend upon the support lent the movement by the students and friends of the University. If this series is to be the first of many international ventures it must receive the support of the students. And there is every reason to believe that once back in honest competition the Toronto teams will quickly regain their place in the favour of the public, an event which will assure the team of support and will assure the new league of success.

Rural Education Could Be Improved

Miss Agnes Macphail, U.F.O.-Labour member of the House of Commons, who has long been interested in educational problems has now turned her attention to the question of adult education. In a recent interview with the press she announced that she is one of a group who are contemplating the purchase of a house in rural Ontario to be used as an adult education centre.

Miss Macphail has spent considerable time in the last few years trying to evolve some means of assisting young people to solve the problems which present conditions have occasioned. The lack of cultural development in agricultural areas and in villages is at the root of a great deal of the present general dissatisfaction with life. Discussing the need of some type of helpful effort in rural communities Miss Macphail mentioned that churches closed all week, and schools empty during week-ends and after hours could be used to advantage for lectures and informal adult classes.

Her suggestions recall those of the great Danish educationist, Dr. Peter Manniche, who was here a few weeks ago. The Danish Folk High Schools have made of Denmark an example to the world of the cultural and social effect on a nation of intelligent education. In these schools farmers, artisans, and the professional classes are educated together, not for a special vocation but for life. This training for life is carried on chiefly by the teaching of history as a living development. As Dr. Manniche explained it "the dynamic teaching of history is responsible for the fact that so many young Danish farmers have a sense of responsibility to their country; it has made them more willing to shoulder its burdens." If the same result would follow the adoption of a similar system of education in Canada, then by all means let us have it.

The University has already gone a long way in taking educational facilities to those who cannot come to them. In addition to the evening classes held in the University for those who live in the city, Workers' Educational Association classes are conducted in most of the cities and larger towns of the province. Extension lectures by University professors from many departments are delivered even at so far distant points as North Bay and Kirkland Lake. Further partly to the efforts of the department of University extension under Mr. Dunlop, the Canadian Association for Adult Education was organized last year. Mature men and woman are seeking education as they never did before, and it is to be hoped that nothing will obstruct the work of those who are endeavouring to satisfy their demands.

"Well, We Had It Coming To Us"

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

In grateful respect, I would like to reply to the editorial on Women's Status which appeared in The Varsity on February 26. I was grateful, for I thought that the question of "Woman's Inferiority" had been settled in that editorial. It could not be otherwise than that woman is inferior to man. Such a poor creature could not be equalled as the one who would put out more than two thousand dollars on a proposition which insures such poor chances of returns. I refer to the statement in the editorial that most women come to university for the prime purpose of securing a husband. It must be that women are hopelessly stupid, or they would learn, after a few months at university, that here is no place for one wishing to further her companionship with the opposite sex. I say this, in spite of the fact of a Date Bureau, set up in an attempt to solve the difficulty. The university achieves the traditional segregation of the sexes with great success. The only reason that I can see to explain this great stupidity on woman's part is that she does not come to university for the prime purpose of securing a life mate, but for the purpose of education. And although her eyes may be turned toward a man, in the distant corner of the lecture room—her ears are listening to the lecturer, and the girl achieves some education. From this education, she sometimes finds, that the economic basis of her society is such that she is wicked if she thinks of marrying and at the same time following a career. She finds, too, that the social system debars timid men from respecting women who have achieved success in fields which have been hitherto guarded by men for themselves.

I see a hope for women. They may not be "inferior". Some have exchanged the "chains of convention" for the coarser harness of competition and found it irritating. However, instead of turning backwards, with drooping shoulders to their chains, these women, who give me hope, have tried the wings of co-operation and found that flying is good.

A. Watts, IV Arts.

Nature Still Determine Destiny of Men

It has been said that man's laws often work to the advantage of those smart enough to break them without incurring punishment. But Nature acquires no offenders—her laws are all-enforceable. And self-preservation is Nature's first law.

On every hand we see the effects of man's violation of natural laws, and of his attempt to stave off the penalty of violation through institutional ties.

To end wars the world will have to better co-operate during so-called times of peace. Tariff walls must fall; for we are living, economically speaking, with the Japanese these days. The co-operation between the United States and other nations has become as indispensable to peace and prosperity as was the relation between Mesdames Smith and Jones in the exchange of flour for sugar in the hill country. We can't encourage trade sharpers to indulge in neighbourly throat cutting and expect peace to be the outcome.

Civilization has necessarily become more complex through the multiplication of mechanical inventions, and institutions, of which human legislation is a phase, have failed to meet its natural demands. Nature still determines the destiny of men, and self-preservation is still its first law. —Daily Texan

Potent Personalities No. 3.
The Faculty.

The faculty of the university were originally instituted in order to relieve the unemployment among the graduates. They are granted a small salary which most of them find insufficient to live on. In order to increase their income, they write books. These books are then listed on the students' reading courses, thus ensuring a large sale.

The faculty deliver what are called lectures at specified hours. Any student may attend these. At these lectures one may hear the best radio jokes of the past month.

The professors of the psychology department have removed the necessity for lectures by publishing outlines of lectures in the various courses. By judiciously interspersing extracts from Joe Miller's joke book with these outlines, a student may now enjoy all the privileges of a university education in the sanctity of his home.

In the spring the faculty hold what are known as examinations. This is a measure introduced to relieve the overcrowding at the university. They are confronted with devising just what method they will use to eliminate a certain percentage of the students. The most ingenious that we have heard is that used by a certain department. If a student tries an exam, (n-18) divided by two students are failed. In order to discard the 18, the markers pull out any papers written by students with pseudonyms of three letters or less. If he has not eighteen papers by then, he will eliminate those with four letters. He then divides the (n-18) papers into two equal 1 bundles. His youngest son is then called in and offered one half. The half he takes are the students that are failed. If the son wants some more to play with, a few pups creep in. A hierarchy of authority exists among the faculty which is only equalled by that of the army for complexity. As near as we could figure it, a professor emeritus corresponds to a commander-in-chief, while a demonstrator compares unfavourably to a bugler.

Com pun, only eight more years for a Ph.D.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Sunday Evening Concert

One of the most successful of the Sunday Evening Concerts was presented last night by the Hart House Glee Club. Their capable, full-bodied singing was as enjoyable to listen to as it obviously was to sing.

Their program was an extremely varied one, ranging from the racy By the Gate, by Moussorgsky, to the sweeping harmonies of the profoundly satisfying Ossian Praeconsol. Other highlights of the program were a group of dainty traditional airs, the solid, impressive, Bach Choral, the boisterous Drinking Song by Vaughan Williams, and two equally boisterous drinking songs for encores.

The assisting artist, Margaret Brown pianist, presented two excellent groups. Noteworthy were the Brahms Intermezzi, the exquisite, eighteenth century minuet, and a brilliant Chopin group. T.D.N.

Convocation Hall

For those who have a taste for religious music in its less mystical, simpler, and most intelligible form, the dramatic choruses and solos of Handel's Messiah will always possess a strong appeal. The music is easy to listen to, and easy to understand; its emotions are always our own emotions; it never loses contact with the human. On Saturday afternoon in Convocation Hall, it was given a careful and entirely adequate performance by the Conservatory Choir, augmented by the choirs of several Toronto churches, under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan.

Throughout the choruses were excellent; the precision of the choirs (Continued on Page 4)

Imperial—

We went to see Modern Times feeling much like the youngster pictured in a recent Life cartoon as standing with his father before a theatre where this picture was being shown, and demanding "But, Daddy, who is Charlie Chaplin?" However, if like us you missed his more recent City Lights, and can sum up your Chaplin scrap book with a few early memories of a funny little mustached fellow wearing a bowler hat and affecting a shuffling gait, you have an unusual treat in store for you at the Imperial this week. Yours will be the discovery of an extremely clever and amusing form of entertainment, acted, directed and produced by a master of satire and droll comedy.

One critic has remarked that while the setting is in modern times, Chaplin's new film uses all the old technique and presents exactly the same old Chaplin. And why not? This simply establishes the character which Charles Chaplin has created of himself for screen portrayal as one of those enduring characters of all time, in a class with Shakespeare's Falstaff and Dickens' Macawber, who find their place in every generation and every age, and who perfectly reflect the characteristics of their "times" in no matter what era their creator sets them down. Chaplin shuffles into the world of a new generation, and feeling perfectly at home, proceeds to make this depression era look quite as ridiculous as he did the days of post-war prosperity.

Nothing escapes his mild, satiric clowning. Mass production methods, wage slavery, strikes, red demonstrations, bulldozing police tactics—all come in for attention and Chaplin is ribbing the strikers and the reds as much as he is constituted authority. He even takes a crack at old style slapstick comedy, of which he was himself no mean exponent, by having his very modern, mechanical feeding machine do a little pie throwing. While such mechanical gags brought the big guffaws for most of the audience, it was in the more intimately human sequences that we developed aching sides not experienced since A Night at the Opera, and to our mind the embarrassing episode of the gurgling stomachs (Charlie and the prison minister's wife vie with (Continued on Page 4)

VARSITY DROPS CLOSE GAME TO WEST-END

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Today at one o'clock in the Varsity Arena the U.C. and St. Hilda's hockey teams will clash in a sudden-death game to determine who will meet Vic Seniors in the interfaculty finals. It should be a good game, and both teams are very, very anxious to win.

U.C. has the best team it has had in years, since formerly its best players were on the line-up of the intercollegiate sextet, and were not allowed to play in the interfaculty series. This year they can, and are doing both, and the result is a strong U.C. team. St. Hilda's also have a brilliant aggregation of players, and are hoping that this year they may reach the finals and win the championship. In the last few years, they have reached the finals, but have been defeated every time, Vic taking the honours away from them last year.

As a warming-up, the St. Hildians had their inter-year hockey games last Friday night, and the sophoms won the laurels by defeating the juniors 2-1 in the finals. Elaine Knight scored both the winners' goals, and Mary Dignam slipped the puck into the net for the juniors' tally. As usual, the difference between the good players and the one-appearance-a-year hockeyists was very distinct, and ludicrous scenes were numerous. However, nobody cared and the spectators were treated to a good show.

two sets of rules for Canadian and American hockey. It was suggested by Jimmie MacPherson that a standard set of rules be adopted but the American colleges, playing under American rules, must apply to the national body before adopting any change in the existing code. It was decided to play under Canadian rules in Canada and American rules in the U.S. until such a time as the U.S. national body would consider the application of the four colleges for a standard set of rules.

The schedule which has been drawn up will not differ greatly from the past arrangements. There will be an American team play at Toronto late in December, while the Toronto team will make their annual trip to the states. The scheduled intercollegiate games will not, however, exclude the possibility of exhibition games while the team is in the U.S.

VARSITY SECONDS EASILY CAPTURE SWIMMING TITLE

McMaster and O.A.C. Victims

Saturday

SCORE IN SEVEN EVENTS

Gardiner, Hicks and Stratton
Are Stars for Toronto Team

Varsity's second swimming team scattered spray in the faces of all the opposition Saturday to come through and take an easy victory in their first annual Intercollegiate Intermediate Swimming Meet.

Coach Lowndes, using an even performing group of swimmers, placed them well enough to be able to take four firsts and three seconds in the eight events.

Special credit must be given to "Curly" Stratton, who placed first in the diving ahead of his team-mate Trow.

George Gardiner turned in a brilliant 100 yard back stroke and Hicks swam the nicest race of his career to win the 200 breast from Loaring of Western.

The Results:
Medley Relay: 1. Varsity (Gardiner, Tedman, Vipond); 2. O.A.C. Western finished second but was disqualified. Time: 3:46 2-5.

Diving: 1. Stratton, Varsity; 2. Trow, Varsity; 3. MacKay, McMaster. 50 yard free: 1. Loaring, Western; 2. Macdonald, O.A.C.; 3. Stratton, Varsity. Time: 2:52.

300 yard free: 1. Follingsbee, O.A.C. 2. Hampson, Varsity; 3. Kirby, Varsity. Time: 3:54 3-5.

100 yard back: 1. Gardiner, Varsity; 2. Douglas, Western; 3. Robinson, O.A.C. Time: 1:16 2-5.

100 free: 1. Loaring, Western; 2. Summers, Varsity; 3. Macdonald, O.A.C. Time: 1:40 2-5.

200 breast: 1. Hicks, Varsity; 2. Loaring, Western; 3. Tedman, Varsity. Time: 2:54 4-5.

200 free style relay: 1. Varsity (Summers, Hampson, Vipond, Bull); 2. O.A.C.; 3. Western. Time: 1:48 4-5.

The final score was: Varsity 41, Western 18, O.A.C. 17 and McMaster 1.

GYMNASTIC TEAM DEFEATS 'M'GILL

Varsity Retains Caron Cup by Slim Margin in Montreal

WIN BY FOUR POINTS

For the fourth consecutive year, the University of Toronto gymnastic team triumphed over McGill and the Caron Cup will remain in Hart House for another year as the result of the annual meet held in Montreal on Saturday night.

However, it was by the narrowest of margins that the team won the decision. Under the present system of team scoring, by which 10 points is allotted for a 1st place in each event, 9 points for 2nd and so on to 1 point for 10th, McGill, at the 3-4 mark, led Varsity by 83 to 82. Superlative tumbling put Toronto ahead, so that the final count was Varsity 112 and McGill 108.

Varsity took 1st, 2nd, 7th, 8th and 10th places, and McGill 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th and 9th.

Jack Farrar of Varsity in his 4th and final year, clinaxed his gymnastic career by winning the individual all-round title with 270.4 points out of 400, taking 1st place in tumbling and on the horse.

Francis Buck, Varsity, was a close second with 259.6 points, and all-round efficiency.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George C. Vair

What a week-end! No less than six intercollegiate and one provincial title changed hands within the short space of two days and to top it all the University of Toronto senior hockey club finds itself in a new league where the students are in with players of their own calibre and not up against packed clubs of men only half a jump from the professional ranks. Possibly we are giving the latter the benefit of the doubt at that.

The new international league of six universities has finally materialized after the combined efforts of numerous men, foremost of whom is Warren Stevens, and the organizers deserve plenty of credit, considering the problems of distance, eligibility and playing rules and whether the league will be a success or not. Due to technical variations in the American and Canadian rules it has been decided that games played in Canada will be under our rules with the opposite conditions prevailing when on the south side of the border. The constitution of the league is not rigid since allowance has been made in order to allow Western or McMaster to enter the league in the future should they so desire.

Varsity lost their senior basketball crown when Queen's beat Western on Saturday night but at least they had the satisfaction of taking them into camp the previous evening and there could be no excuses. We often wondered if the fans watch the guards in a basketball game or do they rate in the same category as the linemen on a football squad? Captain Phil Gold was "right on", Saturday, holding his check to a minimum of points, scored six for the Blues, cleared innumerable shots around the hoop and much to our surprise stayed on the floor the whole evening despite the fact that he was labouring under the weight of three personals for approximately 18 minutes.

Saturday's game drew a good crowd and if there is not twice as many on hand this Wednesday night something is radically wrong. What's on Wednesday—the Big Four title is at stake and the championship of the city when Steven's best meet Rennie's Broadway Y.M.C.A. entry in a sudden death game at Hart House. Two titles in one night, so keep the evening open and support the team.

The three Bourne's of McGill plus half a dozen finsters proved too much for the Varsity swimming club and thus the title goes to Montreal for the next year. For the benefit of the uninitiated two of the Bourne's have travelled to the Olympics and stand a good chance of seeing what Herr Hitler is doing this summer. The three brothers combined with Powell to break the relay record with a new time of 1 minute, 43 and one fifth of a second; Munro set up a new mark for the 50 free style and not to be outdone, R.A. Bourne cracked the old 100 yard time. Winice McCatty, the fastest shark in these waters at certain distances, led Savage, a finisher of note, to the tape in the 200 breast but the eastern speeder forced him to break the record and go all out before he would accept defeat. Winice also came through on top in the 400 free style before R.A. Bourne, who kept even for three quarters of the way, only to slow down and slip into McCatty's wake and second place.

Are you still in the dark as to who took the titles? Here is the list. Senior basketball to Queen's; intermediate basketball to Varsity (twice in a row for MacCutcheon's men and 17 out of 18 wins); senior gymnastic title to Varsity (retained); senior swimming to McGill; intermediate swimming to Varsity; intermediate assault to Western and provincial volleyball title to Central "Y". Varsity also won their fight for a New Deal in regards to hockey.

At the annual meeting of the Canadian Rugby Football Union on Saturday Professor Mackenzie, representing the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union, stated that the college union would not have another representative in the Canadian playoffs.

MacCutcheon's Squad

ENO BRILLIANT SEASON

The O.A.C. intermediate basketball club absorbed a 28-14 defeat last Friday night as Mac Cutcheon's blue and white squad coasted home victors, ringing down the curtain for the year with a brilliant record of no defeats in eighteen games. O.A.C. at no time were a match for the sharp shooting Varsity quintet which notched fourteen points in each half. The game was featured by close checking which kept play spiritless although Varsity always managed to capitalize on the lapses in the O.A.C. defensive system.

The first five minutes of play saw both teams playing a cautious game and O.A.C. kept abreast of the Varsity scoring until well on towards the ten minute mark when Varsity hemmed in the "farmers" quintet and rang up nine points to swell their scoring total to fourteen while O.A.C. gained five.

The second half saw Varsity improving and a scintillating passing play by Hogg trickled the ball through the netting on a pass from Powers. Play became bitter and in the fast exchanges O.A.C. were successful in bringing up the score to fourteen points, but Varsity

Y TEAM VICTORS BY SINGLE POINT IN FURIOUS PLAY

OUTOONE IN LAST STRETCH

By J. Charles Mondo

In forty minutes of fast and furious basketball with that story-book finish, which had the customers climbing over their seats and tugging at each other's hair Warren Stevens' hardwood laddies absorbed a one point setback at the hands of the West End Y tossers, Saturday night at the latter's cage quarters by 38-37.

It was one of those wild scoring affairs with the rough, tough and nasty element, throughout which the lead kept teetering back and forth. However, as far as the Varsity hoopers were concerned, the result was of slight significance, because they were "in", with regard to the Big Four playoffs, despite the outcome of the encounter. Nevertheless, the Blue warriors fought all the way. But with victory in their grasp, they faltered in the last few seconds and failed to cope with a frantic Y attack, in the final stretch, which notched the verdict for the scrappy West End hoopers.

Varsity opened with Matthews and Dempster at the forward berths; Willis got the nod at the pivot post; while McGregor and Gold received the sentinel assignments. This combination netted five points for Varsity in the first eight minutes of play on a field goal by Willis, a side shot by Dempster, and a converted foul from the hands of Phil Gold. West End garnered five counters within the same time with Butler starting their scoring and Pomer adding a one-hander and a charity. Here Neil Sullivan entered the breach, replacing Matthews. For the remaining twelve minutes the lead changed hands several times and at the end of the initial session the Y cagers found themselves on the long end of a 19-18 advantage. The first half was slowed up by a spotty brand of passing as displayed by both clubs.

In the final half Connelly, Marks and Bedford joined Willis and Sullivan to constitute a more powerful combine. But, here and now, the strenuous workout of the night before against the Tricolour crew from Kingston began to tell on the boys. Joe and Hugh were decidedly "off" in their usually brilliant offensive tactics and "Sully" and Gold had difficulty in making the leather behave. The score jumped to 21 all after the first five minutes of this half, and then, with Pomer, Butler and G. Dellabough adding two-pointers for West End and Sullivan, Connelly and Bedford tallying for the Blues, the count was raised to 27-27.

With eight minutes remaining to full time, the Y five seemed to have

JAPAN

"The military clique thinks that Japan is at the crisis of her history," said the Rev. T. Matsumoto, Japanese post-graduate student at Trinity. "They feel that she must be strong in North China and Manchukuo to protect herself against Russian communistic influences which are so fundamentally different from the Japanese way of thinking of the state."

"The Emperor is the father of his people from whose line all the Japanese are descended so naturally this trouble today does not affect his position. The military must have him as head of the army and of the state. What they objected to were his civil advisors, the late prime minister and finance minister, whom they felt were standing in the way of Japan's future. These statesmen looked at the problem of sending troops to North China and thought that Japan could not afford it. It is to be noted that it was not the high officers of the military party who questioned the financial difficulties but about one hundred young impetuous officers."

When questioned about what the new ministry under the former home secretary would be likely to do, Mr. Matsumoto said, "There are two possibilities: first, as such a large rising supported by about 3000 soldiers is entirely new in Japan's history there may be a reaction against the military clique. On the other hand, because it is such a large rising it must have had some public support and possibly the people will look at these hundred men who have sacrificed themselves for Japan's future and feel they must support their cause."

O.C.E. BEATS VIC.

O.C.E. swamped Jr. Vic in an inter-faculty baseball game played in the big gym at Hart House Friday afternoon by the score of 11-3.

control of proceedings, holding a 33-29 edge. But the visitors kept plugging along and closed the gap with Dempster and Marks providing the "switches" and Sullivan registering from the free line. Varsity managed to grab a 37-36 lead with but 27 seconds remaining. This looked like the ultimate result. However, the dribblers of Jack Price could not be denied and on a jump ball near the West End basket, G. Dellabough pushed in the winning field goal for the victors. The sphere had scarcely dropped through the mesh and the game was over. A smashing triumph for West End—a tough one to lose for Varsity.

DENTS DOWN O.C.E. S.P.S. TAKES MEDS

And Trinity Goes Down to O.A.C. in Hard-Fought Basket Tilts

EVENLY MATCHED TEAMS

Dents vs. O.C.E.

Friday night in the big gym at Hart House, the Dents' basketball team defeated O.C.E. by the score of 23-15. The first half opened with a series of passing plays but neither side seemed able to find the basket, until Andrews placed a nice shot through the net.

O.C.E. pulled themselves together in the last period, and went on top 12-11, and then slacked off, allowing Dents to amass a sufficient lead to take the game, with 23 points against 15 for O.C.E. Andrews and Kingsbury were the best men on the floor, and were in large measure responsible for their team's victory. For the losers Awde and Gibson played a good game, and Stroud on the defence kept the score down by his fast work.

Trinity vs. O.A.C.

In the upper gym, Trinity was downed 21 to 20 by O.A.C., in another interesting tilt. The boys from Guelph were a little weaker on the combination than the Red and Blacks, but capitalized more on their chances. Trinity deserved a higher total than they got, on the play, but it's final results that count. O.A.C. led 10-9 at half time, and the advantage seasawed from one side to another. Cowl, Graybiel and Hayes looked the best for the winners, and for Trinity, Fiske and Grant. The last-named player is the mainstay of the Churchmen's team, getting three baskets, and feeding his mates at all times.

Jr. School vs. Sr. Meds

Jr. School defeated Sr. Meds in the last game played in the upper gym by the score of 19-18. This game was a strenuous battle and both teams turned on the heat right from the start. With only a few seconds to play of regular time School were ahead by two points after trailing for most of the brawl. Then on a brace of foul shots Meds tied up the score, Zursky, who played a star game, potting them, to make the count 18-18. In the overtime Bishop came through with a single to give Jr. School the group title. Both teams were evenly matched and it might have been won by either of them.

DR. BRUCE'S WORK CITED

The University Settlement is inaugurating a Housing Survey this week in the McCaul Street area in an effort to pursue further the investigations into housing conditions of Toronto which began with the Lieut.-Governor's survey. This effort will also cover such matters as Foreign Groups, Health, Delinquency, Employment Conditions, Organizations in the district, etc., and will help provide the Staff and Volunteers of the Settlement with a wider knowledge of the economic and social conditions of the district in which they are working.

A questionnaire has been prepared by Mrs. Crowther, the Head Resident of the Settlement, for the use of those who undertake the survey and the Staff at the Settlement are ready to give instruction to workers as to the most tactful methods of approaching and talking to people about their homes and (Continued on Page 4)

POLITICAL EDUCATION REACHES NEW "PEAK"

Either there is going to be little in the way of election stunts, or the candidates are very reticent in telling about it. They just won't talk.

The only new thing in the way of election propaganda which has appeared on the campus is the publication known as the "Peak". An interview with two of the editors was secured yesterday. When asked where they got the idea for a newspaper, they replied, "This business of blotters has been overdone, so we decided that a newspaper was good and at the same time novel. Our second issue comes out tomorrow. Take a look at it. And watch for the stunt put on by the editors on election day."

PUBLICITY FOR AUTHORS

University students who indulge in the writing of short stories of an unsterilized nature, unacceptable to popular magazines, are being given the opportunity of having their works read with discerning appreciation, and also the possibility of a future market through the altruism of the Writers' Club of Toronto.

In a publication called Fiction, in preparation at the present time and appearing around Easter, there will appear eight or ten stories submitted by writers from all over Canada, chosen by judges whose only concern is to find the best material.

This magazine will be printed in a very small edition for distribution among editors and other people who might be interested in discovering Canadian talent. One editor has already signified his intention of buying one of the stories.

NEW FINE ARTS COURSE TO BEGIN NEXT YEAR

Leads to Honour Degree and Includes Work in History and Languages

Next year, students will be given the opportunity to enrol in a new Honour Course in Fine Arts, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

The requirements for admission will include complete Pass Matriculation, together with five prescribed subjects of Honour Matriculation, two of which must be foreign languages.

In the First Year, courses will be given in the following subjects: a modern foreign language, Greek and Roman History, Oriental History, English, Archaeology, Philosophy, and Practical Art.

The studies of the Second Year will be comprised of English, Mediaeval and Modern History, Fine Art, and Practical Art.

The same courses will be continued in the Third and Fourth Years, an option being allowed between a modern foreign language and an extensive course in Practical Art.

Details of the course will be contained in next year's Arts calendar.

License for "Victualling House" Refused as Neighbours form Delegation

FEAR INJURY TO PROPERTY

The terms "residents" and "residence" seem to have become confused in the objections which have been raised against the installation of another victualling house on Harbord St.

Mr. Peter Copes has been refused a license to open up a victualling house at 20 Harbord St. Apparently no satisfactory reason was offered to account for the lack of enthusiasm which his project aroused. The Newman Club was the only organization whose name was mentioned as being specifically opposed to the idea. However, on investigation yesterday, The Varsity discovered that the opposition on the part of the Newman Club was promoted only by the Harbord Street residents who asked that this petition be sent in.

On the other hand it was revealed that the residences have agreed that they do not want an additional restaurant on Harbord St.

In both cases the main objection is that of considering the injury which the added restaurant would do to their property.

The only actual difference which would exist between the tea house already established on Harbord Street (Continued on Page 4)

NOMINATIONS OPEN FOR LIT. EXECUTIVE

At eight-thirty tonight after the Graduation Banquet, the University College Literary and Athletic Society will hold its annual meeting to nominate the Lit. executive and also the various year officers.

The final debate for the Robinette Trophy will take place between representatives of the freshmen and sophomore years. The winning of this trophy makes its holders supreme in the field of University College debating for this year. The debate will concern university representation in the House of Commons. The Maurice Cody prize, which is awarded on the basis of interest in public speaking as well as interest in the Lit., is also going to be the basis for a Lit. election at this meeting.

Sheepskins Stylishly Scarce Still Surgeons Shun Synthetic

Even in this age of standardization, mass production and canned beer, there are probably still some wide-eyed undergraduates who believe that the strongholds of learning (universities) you have remained untouched by the craze for synthetic products. But it ain't so, Students! You have been gipped! You know those little pieces of sheepskin you slave away for for four years? Diplomas? With your name on them in Latin and gold paint? Well—they're not. Sheepskin, I mean. Probably it isn't gold paint either. You've been fooled. Workers of the World Unite!

This is a blow. To think that all the years you have spent (about one month per year) storing away precious gems of knowledge that will some day make you finer men and women—maybe even get you a job—should be rewarded, not by an "old-style" sheepskin parchment" to quote the Globe, but by a mere chunk of "high-grade rag paper."

The Undergraduate the student magazine of University College which will be released today, will be bigger and better than ever, in the opinion of H. L. Rowntree, business manager.

The policy of the paper is fundamentally the same as in former years. It is strictly a literary effort, and as such, has accepted only the highest efforts of the contributors.

Among the contributions is an entertaining article by the one and only Hart Buck; it concerns a novel Jewish dish called "Kiske". There is also an article of considerable merit on the Canadian writer, Morley Callaghan. Henry Noyes, lecturer in English in U.C., will have several of his contributions printed.

Interest in the Undergraduate as a magazine with a definite purpose revived after last year's exceptionally successful number. Before that time, there seemed to be a lack of appreciation among the students; a state of affairs which disappeared immediately upon the publication of last year's issue. Graduates as well as undergraduates, (Continued on Page 4)

Chemical Engineers Least in Demand as Interests Diverse

2 OF 7 ARCHITECTS HIRED

All the graduating class of Engineers will obtain positions early in the spring in the opinion of Dean C. H. Mitchell of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering.

Several large electrical companies and manufacturers have already been around and arranged interviews with prospects, and some of the class have had two or three offers of employment to date. This has probably given rise to the rumour on the campus that companies are fighting for this year's crop of Engineers, Dean Mitchell believes.

Last year's class of 160 were placed with surprising ease, according to the Dean. "During the past four years the number of men placed has increased in something better than arithmetical progression," he said, "and that is a good sign of improving times."

The demand for Electrical Engineers is perhaps greatest, due to the needs of large companies. Mechanical, Mining and Metallurgical Engineers come next, owing to improvement in the industrial and mining fields. Chemical (Continued on Page 4)

SITUATION IN JAPAN KIN TO NAZI MOVEMENT

The present situation in Japan is analogous to the Nazi movement in Germany before the advent to power of Hitler, but somewhat modified by local conditions, in the opinion of Ken Woodworth, IV Political Science, whose home is in Japan.

"The coup of the military fascist group," he said, "cannot be judged separately from the whole situation in Japan. The economic crisis in the country has resulted in a twofold movement; on the one hand there is a national drive towards war with the Soviet Union, with its objective the seizure of China. This is the more popular aspect of Japanese imperialism."

CALLAGHAN GUEST AT VICTORIA DEBATE

Is Expected to Oppose Motion for Censorship of the Press

AUTHOR OF BANNEO BOOK

Morley Callaghan, noted Canadian author, will speak on censorship of Press and Theatre when the Victoria Debating Parliament holds its final debate of the term on Monday next.

Mr. Callaghan has accepted an invitation to be guest speaker for the debate "Resolved that this House favours a vigorous censorship of the Press and Theatre." It is expected that he will speak against the opposition. Mr. Callaghan's latest book "They Shall Inherit the Earth" was recently banned from the open shelves of the Public Libraries. He has repeatedly denounced book censorship in the newspapers.

F. E. Honey and Jessie Johnston will support the motion, the negative being upheld by Roy Kemp and Beth Good. The subject will be thrown open for discussion, and it is expected that argument will centre around the principle of censorship as applied to newspapers, literature, stage and screen.

The debate is to be held in Alumni Hall, Victoria College, and is open to both men and women students.

Election Act Should Consider Students

A movement is at present under way in Ottawa to consider the establishment of University ridings similar to those of Great Britain. Certain it is that something of this nature should be done. The situation as exemplified in the last election demands a remedy. It is certainly unfair to hold a general election and then disenfranchise half the members of the Dominion's largest educational centre. Yet this is in effect what occurred at the last election. The act which demands that men vote in the ridings where they have resided for the six months previous to the election made no allowances for students who come from all parts of the dominion and are unable to return to their ridings to vote. This is not as it should be.

While the idea of a university member in the Canadian House of Commons may seem a little premature at this point in the nation's development there is nothing premature about a demand for consideration against such a condition as arose during the last federal election. There is no reason why provision could not be made to have University students vote in the riding in which the University happens to be situated, should an election occur during the academic year.

There would, of course, be difficulties arise from such a system. Students from the city of Toronto would have little reason to vote elsewhere but in their own ridings. A certain amount of book-keeping would be entailed in classifying the resident and out-of-town student, but it would be considerably less expensive than paying the fares of students who happen to live close enough to home to make the trip on election day. Such a system would have given 1500 students at the University of Toronto a chance to express their political opinions last October, a right which was virtually denied them.

It is encouraging at least to find the situation receiving consideration. But it is imperative that support be given the project by the student body and the public. There appears to be little reason why a change for the better cannot be brought about. It would be cheaper to have the students all vote in Toronto. And it is only right that they be given a chance to vote. While the suggestion of more members in the House will be opposed by many economists there can be no opposition of such a nature to a change in the elections act which will permit students to vote where they are located when an election takes place.

What to do with Defeated Candidates?

Several of the larger faculties have recently held elections for officers in their undergraduate administrative bodies, and an interesting situation has been disclosed in those elections.

The situation is that, if the two outstanding figures in the councils of the students offer themselves for the office of president, the one who loses, be it only by a half-dozen of votes, is thereby excluded from an active part in the student government throughout the year. It is eminently reasonable to suppose that many times a faculty possesses two men of presidential calibre, and it does not seem fair to them or to the other students that one should be prevented from doing his part for the students.

In one of the larger faculties, the president was given an acclamation this year, since no other student felt reasonably sure of winning against him, although there are several persons of administrative ability in that faculty. In another election, two really outstanding men who had been together in the council all during their university careers, opposed each other. The winner was decided by a slim margin, and the loser is now "out".

In high school societies it is often the custom to make the defeated presidential candidate who obtains at least one-third of the votes a "member without portfolio". This seems to us a good plan, and one which would be of benefit to any society adopting it. We wonder that the undergraduate administrative councils have not taken what appears to us to be a good idea, into their constitutions before now, and suggest that they consider doing so.

Ten Days That Punished a Murderess

The Detroit woman who has just been freed after serving a ten-day sentence for killing her husband is glad she lives in the United States. In Canada, she says, she would have been hanged.

She may well consider herself fortunate in her choice of a country. In Canada she might have been acquitted of a murder if circumstances warranted it, but she would never have been given the gentle rebuke of ten days in jail. She has been in jail before, ninety days for being drunk. Her judges must have overlooked the fact that she was also drunk at the time of the murder, or they would surely have given her a hundred days. The next time she shoots a husband (and that may not be long for she has already had ten proposals since making herself a widow) she will probably get a slap on the wrist. Naughty, naughty!

The American people are loud in praise of the British judicial system and in condemnation of their own. Apparently they go no further. While such absurd proceedings continue in American courts the United States will always be a laughing-stock, if not an object of pity. It is not seemly to boast but assuredly Canadian justice does not encourage acknowledged murderesses to remark jauntily after serving their sentences, "Life begins at 41!"

For the sake of the unfortunate husband we sincerely hope that all the women who occasionally have to stoke the furnace do not follow Mrs. Kleckhammer's example. If they do they may find themselves on the wrong side of the boundary line.

Personality of More Value Than Mere Facts

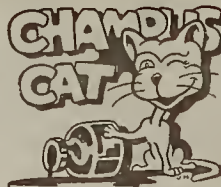

Exposure to a university education brings conviction of two verities. First, the really excellent teacher is as rare as an honest politician. Second, because a man is brilliant or productive in his chosen field does not insure that he will be a good instructor in that field.

Very often what is taught to the rote-minded undergraduate is not as important as he who teaches it. Yet the present policy seems to place undue emphasis on equipment and administration at the expense of tutelage. Equipment and efficient administration are prerequisite, but instruction is of prime importance. Salaries of administration tend to overbalance those of instruction. This, too, places a premium on the coincident and not on the original purpose of education.

Similarly, in educational practice classes, which prepare for pedagogy, there has been little or no effort to test ultimate qualities that make for apt instruction. Brilliance and intellectual ability do not unalterably make for efficient teaching. Psychology has made strides in testing other special aptitudes; why not teaching abilities?

Personality can accomplish much where rules and systems avail little. Instruction is the fundamental basis of a university; we should emphasize it accordingly.

Loew's—

The writer of Loew's current picture, "Riffraff", has liberally borrowed choice bits from other current films, mixed them all together and the result is probably the most involved and implausible hodge-podge of any year. The picture starts off as a slapstick. During the course of the first couple of reels, Jean Harlow and Spencer Tracy have quite a time insulting each other and fighting all over the place. Miss Harlow even goes so far as to wallop Tracy across the face with a tuna fish, a la James Cagney. We would have thought this quite funny if La Harlow had been on the receiving end.

Suddenly in the middle of the picture without any apparent motivation, the story switches to heavy dramma, and does Harlow suffer. Helen Twelvetyes and Lillian Gish in their palmist days never went through such a career of woe as befalls poor Jean. She steals money for her husband, who has left her, when he is sick and is sent to prison. Here her baby is born, which gives her plenty of opportunity to roll her eyes over little sweaters which she clutches dramatically to her heart at the slightest provocation. Her baby, as you can easily guess is taken away from her. Closeups of Miss Harlow crying, "Don't take my baby away—he's mine, he's mine. And she goes right on suffering up to the final scene.

It is to Spencer Tracy's credit that he makes his silly role as good as it is. Joseph Calleia is very good, also, as a rather sympathetic villain, who does his best to lure Miss Harlow. Needless to say, she rebuffs him. Una Merkel has one of her best bits, and the entire remainder of the supporting cast is excellent. But none of them can make "Riffraff" anything more than the trash it is.

There is an entertaining comedy, featuring Patsy Kelly and the late Thelma Todd, and a short trailer of the coming "Rose Marie", which is more entertaining than all of "Riffraff" put together.

BASKETBALL FINAL TO-MORROW NIGHT

VARSITY TEAM GOES TO MAT IN BIG FOUR TITLE PLAY

Broadview Has Edge on Blues in Number of Winning Games

BLUE TEAM DISPLAYS SPEED

Five Games Out of Six Is Recent Varsity Record

The Broadview-Varsity senior basketball clash for the city championship and Big Four title to be held on the Hart House floor, Wednesday at 8.30 bids fair to be the best game of the season and should attract a capacity house. It is a sudden death affair and two crowns are at stake.

"Scoop" Rennie's basketweavers have a one game edge over the Blues on the season's play having won two games to one for the students. However, the Steven-coached quintet finished on top of the league having a better average in their other games than the "W" men.

The Broadview players display a rugged, defensive brand of ball and matched with the speedy tactics of the students promises an excellent evening's entertainment. Bill Bodrug, ex-Varsity ball handler has been hitting the double figures of late and should lend additional colour to the contest.

The Blue team has finished on top in their last five out of six appearances and considering that they have the advantage of their house floor should be given the edge. Broadview jinxed the Queen's Parkers in their one game at Hart House this season and led by Samme and Bradon may duplicate the feat.

Tom Sullivan will see the game from a permanent seat near the bench due to a sprained ankle suffered in practice last week but the remainder of the team are in perfect physical shape despite three hard games in five days.

Graduation reaps its annual toll from senior ranks and Joe Connelly, Hughie Marks, Himel and "Lofty" Willis, will be wearing the Blue for the last time, unless they decide to take additional courses after they graduate. Phil Gold may be making his final stand since the genial captain will enter sixth Medicine and the work entails sufficient time without taking on athletic pursuits.

A win for these members of the club would be a triumphant conclusion to years of playing and a good attendance should be warranted.

U.C. WINS FROM SAINTS IN INTERFACULTY FINALS

U.C. Hockeyists Score Goals by Quick Work on Ice and Strong Defense

In a fast and furious tussle at Varsity Arena yesterday afternoon, the U.C. pucksters romped home with a 2-0 win over St. Hilda's.

Both teams fought hard for an entrance into the interfaculty finals but U.C.'s clever passing and strong back-checking were a little too much for the Saints.

The first goal was scored in the third period by Jean Atkinson on a beautiful pass from Bunty Lang. Charly Grant, star U.C. defence player, netted the other goal on a long shot after a one-man rush down the ice.

Snappy stick-handling was an outstanding feature of the game.

U.C.: Jean Atkinson, Bunty Lang, Cis Taylor, Charly Grant, Marlie Brett, Peggy Snider, Betty Guest, Cay Robertson, Margaret Mickle, Fran Walters, Winnie Bruce.

St. Hilda's: Elaine Knight, Desiree Seale, Edith Ardagh, Margaret McDonald, Shirley Fleming, Isabel Wallbridge, Mary Dignam, Gladys Carvolth, Sheila Bull, Betty Kirk, Virginia Lander.

Ringside Chatter

By J. T. L.

The wrestling team did their share at the recent intercollegiate assault at McGill (as was predicted) and brought back four victories out of a possible eight. For this, credit is due to not only the grapplers themselves, but also to their coach, Cliff Chilcott.

It is interesting to note that O.A.C. Varsity's closest rivals on the mat, were trained by a former pupil of Mr. Chilcott.

Accounts of three of the successful wrestlers appear below. The fourth, Bert Houle, has already been reviewed.

GEORGE JOHNSTONE

George Johnstone, V Meds, won the 125 lb. intercollegiate wrestling title for Varsity for the fifth consecutive year, which is probably a record.

George is about 5' 5" in height and very muscular. He wrestles with a very nonchalant attitude, which is only apparent since he is never caught napping. He specializes in sudden bursts of speed which usually fool his opponents and then George takes a good hold.

George comes from Fenelon Falls and attended Columbia U. for one year, where he did his first wrestling. His past five years at Varsity have been years of uninterrupted success in the grappling game. As a matter of fact, during the past season he got his stiffest opposition from Jack Keefe of Varsity.

JIM VAN ALLAN

Jim Van Allan, III St. Mike's, won the light-heavyweight title with a clever display of wrestling form.

Jim stands 6' 1" high and has the physique of the proverbial life-guard.

Jim comes from Rochester but did his first wrestling at Varsity. He broke into the limelight in his first year by winning his bout up at Guelph. This was before O.A.C. got senior rating. He made the team last year and won his letter in McGill two weeks ago. Jim has only lost one bout in three years, and that was at the senior assault a year ago.

DDUG AUSTEN

Doug Austen, III U.C., won the 118 lb. championship in impressive fashion.

Doug is 5' 7" and is perhaps the trickiest wrestler on the team. He always makes his opponents look bad.

Doug won a 130 lb. playground title back in 1932 and then won the junior assault in his first year at Varsity. An injured shoulder compelled him to retire for a while but he came back strong and made the team last year. Doug holds decisions over his opponents from below the border and now he holds an intercollegiate title.

VICTORIA WINS 4-2 DRUGGISTS SCORE 3-2

Trinity and Forestry Defeated in Stiff Matches at Arena

SECOND GAME DRUGH

Yesterday afternoon at Varsity Arena, Victoria and Pharmacy came out on the long end of a double header, the former defeating Trinity 4-2 and Forestry losing to the Druggists 3-2.

The Trinity-Vic game was very well played and full of excitement all the way.

The game between Pharmacy and Forestry was the third of the series, no scores having been made in the first two, but five of Forestry's first string men were away on a field trip, and the substitutes were not up to the task imposed. The game was rough and tough

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Meredith Fleming

International intercollegiate hockey was the topic of discussion yesterday as "bills" met in emergency sessions from the ice-bound strand of Bloor Street to the slippery steps of the Mining Building. The majority of the campus experts broke right down and confessed that they still could see no light in the indigo outlook of Varsity hockey prospects. So we felt as forlorn as a pink tooth-brush victim when we sought out athletic potentate Stevens in his den at Hart House.

Warren tilted back in his chair and rubbed his hands together cheerily—three outstanding stars of the 1934 senior team are expected to return to studies at the University next fall. Ernie Rey, a defenceman, will resume his course in fourth year Dentistry, along with Max Fullerton and Charlie Sweeney, forwards, who may attend the College of Education. It is also more than probable that Norm McClelland, graduating from Victoria this year, will be found at O.C.E. when the leaves begin to fall.

Holton Shipman will again be on hand to apply for the senior pads next winter. "Shippy" displayed some steady goaltending in the latter weeks of the late lamented campaign but he is still bothered by drives to his left hand side. George Campbell, from the juniors, who stopped everything and everyone but the referees, may also contend for the intercollegiate team. George is the only netman we can bring to mind who wears eye-glasses during a game.

Charles, Driscoll, and Sissons, possibly along with Rey, will bid for the defence assignments. Charles is one of the few present Varsity scoring threats who did anything beyond merely threaten during the past season, while Henry Sissons has been thumping his T.H.L. contemporaries consistently in the Beaver games. Jack Brown, up from the juniors, also merits consideration by virtue of his ability to unleash a blue-line drive that will maintain any goalie's interest in the game. Unfortunately graduation will claim Phil Jeffrey's future hockey services.

"Ace" Lenahan and Jimmy McPherson will be leaving University in June, but with Ripley, McIlquham, Valiquette and the probable O.C.E. trio on deck the blue attacking division can be counted upon to give the sons of old Eli, or James McGill, many a rousing engagement. Jack Lindsay and Art Fremes, both eligible for junior O.H.A. competition against next winter, might also catch a berth on the international team.

Director Stevens stated that the University has no intention of disbanding the junior team this coming season. These were welcome words in so far as the two entire forward lines of the present squad will be still within the junior age-limit next December. Six players may also be expected from U.T.S., including goaler Jack Funston, whose two years of O.H.A. experience should be an acquisition to the blue troops. Upper Canada and St. Michael's will also send their representatives to register at Simcoe Hall and, with the additional unheralded out-of-town hockey talent, there should be no dearth of experienced material to fill the few vacancies.

Etcetera—

During the 1936 Christmas holidays the intercollegiate hockeyists may meet the U. of Minnesota team in Minneapolis . . . Western, McMaster, and the University of Michigan are anxious to form a compact international group which would eliminate the expensive trips to the eastern colleges . . . Unless a much greater interest is shown by the players themselves in the Varsity Second team next season the University will forfeit its T.H.L. franchise . . . To those faithful who still follow the basketball boys even in these troubled times of academic pressure the Athletic Office passes on the word that tomorrow night's game should be a standout.

WYCLIFFE BEATEN BY EMMANUEL

Superior Playing Overcomes Early Lead Scored by Rivals

EDWARDS STARS IN GAME

The high-gear cage machine of Emmanuel easily took the measure of a hapless Wycliffe quint last evening in Hart House gym, 26-15. By virtue of this victory, the winning combine gained a tie with Knox for possession of league leadership in Group VI, each squad having won five tilts and lost one. Wycliffe just sunk further into the "cellar", absorbing another loss to their previous string of five successive setbacks.

The fray was merely a display of the difference between a "tops" outfit and a "cellar" combination. Emmanuel showed class in scoring punch, passing attack and smooth floor work. Their fast breaking offense had the weary Wycliffe warriors completely baffled. They had possession of the ball about three-quarters of the game.

In the first few minutes of the opening stanza, Wycliffe secured a temporary 4-0 lead; but then the Emmanuel ball-bouncers went to work. They hung up two quick scores to knot the count and then assumed the lead to the end of the contest. At half time the victors maintained a 12-8 advantage. Emmanuel gained strength in the final canto, displaying pretty "cut-ins" and smartly executed plays. At no time did the losers threaten.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

The U.C. hockey team won its way into the finals yesterday when it defeated the St. Hildians 2-0 in the sudden-death game of the semi-finals. It was a good game, even though the St. Hilda's girls seemed a bit slow. U.C. will now meet Vic Seniors in the finals, which will consist of two games, the first to be played tomorrow from eleven to twelve at Varsity Arena.

Unfortunately yesterday's game was marred by an accident. Jean Atkinson on the U.C. defence checked Elaine Knight rather heavily, and Elaine's skate somehow met Jean's chin, giving her a cut that required three stitches to close. Hard luck, Jean!

Don't forget the interfaculty swimming meet will be this Thursday night in the Hart House pool. It should be an even better event than usual, since interfaculty competition will be very keen. Peggy Bailey will be Vic's star performer, Molly Stevens will probably win points for U.C., the Ord sisters will be out to put St. Hilda's in the lead, and Midge Murphy and Phil Haslam are determined to retain the championship they won last year.

THE TUCK SHOP STAFF can well boast of long memories. Four years ago a student charged two dollars worth of sporting equipment there and did not return to pay it. Soon after, the gentleman was graduated and went to Scotland. He returned last week and walked into the Tuck Shop, to be greeted with cries from Pat and Jack. "What about that two dollars?"

Irishmen, like elephants, never forget.

EPIDEMICS at the University of Texas may cause the closing of the school for a time, if the diseases do not stop spreading soon. Influenza, measles, mumps, and colds account for most of the sickness, which is so widespread that all social functions have been postponed and the class attendance rule has been suspended. Eighty new cases of illness were reported in one day.

A SCHOLARSHIP worth five hundred dollars is offered by Hamilton College to all men in America by the name of Leavenworth. The college authorities do not say whether a deed of poll would be allowed.

"WANTED — A COMMUNIST" read an advertisement in the Yale Daily News. The advertiser, a journalist, was writing a magazine article on "College Communists" and wanted to obtain the real communist viewpoint. However, no one at Yale answered the advertisement so we are led to the conclusion that either there are no communists at Yale or, if there are, they are much less anxious for publicity than Comrade Wayman's red brigade.

ARTS BALL

Half an inch, half an inch, half an inch onward
Into the seething mass danced the three hundred;
Couples to right of them, couples to left of them,
All over their insteps, stumbled and blundered.
Theirs not to halt or fly, theirs but to dance or die,
Theirs not to reason why,
But Oh! how we've wondered . . .

A PROFESSOR in Maryland opened an examination paper, and found a letter which read:

"Dear Professor:
"If you sell any of these answers to a humorous magazine, please send me my share."

And if you're lucky, you may get one "made in a small size which fits into a leather folding case" so that you can take it with you to convince Mr. Schmaltz of the United Pork Packers that you really are educated. Those framed ones are pretty awkward in a street car.

There is a solution to this problem of imitation diplomas, though—an inspired solution which should be put before the proper authorities without delay. The University must keep its own sheep! All over the front campus. Maybe students could agree to look after their own diplomas until they were ready for them. Raise your own and be sure of getting the real thing.

Of course, it might be a little confusing if they got into lecture rooms and started asking questions.

The Settlement is asking the support of any undergraduate, graduate, or staff member who would be willing to give a morning or afternoon a week to this social research. The area of the survey is typical of most industrial sections in Toronto. Volunteers may report directly to the Settlement, 23 Grange Road, or to the S.C.M. offices, in Hart House or the Household Science Building.

TORONTO WRITERS' CLUB

The Writers' Club itself is giving no remuneration or award to the writers of the best stories. If, however, these stories are bought by other magazines all money will be given to the author, there being no cost whatsoever attached to the submission of material.

The Writers' Club is willing to meet all the expenses of the editing and the publication of the magazine in order that struggling and ambitious writers may get the audience they deserve. The continuance of this project will depend upon the success of this first endeavour. If results warrant it, it may become an annual event.

Manuscripts should not be more than 5,000 words and should be sent as quickly as possible to Manuscript Editor, 1606 Northern Ontario Building, Toronto.

WOMEN NOW BECOME IMMORTALS ENTER SACRED HART HOUSE PORTALS

In an interview with Warden Bickersteth yesterday afternoon, it was learned that women at the University of Toronto have finally been granted permission to take advantage of the facilities available at Hart House, hitherto man's sanctum sanctorum. He felt that some apology was due the women of the university for so long denying them the great opportunities afforded by this fine institution.

Warden Bickersteth stated that alternate days are to be allotted to the women, while Sundays will be reserved for the bringing together of the sexes. Students will be kept posted, said Warden, as to when they can use the building by means of signs at all entrances, similar to those used at steam baths. Although he admitted that this might cause a little confusion at first, he was trusting to the innate intelligence of students to enable them to grasp this situation within the first hundred years.

"Our students cannot find jobs when they graduate so we have decided to keep them in School for another couple of years just to make sure we all do not get fired for a while yet," commented the Dean over a beer mug. "Engineering is a lousy job anyway. Say, by the way, did I tell you of the bridges and the dams I built?"

Volumes Seen to Keep Man Warm, the Book Worm

LIBRARIANS ANGRY

What ho, Horatio! A short while ago the fact was made known that a student with a snatch of suspicious sneakiness, did, by affixing a fictitious "John Henry" to night slips, maliciously and with intent to gather moss, make off with a number of books, and was fined sixty-five simoleons. The Varsity has just learned that the story was wrongly published.

The books were not, by the way, used to widen the education of the alleged "book-worm". When interviewed in his comely basement quarters on King St., he advised all concerned that the tomes had been set afire to keep his feet warm. Moreover, the sum paid to the University Library was not $65.00 but $650.73, computed according to the ordinary telephone rates (person to person), plus amusement tax, minus the (Continued on Page 4)

The popular young lady was snatched while she slept by the fiend, who used a ladder constructed of pieces of the Divinity Chapel Altar helped out with shelves out of the library, and bound together with the Provost's suspenders. As the ladder was twenty feet too short, the whole structure was placed on three volumes of Anthony Adverse.

READS BIBLE STORIES

White Russia exploded at yesterday's meeting of the Joint Executive of Students Infrinitive Councils when I. Naughtystuff, Czardom's gift to Infinity College, charged that The Varsity had sold its birthright for a mess of Hearstage.

"The Varsity streamlined beads are the essence of yellow journalism," quoth the doughty warrior, who has kicked up considerable of both mud and dust on his Rhodes to fame. Some of these heads stretch across twenty or thirty columns, and others across the whole page. Such lines as 'Varsity Win from Broadview' screech out in cold type to demoralize our innocent young students. The Student Feast Movement, on the other hand, seldom gets more than a hundred and fifty thousand words in an issue."

Asked by a literate member of the council if he ever read The Varsity, Naughtystuff replied in the negative. "There are too many words of two syllables and more. That is another complaint I wish to register. Why doesn't The Varsity use words which a person of average intelligence, such as myself," boasted the member from Infinity, "can understand? However, one of my highbrow friends attempts to interpret it for me. I'm not sure, but I think some of the editorials are immoral."

Naughtystuff affirmed that he was never without a copy of Hurlbuts Bible Stories, and found them of great help in his weaker moments. "It appears to me that the University would be a far, far better place for everybody if a passage from that book were published every day in place of such rot as suggestions to read, and so forth."

Count Naughtystuff denied that Barbara Hutton had refused him seventeen times. It was only fifteen.

Early this morning I. G. Naughtystuff was seen attempting to jump the iron fence surrounding Baldwin House. He half made it. No damage was done.

The new building at St. Michael's College has been condemned by order of the Toronto City Architect. Officials at the City Hall and at the college declined to give the reason.

Interviewed by the Varsity last night the architect suggested numerous reasons for condemning the new structure. The bizarre orange coloured window frames are not in keeping with Irish traditions of the college and are considered a taunt to a large fraternal society. He expressed regret "that the building should be condemned when on the verge of completion." He drew consolation from the fact that no change will be made in the plans—they have not been drawn yet.

Latest Arrests Will Justify Attempts to Make the Bureau Respectable

PROMINENT PEDPLE RUINED

Alec Peterless and Marjorie Pett were arrested yesterday afternoon in the Women's Varsity office on a charge of defrauding the public. These two have been operating in co-operation with the notorious marriage bureau of Mrs. Stull and calling themselves the "Date Bureau". The police allege that this has only been a lucrative "skin game" in which unsuspecting students of the university have been victimized.

The racket has been to charge an unstipulated sum which ranges from ten cents to ten dollars for blind dates. The police claim to have linked the operators with a dominion-wide white slave ring. The method has been to register the girls at one of the more puritanical colleges and then to arrange dates with them for all the lonely male hearts.

The police are not making any definite statements as yet but they imply that many prominent people are involved. The Dean of Women in one of the largest Arts colleges is at present under surveillance.

The original charge was laid by a student at S.P.S. who reported that (Continued on Page 4)

War in Ethiopia Disclaimed By Famous Blind Pig Doctor

By Major R. E. Bowels
(Famed Arctic Explorer)

Dawson City, N.W.T., March 3.—In an exclusive interview with an old negro in Seattle tonight, it was discovered by the Varsity that there is no truth in the rumour that there is war in Ethiopia, since according to good reports the Ethiopians have been extinct for years. It was also discovered that the Great War is definitely over, and that most automobile owners are either men or women.

Several theories were discussed during the interview to explain what is going on in Ethiopia if it isn't a war, the first and most likely explanation being the Poindexter Dogsbody hypothesis which states that Italians are not really Italians but somebody else who have gone to Ethiopia to shoot off pinwheels and nigger-chasers for fun. This theory is held very lightly in some quarters, where an alternate theory is put forward, the Cornelius Ramsbottom presupposition. According to Ramsbottom, the Italians are really Italians who have (by documentary evidence found in the toe of an old boot in Addis Ababa) been going to Ethiopia every fall to play snakes and ladders.

Much research has been done during the past few weeks by other eminent scientists, among them Humphrey Dinkle, the eye doctor who operates on blind pigs, but the Varsity was unable to get much definite information from them since they cannot read or write or speak very well.

Grads Deplore Highbrowism

So we're highbrows are we? We are, says Wm. Lyon Mackenzie King. We are, says Howard Ferguson. We are, says Dean Mitchell. The Varsity, according to these three former editors and managing editors is the nuts. It seems that the guys running it have got the idea that they are educated. Well, even if we are pretending, four out of five do. As the old saying goes, "Give a man enough rope and he'll smoke himself to death." We are pretty gol darn sure that these three men of fame were once young themselves. "Youth must have its fling" or maybe their foreign relations have made them forget how to speak the King's English. Yes sreee, a man gets older and looks at the young half-pints who do what he used to do and says, "Youth is a wonderful thing. It's too bad that it must be wasted on the young."

We are given to believe that the three above-mentioned were at their best, a menace to public society, and even if they weren't they should have been. All things being equal, the whole three critics of our journalistic efforts might be average. But equality is the spice of life, and the puerile politicians prating pantingly about our poor paper couldn't run the white mouse maze in the psychology department in under twenty-eight seconds, even if they were in condition, and the cheese was walking.

The Varsity does not want anyone to think that we regard seriously such juvenile jesting. Heh, heh! Why, we just gloat on it. But if the sweet little, paunch-bellied funsters don't pipe down, the end shall be swift and sure. Mind you, we don't threaten them. But if we must, we must . . .

Investigation Needed. Let Us Investigate

There is one class of workers on this campus for whom no cudgels have ever been taken up. It is time that public attention was directed to their pitiable condition. We refer to the girls in the University Library.

The students as a whole are under the strange misconception that these girls are at the desk for their benefit and are constantly annoying them with requests for books. What could be more disconcerting when one is in the middle of an animated description of last night's party than to have an inconsiderate freshman tap impatiently on the desk with his book slips, casting anxious glances at the clock meanwhile. The senior years have grown more thoughtful through time and are now generally to be seen in the stacks in search of their own books.

Another faux pas made by inexperienced students is that of asking for books not on the reserve shelf. The librarians have tried to combat this evil by depositing slips for books from the stacks in a special wire cage hidden behind a pillar and then forgetting about them. Unfortunately at the end of ten or fifteen minutes the student begins to sigh and fidget nervously from one foot to the other. In that case the younger and more tender-hearted girls on the staff have been known to make the hazardous journey into the bowels of the earth and usually return in five minutes or so, dusty but triumphant, with the wrong book.

Some of the girls have found it advantageous, when they see a reading-room slip approaching in the hands of one of these undergraduate bores, to move over to where night books are dispensed and look superior. When someone asks for an over-night book they slip unobtrusively over to the sign Hand in reading room and week slips here, and gaze abstractedly off into the men's reading room. This procedure can generally be counted on to deter any but the most intrepid student.

These noble girls have suffered long and silently. Now and then one succumbs under the strain and has to be replaced by another more robust. If we, by this plea, succeed in mitigating their lot, even slightly, we shall not have lived in vain.

Sillyisms

There are two sides to every question. Hence there are two sides to every side. Which leaves very little else but sides. Take one if you want. There are four sides to a fence. It is uncomfortable to put one leg on each side, therefore the only thing to do is to jump from one side to the other. Or lie down underneath.

What is one man's meat is another man's poison. But the other man's meat is my poison. Which leaves us alternately being poisoned and poisoning.

A rail in the fence is worth two in the pants. Or when is a knot hole not whole. If two eyes are at the knot hole the eyes have it, if only one I have it.

Which all goes to show that there are two sides to each side of every side.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., March 3.—The Border Police reported the capture here late last night of two members of the faculty of the University of Trona, who were attempting to cross to the American side by wading along the top of the falls. They gave their names as Miss Marry Parks and Professor of Philosophy Anderson and briefly stated that they were eloping.

"We didn't mean to cross the border illegitimately but we didn't want to honeymoon on the Can. side because we wanted to see through the Shredded Wheat Factory."

The Border Police Chief stated, however, that the professor was not being arrested for illegally entering the (Continued on Page 3)

The contest is open to undergraduates of all colleges and faculties, single and female, and all other things being equal, will be given to the young lady nearest seventeen years of age. The concours for this year's award will be held in Alumnae Hall tomorrow night. Registration cards or some other determination of sex must be shown at the door.

The procedure is as follows. Various members of the staff will parade around the hall in Mandarin costumes or oriental night shirts and then perform two Chinese plays. SCORE A MYSTERY

Last night in a close fought, hard hitting, roughing, smashing, dashing crashing, hopping skipping and jumping battle, the fighting blue clad puck pushers from our own dear school took a bitter, battering, biffing game of bat the bootheel from the Ontario Ladies' College squad of dainty battling biffing roughing fat old ladies at the rink up the street.

The game was marked throughout by peculiar rushes in the wrong direction by both sides, the Toronto team in particular displaying a magnificent inability to score and an absolute distaste for crossing the opposing blue line. The score was quite difficult to ascertain since both goal judges were in the same cage after the first period, and the score-keepers were busy writing phone numbers with the electric sign at the cod of the rink.

Tea and lady-fingers were served at intermission, and at the start of the second period our fellows certainly went like the very dickens, yes indeed. They became tired quickly however, and by the time the game had finished, everybody had gone home except the two goalies who were quite fresh, at least the Toronto goal-keeper was because that's what the ladies' college goal-keeper told him when he wanted to help her with her pads. So they nailed a bunch of boards over the goals and skated together with great fun. Oh what sport and everything!

STARTLING INNOVATIONS

Communists of this university swarmed across the campus last night, and after a brief struggle captured Hart House, historic hangout of prosperous-paunched clergymen.

In tattered gown, arms and legs rotating like windmills, their leader, Professor George deTiddelthums Glazesteam pounded the heavy doors of the House, demanding entrance in the name of Russia.

Emerging from his bawth the Warden came to the entrance, a commanding figure. Attempting to gain audience he thrust himself forward and held up his hand in the Nazi salute, symbolic of Hart House. As silence fell over the multitude the Warden bickered with them. With impressive dignity he said, "My father was the Archbishop of Canterbury." Amid the roar of approval which followed his succeeding sentences were lost. It is believed that he made reference to "London club, Bessy, Stanley, Eddie, and Billy." Although he succeeded in holding them at bay for some time, the Warden was forced to give ground and the horde entered. En masse, they forced Room and ejected the clergy, heavy-eyed and -paunched, after forcing them to perform gymnastic feats.

Plans for the immediate future were drawn up in the Debates Room, Professor Glazesteam occupying the chair. He sat on the floor, his head on the seat, and one leg over the chandelier in characteristic pose. As a concession to him, the Communists decided to adopt English as their official language. Consequently the proceedings were slowed up considerably.

As this paper goes to press the following resolutions have been passed. (1) The warden is to be forced to eat the meals in Great Hall. (2) Irene is to have the order of Virtue—moved by Loeb. (3) This last was loudly ac-

'RAY FOR ANNABELLE
Annabelle Twinkle, the Blonde Bomber, I Follies, won the cookie-weight championship for dear old Varsity at the Little Mussey last night when she pounded out a K.O. victory over Lulu Pierce, the Battling Bim from Keen's.

The Keen Kutie was full of the old mustard and was pretty cagey in the first round, but she couldn't take it and Annabelle crossed her up in the second. The Larruping Lulu had her timing and distance down pat but Annabelle got under her guard and that was that. Her in-wind was terrific, and Lulu faded under the pressure.

"But Dr. Highboy," we interrupted, "what about the Toronto girls?"
"Ah," said the Doctor, raising his eyebrows significantly, "you know what these city collegiates are like."

The girls in Whitney Hall are the worst, according to Dr. Highboy. She blames dimly lit common rooms with plenty of chesters and little chap-crotonas. "St. Hilda's and St. Jo's are not as bad because they haven't got so much freedom. Besides those girls can cover up things better," said Dr. Highboy.

ITALY'S BIRTH RATE MATTER OF STATE AT GRAD BANQUET

Natives in Very Bad Way
Since Refuse to Work
All Day

BIGGER, BETTER WOMEN

The Blessed Events Group of the M.C.S. held its final informal meeting in the Senior Common Room last night under the guidance of Merry Riddle. One of the problems under discussion was the theoretical population of Italy. It was noted that Italy claimed that her birth rate was rising rapidly but the lecturer was able to state authoritatively that this was a lie and, in reality, the birth rate was rapidly lowering.

The topic then switched to Africa and the group concluded unanimously that the natives were in a very bad way since they refused to work all day in order to enjoy the comforts of civilization at night.

No one seemed to be getting anywhere but this group was taken very seriously, the men doing most of the work. Curry, according to himself, was quite likeable and objected to violence with the assertion, "I'm more use to myself alive than as a fertilizer." The members believed in being altruistic. They upheld the sufficiency of German women on the affidavit of Mr. Riddle, who has travelled extensively on the continent. They agreed that the United States could not have been made except by force. A note of thanks was tendered to Mr. Riddle, the girls claiming that they were bigger and better women in every way from weekly contact with him.

As the "unlabeled fathering" ad-journed, the voice of the ghost of West Wall was heard to sadly remark, "We were not amused."

COMMUNISM RAMPANT AT GRAD BANQUET

Intemperance is Rumoured as Failure of Graduating

BEER AND WINE

Tearing down all British traditions, Lieutenant-Governor Sluice of Hepburnia, gushed all over the graduating class of of University College at their annual banquet in Hart House last night and told them "that the only way out was to follow Moscow for a bigger and better world."

In a long dolorous speech, he warned the graduating year that "there was no hope", and inspired the lads with a short history of all the misery they would contend against when they left all the august halls.

"We must break away from the Empire," he continued, "we must deny the monarchy and set government house in Chorley Park if we are to reach our salvation."

Lieutenant-Governor Sluice broke all the dams of rhetoric and stormed after Premier Drippworm. "If he will not come to tea with me and the wife, I will invite Mare Confide and give him all the lowdown." His Excellent Sluice contended bitterly.

The banquet was prefaced by several parties in various sections of the campus. The most elaborate orgy took place in the junior common room of University College, where over 100 gallons of beer and wine were served to the thirst-mad undergraduates.

The executive had a special binge in the office of Principal Walrus and were last seen rolling beer kegs down the front steps to the tune "We're graduating now," accompanied by Bernie Scraffer on the mandolin.

From the stygian depths of that darkened vale of nonentity the Big Blue Blades careened dizzily with a meteoric rush which burst forth into a pyrotechnical display as they ascended the throne of victory fraught with dull, dank and acrimonious assault, when in a Homeric battle the Big Blue Blades blasted their way to a 2-0 booming record.

A drama of the ice lanes was enacted last night at the Glacian surface as the Big Blue Blades put on a whirling attack that wound up and culminated into a blaring trail of serpentine spray of flying frost as yawning cavern of the opposing citadel beckoned the sharp-shooting snipers, before a thundering crowd of ominous silence. scene was silent, when have the oracular faculties ever sensed such silence, the stillness was awe-inspiring, even the swiftly coagulating surface dared not creek, suddenly like the fulminating thunderbolt thrown from Jovian heights a rubber disc flit through the air to snip the corded meshes with a swirling swish. A score!!

Again before the unsuspecting corded cottage was aware, another insistent piercing blow rent the inner meshes. But that was all . . . In a shower of flying rubber the silence was broken by sonorous soundings of ricocheting shots from the boards which protested loudly but vainly, as they bent in stavian homage. The final gong rang but no victory cry arose from the void, no adulation was flung across the foggy frozen floor on which the play took place, no pennons were flaunted on high. The Big Blue Blades had held a shadow practice.

IT'S LEAP YEAR, GIRLS

Did you ever know that although the Whitney phones are always busy, every ring is answered by a bouncing bevy of beauteous boarders still looking (beauteous) and hoping that in spite of expert electrical engineers, the lights (especially over the tubs) are always on the blink? That all last night's baths were taken by candle-light, in the approved fashion? That Whitney Hall girls do wear flannelette pyjamas? and that men's styles are the most popular—although the closets are still empty? That all the ground floor windows are man-proof, and the library is not? That the residents have no monopoly on the pulchritude of the place?

And also that a man's purity test percentage is no good, it doesn't rate a common room rehabing? That professors are not the object of sighs and sublimation, but of undergrads (with cars) are? That week-end leaves are the most popular (sort)?

That (last but not least) this is Leap Year?

And also the alcoholic content of this story is 650 per cent O.P.?

THE SPORTSWOMAN

Last night the athletic directorate decided to have a skating party at the Lillian Massey. Although they gave it cold glances all evening the pool would not freeze so they covered it over with the diving board and had a roller skating party instead. Miss Larky was a charming hostess in a charming outfit complete with pillows and assisting her in keeping the guests off the tiles were Reedy Ardour, Merry Pignam, Jean Atrelatives, Moosie Cowanalf, Jean Gravy and other members of the directorate.

Among those seen dodging the pillars were some of the girls from you-sew-saw college, Holly and Hedge Pshaw, Silly McBeary, Alice Hellsoot and Bib Leech. Those representing the old Ontario Stranded were Ruthless Heavens, Batty Junkandthensome, Hazel Skybluepink and Erna Lung.

The salts of the earth and the fighting Irish appeared with saintly halos and hellos. Dirty grubby Elaine Nightmare and Idlaclare Odds were last seen doing backflips for the benefit of Bunny (McLaughlin) Buick, and Mud-gorie Mustbow.

This delightful affair was marred only by the sudden disappearance of the stranded Victorians, who discovered that the girls from Gownsteadlearn University had left the measles as consolation to Varsity for not winning the Bronze Baby. It was announced during the course of the evening that the girls from the above mentioned University had considered the Baby as being indecently dressed, even though they believed in the wide open spaces. Hence the bronzed and bruised Baby had been covered by a white—ankle-revealing white tunic, with purple crest on the front and was resting without embarrassment in the halls of Gownsteadlearn.

Mr. Flickerstuff sent a message over from Hart House that the boys had decided to give up their privileges in said building for Lent, and were willing to let the girls have it, since this is Leap Year. The rolling-skating party immediately adjourned to the Heart House pool and although there was no water in the tank since Dumbaster University boys had pulled up the plug by mistake, last Saturday night, the girls staged a very enjoyable swimming meet. A vegetable dinner was then served in the squash courts whereupon the Hall Committee came in and sang "We're building up to an awful Lent-down."

"There once was a lad from Boston, Mass., Who stood in the water up to his knees."

It doesn't rhyme now, but just wait till the tide comes in.

Last night at 8.27 p.m. E.S.T. Trinity elevator men went on strike. Jim, Bob and even Art, the night man, decided that they would no longer raise or lower students on their way to lectures or to meals.

In an interview with Mr. J. H. Whistler, head of '36, The Varsity found out that the majority of '36 students were already fasting for Lent, and as for lectures, they never went anyway. Mr. J. A. S. Pinchcliffe, head of college, was also interviewed. "We have arranged," said Mr. Pinchcliffe, "to have the first beer men carry the edible material from the dining hall to the various floors so that the others may feed. We find that the first beer men, as they are not allowed to use the elevator, are in good shape to climb two or five flights of stairs."

It was also the good fortune of The Varsity to interview Provost Boosave. Dr. Boosave, not long ago, was visiting, was at a play staged by the St. Bilge's Alumni, and being slightly not himself, was heard to mutter to one of the ushers, "Sew me to a sheet."

"With regard to the strike, Mr. Boosave said, "Yes, yes, yes, . . . (no he hadn't been to the Boobair), just an old Trinity custom."

students from cutting down their efficiency by worrying about the approaching finals. It is felt that the new dance-orientation will provide a much needed recreational centre.

The Medical Society has been given full charge of the dancing program. This society has done so much for the dancers of the campus this year that they are felt to be best qualified for the important task. It is understood that Leroy Smith and his New York orchestra will be on hand each evening to supply the music.

The Hall will be run on a dime-a-dance basis. Members of the Faculty have stipulated they be admitted free, in order that they may have a better chance to get to know their students. This will be especially useful during examination month, when professors and students will be able to talk over their papers to the sweet strains of a waltz.

The new Hall will be open from 9 to 2 each week-night, for a month after its opening. During May, it will remain open until 4 each morning in order that students may be able to drown their sorrows in music. It is rumoured that the Great Hall of Hart House will serve four o'clock breakfasts throughout the month.

The heroic members of the Medical Society are enthusiastic about the new plan, and prophesy a great future for Leroy Smith and his orchestra on the campus.

Are you a zombie? Do you know? If not, why not? In a word—are you zombie conscious?

Recent enquiries at this university have revealed the startling fact that the student body, as a whole, is definitely not zombie-conscious. Many, when questioned about their feelings on the subject, merely looked blank and confessed complete ignorance. The prevalence of zombies everywhere on the campus—among students and faculty, in classrooms, common rooms and libraries (especially libraries) inspired two Varsity reporters (female) to conduct a research into these conditions. Student opinion was sought, and some interesting opinions were gathered.

"I am definitely zombie-conscious," said Miss Mattie Mickle, president of the newly-formed S.P.E.Z. (Society for the Prevention of the Exploitation of Zombies); "the most serious problem facing the world today is that of the downtrodden zombie. The ruthlessness of Zombie-Controllers in their exploitation of these unfortunate is too horrible to be believed. I feel it my duty—"

"One moment, Miss Mickle," we interrupted, "before you go any further, just what is a zombie?" "Zombies," said Miss Mickle impressively, "are people who are dead both ways from the neck. (Special to the Varsity, world copyright reserved) March 4.—Provost Crossgrain, famous kidnapper of little Aggie Freegoosin, stopped here at an early hour this morning, and stayed long enough to have the girl initiated into the Ojibway tribe. The young lady will henceforth be known as Little Manekhed, and will be called Audrey for short.

"This act of mine," said the mastermind of crime, "will render all efforts of the police in the matter null and void, since the warrant was made out in the name of Aggie Freegoosin, and under the B.N.A. Act a new warrant cannot be given out in the case for forty-six years. Now, the Statute of Limitations will outlaw any action in seven years, so you see that the authorities are completely foiled and baffled, and vice versa. I consider this a big break for the police, since they couldn't catch me anyway."

"The trouble with me," said Crossgrain, "is that I should have gone in for mathematics. Every time I see a good figure I want to add it up."

4.—Two men positively identified as Googlygoosin, Swaziland, Mar. Provost Crossgrain, the Freegoosin kidnaper, were slain here today in a running gunfight with the police. Other arrests are pending.

Lilabner, Kentucky, March 4. — A startling disclosure was made here at an early hour this morning, when it was revealed by the authorities that little Aggie Freegoosin had not been kidnapped at all, but has been living here for the past twenty-three years under the name of Fantasia Brown.

Wotadump, Peru, Mar. 4.—A woman giving her name as Aggie Freeboozin was today sentenced to sixty years hard labour for the abduction of Abner Crossgrain, a Canadian.

Roundaround, Indiana, Mar. 4.—A man later identified as Peter Crossgrain, daring Canadian kidnapper was fatally shot and killed when caught by the police in the act of stealing a bale of hay. When the fame of their victim was learned, the police apologized heartily. Crossgrain is not expected to recover.

Chief Swiper of the city police force today informed the Varsity that he had not heard anything of the reported kidnapping on the University campus. "It doesn't matter this week though," said the chief, "as my men are resting up after the O'Funnel case. We shall get right to work on it next week, if nothing else turns up," promised the chief.

Sleeping is also prohibited to undergraduates beneath the tables of both the dining and pool rooms. This privilege is reserved for graduate members only.

Students must see the warden concerning arrangements for any special affairs; they are considered quite capable of handling other minor ones per se.

Warden Bickersteth announced in conclusion that bars were soon to be placed across all the windows of Hart House. Even though this might detract from the innocent beauty of the building, it will in no wise interfere with the architectural structure. It might, he said, have the desirable effect of stopping the stampede at the House at certain times and of keeping inside those with wandering tendencies.

"Resolved that euthanasia should be legalized," was successfully upheld by U.C. in the final debate against Victoria College held in the Women's Union yesterday afternoon and U.C. emerged with the shield for the Women's Interfaculty Debating Society.

Miss M. Ridout, leader of the affirmative, declared "that everyone has a right to the easiest death possible but under the present law a doctor is not allowed to end a life of incurable suffering by euthanasia. We no longer allow people to be drawn on the rack and quartered, and it is hopelessly old-fashioned to let people linger in certain death."

Hart House Elections Rough on Eardrums

Milk Wagons, Sandwich Men, Pipe Bands are Gone, but Bells, Loudspeakers and Vocal Chords Still Abound

Lots of noise, clanging of bells and yelling of rival candidates, featured yesterday's Hart House elections. Although the amount of sound and fury and general disturbance was as great as it has ever been, there were few original stunts pulled.

Stranger, Wycliffe's man from the Yukon appeared dressed as a polar bear and (or) an Eskimo, proving conclusively that the House Committee should bear with him for the coming year. He was elected.

A Schoolman began distributing reduced rate tickets to a rink, but the Warden requested that he stop this as it was rather unfair to the other candidates. One group obtained an amplifying device and parked outside the front door of the House, shouting its merits to the whole world.

"No milk wagons shall be hired for advertising, nor shall any professional advertisers be employed on the campus," the Warden ordered, thus keeping from

Talent Welcome in GLEE CLUB

Following the success of the concert given last Sunday evening in the Great Hall by Hart House Glee Club, several men have intimated that they wish to join the club next year. In order that they may become acquainted with the club and its conductor, any member of Hart House who is interested will be welcome in the Music Room, Hart House, on Tuesday evenings from 5 to 6 p.m., at our regular rehearsals. New members will of course not be eligible to take part in the two events still on our agenda for this year.

Regular members are reminded that we are singing at the Alumni night, on March 20, and that in order that extra rehearsals will not be necessary, a consistent attendance for the next two weeks is imperative. The complimentary tickets for this important concert will be allotted on the basis of recent attendance.

Says Untermeyer

REALISM INVADING POETRY,

Though Louis Untermeyer confessed at the Holy Blossom Forum that his lecture must necessarily be superficial, and might be delivered in any first- or second-rate college, yet he gave an interesting interpretation of the universal desire to read and what seemed more acceptable to the audience—he peppered his talk with humorous side-remarks. Man's desire to read, Mr. Untermeyer believed, sprang from two diametrically opposed sources. The first was his desire to escape life. The second his desire to share life more fully—to use literature as a key to life.

From the cradle, according to the lecturer, man is the possessor of an inferiority complex which continues with him through life. His first escape is the fairy tale, in which he identifies him-

FRESHMEN PUZZLED—YES?

Yesterday's jazz issue of The Varsity was a great success, if the opinions of students interviewed around the campus can be taken as a criterion. Almost invariably, the comments were most favourable and the only objection seems to have been that there was only one jazz issue each year.

As usual, the crop of young innocents who didn't realize that it was a jazz issue, and who took everything printed in good faith was not lacking. Freshmen, especially, were prone to admit, after sufficient questioning, that they were amazed and startled to say the least when they saw the screaming headlines.

One freshette of Victoria, in particular, took the front-page streamer so much to heart that she used the long-distance telephone to get in touch with her parents to tell them of the dreadful state of affairs existing at the University. Two Chinese plays are being presented this evening in Alumnae Hall by staff members of Victoria College at an open meeting of the Victoria Women's Dramatic Society. The plays are under the direction of Miss Peggy Ray and will be prefaced by a lecture on Chinese drama by Chancellor Wallace of University College.

The club has undertaken a study of foreign drama, each program including an informal talk on the outstanding characteristics of the masterpieces of the countries chosen, the performance of the most typical play available, the review of a book dealing with theatrical problems, and an open discussion.

The plays chosen are The Thrice Promised Bride and The Robe of Wood. The cast usually includes type

"The King of Britain can never be a rubber stamp," said S. K. Ratcliffe, prominent English journalist, when he spoke to the Women's Canadian Club on "Britain and our New King" Wednesday afternoon.

According to Mr. Ratcliffe, the British monarchy, which has been moving forward within the last three reigns to the ideal of a citizen king, finds fruition and bright hopes for the future in the new king, Edward VIII. Queen Victoria strangely enough, was not popular, her long withdrawal into widowhood and the submergence of court affairs being chiefly responsible. After the Jubilee celebration of 1877, however, the British throne gained steadily in popularity. This results partly from the more intimate knowledge that British subjects have of their king. Edward VII travelled extensively in

TELYS DOWN BLUES 3-2

George Campbell, Varsity goalie, was carried from the ice last night when he was cut across the forehead by Selkirk's skate with but forty seconds of playing time remaining in the U. of T.-Telegram T.H.L. game at the Arena. Earl Selkirk broke away from a blue power play and Campbell sprawled to save as the Telegram forward coasted in on the net. The attacker then tripped over Campbell's outstretched body and one blade ripped open the skin above the goalie's eyebrow.

The game was won by Telegram when Johnson picked up a loose puck inside the Varsity blue line and scored, to give the red team a final 3-2 margin eight minutes before the bell rang.

The Beavers began the excitement in the first period on Creasy's long shot which apparently caught goalie Holmesaw taking forty winks as the Lady Luck dealt a crushing blow to a frantic Varsity cage aggregation last night on the homester's hardwood, as a measly four points snatched the Big Four title and the city championship from the eager hands of Warren Stevens' top-rung tossers and laid these two crowns into the lap of the Broadview invaders. The final whistle found the dribblers of "Scoop" Rennick on the long end of a 35-31 score.

These sudden death affairs, as have been proven, are disastrous for the Blue and White combinations and this stinging setback was somewhat reminiscent of the intercollegiate rugby crown lost on the same "winner take all" basis. In either case, Varsity can enjoy the consolation that she reigned supreme, finishing the regular playing season at the top of the heap. But then, moral victories do not beggar lands and so the Blue pacemakers must weep and wail.

The classic was a see-saw scrap all through. The score was knotted no less than eight times during the course of hostilities. At no interval of play was the verdict assured until, with three minutes remaining in the final stanza, the "Y" boosters staged a determined scoring drive which annexed the triumph.

Festivities opened at a furious pace and the temperature became warmer as

Capacity Crowd Braves Daffydil Night

Atmosphere of Hart House Theatre Thickened and Beclouded
by Puns, Parodies and Practically Pornography

Daffydil opened last night to a sort of another, and there were five capacity crowd in the theatre of Hart House. For four hours an enthusiastic audience and applauded and guffawed the pungent, boisterous humour of the Medical Society in the annual presentation.

Started in 1895, the history of Daffydil night has grown yearly, until it now commands the highest position among the presentations of the various colleges. Long known for the odour of its humour, last night's performance was no disappointment to the expectant crowd. Puns both good and very, very bad were flung about in great number. Jokes which went over largely because of their very daring, were frequent. And combined with all this was acting ability at times of unexpected brilliance. Parodying on songs both popular and operatic was done with a brilliance that astounded the audience.

One of the best received of all the numbers was the presentation by I. J. Speigel of fourth year, of Sherlock Crawford, singing the catchy ditty, "I am Crawford, of coroners the chief."

Each year presented a skit of one sort or another, and there were five capacity crowd in the theatre of Hart House. For four hours an enthusiastic audience and applauded and guffawed the pungent, boisterous humour of the Medical Society in the annual presentation.

Fourth year, famous throughout past years, this year presented an opera, a combination of Faust and Madame Butterfly which was perhaps the most widely acclaimed of all the year offerings.

This year, for the first time, the Medettes are competing for the Daffydil cup, awarded for the best skit of the year.

The coveted Epistaxis, magazine-program which is part of Daffydil Night, is this year even better than usual. The cover design in particular won great praise from the readers. It shows a trio of brilliantly painted female skeletons, of lascivious appearance, tripping the light fantastic with expressions of coy invitation. The book is filled with the usual rough and ready, sledge-hammer type of humour of other years, with a scattering of subtle jokes.

Economic Forces Smother Hamlets

Mr. J. W. Freeborn, member of the Provincial House from North Middlesex recently drew attention to the passing of rural hamlets throughout Ontario, a condition which he and most thinking people deplore. But Mr. Freeborn offered as a remedy to the problem the supply of hydro power at cost to the hamlets. Whatever may be the conditions of the rural villages with regard to the power companies, it is apparent to all that no such minor change could greatly affect the situation which is gradually bringing about their extinction.

The towns and villages throughout Ontario, while picturesque and useful, belong quite definitely to a stage in the growth of our Canadian society. And that stage was for the most part the period prior to the advent of the combines and motor car. While motor cars themselves have played a part in this transition, it is a minor part only. The entire problem is bound up in our social and economic life.

Towns and villages throughout Ontario grew up, not to serve as assets to the landscape, but for strictly utilitarian reasons. They were the trading centres for the communities which surrounded them. A prosperous town was always surrounded by a prosperous community, but the community had to prosper before the towns could do the business which made their welfare possible. They also served as the centre of social life.

Since the hamlets of the country depend upon the communities, their deterioration would seem to signify a decline in the progressiveness of the communities. And this is partly what is happening.

While scientific advances have increased the efficiency of the agricultural industry, it is highly doubtful if the individual members of rural Ontario are as economically stable as they were twenty years ago. The rise of the combine system has apparently done little for the farmer but speed up his production, increase his overhead, and cut his profits to the bone.

The present marketing situation is one which demands either drastic governmental reform or drastic action on the part of the producer. The latter is highly improbable while the former is to say the least, unlikely. Almost without exception the farmer today, when he chooses to market his produce assures everyone concerned but himself of a margin of profit. His livestock, grain and other products go into the hands of commission agents, who sell the produce, take their percentage which assured them of a profit—and then gives the farmer what is left. Overproduction in almost every phase of the industry has made him helpless against this form of exploitation. The farmer takes what he is given. If he doesn't sell it little matters as there is an abundance of available material elsewhere. And the pressure of taxes and interest makes it usually necessary for him to sell when and where he can. The result has been a gradual decline in the prosperity of the agricultural areas—a major reason for the decline of the towns and villages.

It is also true that better roads have facilitated travel, which with the coming of the motor car, has made it convenient and in many cases expedient that the farmer do his buying in the larger centres. But this is an effect rather than a cause.

Social centres in a rural district depend largely upon the security of the society concerned. And when farmers find themselves rapidly losing ground economically they prefer to do their business among strangers rather than among those people who have seen them in better financial conditions. One of the reasons people farm is the element of privacy which the industry grants and when this is no longer possible they turn to other fields.

So when people bemoan the passing of the picturesque and historic rural hamlets they are merely gazing upon the surface of the situation. The individual enterprise which made these towns possible does not belong to an era of huge fortunes and much poverty. They are not dying a natural death—rather they are being strangled by economic forces over which they have no control. They are the victims of a society which is attempting to adjust itself to meet the demands of unbalanced economic conditions and which is finding the task impossible.

Drama Committee Spurs Theatre Art

"The Inspector General" which the University Drama Committee is producing on Monday and Tuesday next in Hart House Theatre, is a brilliant satiric comedy which we can recommend to every undergraduate. It is a play which is ever popular in European and American theatrical circles though it has been rarely produced in Toronto.

The University Drama Committee was formed to produce a play acted by the best undergraduate talent. The various college dramatic societies have their own representatives on this committee and are thus able to superintend the scope of its activities. Further, there is equal representation from the faculties with no organized dramatic society. This provides for the first time an opportunity for all existing university talent. Even for this first play several very good "finds" were made. And the possession of a common drama centre such as this with the widening of contacts which it brings can give exceptional stimulus to the college organizations in their own individual work.

In the past dramatic art has had very little official recognition as a phase of university activity. The University Drama Committee provides a sensible and sufficiently flexible medium for the encouragement of dramatic work in the university and possibly for the beginnings of a university dramatic tradition.

College Spirit In the Classroom

"College spirit" is a sacred platitude. Even freshmen talk about it, and, what is worse, write solemn essays about it, and deplore its decay. What does it mean? To freshmen, and perhaps even to the higher beings in the other years, college spirit seems to mean chiefly willingness to support the different teams, to turn out to dances, to serve on committees, and so on. This is all very sensible, but college spirit of this kind can be left to look after itself. Undergraduates are fond of insisting that we do not go to a University merely to read books, and that "our outlook on life" may become narrow by excessive study. From such narrowness our students are remarkably free. Each batch of first test results in evidence of their broad-mindedness. Now, should not college spirit—that is, the desire to work for the place and not merely for oneself—be equally proper in reading as well as elsewhere? If a man does a thoroughly good piece of work in an essay, in a lab or on an examination, it not only brings him a pass, or honours, or a prize, it also brings credit to the University. It does another thing also. Eagerness in a class does more than most students ever realize to improve lectures—and most of them can be greatly improved. Nothing is more deadening than rows of inert faces. A keen class gets the best a lecturer can give; but passive buckets waiting to be pumped into, and willing to take whatever is pumped, only get what they deserve. The college spirit seen on the sport field could and ought to be transferred to the class rooms, but, like other transplanted things, it needs care in its new surroundings. —The Gateway.

The Scene—Emergency meeting of the Engineering Society.

The Place—Somewhere in S.P.S.

The Time—3.30 p.m.

As the scene opens, Graham, we see the president rising to his feet to open the meeting. The assembled engineers lay aside their copies of the Delineator and Harper's Bazaar and turn politely towards the speaker. All have determined expressions on their faces.

C-C

The President—Decidedly sorry to keep you chaps waiting. I have such a beastly memory I forgot where the meeting was. But to come to the point. I presume you know why we are gathered here today. It seems that an item has appeared in the downtown press which was exceedingly detrimental to the dignity of we engineers—something to the effect that we indulge in afternoon tea. A rather slighting reference was made to our lily-white hands, I believe. (Several members quickly put their hands in their pockets and glance about uneasily.)

The President (continuing)—This cowardly attack cannot remain unanswered. We must act at once. Why, the whole thing is (blushing self-consciously)—it is a damned outrage. (More vigorously) I repeat, it is a damned . . . (A murmur of protest from the audience)—Come come now, Bertie old man, keep it clean, eh?

The President—That's all very well, but I fear you blighters fail to realize the seriousness of the situation. Desperate measures require . . .

First Engineer—Yes, yes, but profanity—hardly the thing, you know. I mean to say, what?

Second Engineer—Quite right, Reggie. It wouldn't be tolerated at Oxford.

The President (sullenly)—Very well then. Perhaps some of you chaps have a suggestion.

Second Engineer—We might sue the paper for libel.

Third Engineer—Ripping idea! Top-hole.

Fifth Engineer—But if we did that, we tea. That would be a bit thick, what? might have to give up our afternoon . . .

First Engineer—I think what we should do is adopt a more vigorous attitude about everything. For instance, Percival, suppose I should commence calling you Spike?

Percival (doubtfully)—Spike? Why, er . . .

(In the distance the Hart House clock is heard striking four. There is an embarrassing pause, during which several members shuffle their feet uneasily and shift about in their chairs. Finally Reggie screws up the courage to speak.) Reggie—Well, whose turn is it to put the kettle on?

Percival (feigning nonchalance)—Oh I already put it on ten minutes ago. Tea is practically ready.

(At this news everyone brightens up immediately. Bertie comes in with the tea and trimmings, and the engineers sit down to their bracing stimulant and chatter happily, amidst the tinkle of dainty china.)

... Who pours today . . . How many lumps old man . . . Yes I heard that too . . . fail to see what all the girls see in him . . . purf one drop two . . . I say, did you chaps hear the latest one about Shirley Temple . . . No really, old fellow, I couldn't eat another bite. I've already had three lady-fingers. . . now don't breathe a word of it to a soul, but I heard that pss pss pss pss . . .

THE CARE AND TREATMENT OF CEREAL

By "Quizote" in the Yale Daily News.

In this great machine age when industry has taken the soul of man and attached fenders, mud guards, and tail lights, we seek release from the restraints of our extra-home life in an orgy of unreason at home. We tear at our flesh with razors, when we could cultivate a rich and handsome beaver all over our faces. We cover ourselves with clothes making our skin delicate when it could have the fine, sturdy elastic quality of the hippopotamus's hide. Yet I am not one to wildly deplore this cult of the irrational; rather do I respect it as an exhibition of spirit in a generally disillusioned age. Yet for the sake of the happiness of those around us—we always think of that because we are civilized—we must keep one or two fingers in the pie of reason, even though rationalists have a lot of crust and the pie be a little sticky. That is why I feel justified in raising the unpleasant question of the proper way to prepare cereal.

You all know people—you whisper their names among yourselves—who subscribe to the school which believes in putting on sugar first. Horrible! Yet, I can remember a time when I was quite young I saw a man put only sugar on his cereal and then—I hardly think I should tell you—mashed it into the oatmeal until he had a blobby ooze. My mother pulled my cap over my eyes and rushed me out of the dining room so precipitately that I stumbled over an extended foot and in my fall cut myself rather badly, but that is aside from the point. I can remember my mother telling my father in lowered tones and blushing violently. That evening I had a talk with father.

A few years later I was on the loose in New York, and as young boys will, I had strayed into some pretty low dives. It was down near the ghetto that I passed a restaurant and saw through the dirty panes a vicious-looking man who used cream alone on his cereal. That, of course, is vice.

But it is the more common form of perversion on which I wish to lecture—those who put sugar on first. Sometimes this is done out of sheer devil-may-care frivolity, and, well, I suppose we should not be too harsh with our censures. Some people—artists in particular—have to find some outlet for the wild forces that go into their being. Even so, it is difficult not to shudder at such a repulsive action.

In most cases, Sugar First is the result of premeditated irrationalism of the basest and vilest sort. The flaws,

SR. U.C. TRIUMPHS IN CAGE PLAYOFF

Downs Jr. School 27-20 as Series Proceeds to Determine Berths in Finals

U.C. TEAMWORK SUPERIOR

In the first game of the interfaculty basketball group playoffs Sr. U.C. handed Jr. S.P.S. a 27-20 trimming yesterday afternoon in the big gym. These two teams and Emmanuel, all champions of their various groups, will play off to decide an opponent for the winner of the Sr. Vic, Dents and Jr. Meds group.

The game between School and U.C. showed only a fair brand of basketball and neither team looms as a serious threat to the championship held by Sr. Victoria. The game was fast enough but was marred by poor ball handling, especially by School. University College worked well together while the Engineers seemed superior individually.

School started off with a bang and looked like the ultimate winners. With Usatis popping in two field goals and two foul shots, the S.P.S. cagers ran up a total of sixteen points in the first half. The red and white quintet were held to 11 points, Bamsky and Humenick each getting two baskets and Sharpe a field goal and charity.

In the second half it was a different story. With the college men sticking to their men like leeches and the demoralized Engineers unable to drop but one hoop, a substantial lead was soon built up for U.C. Humenick ran wild to score eight points while Casson, Krueger and Sharpe divided 8 points between them. Usatis dropped two charities and Ballagh a hoop for the total score of the S.P.S. squad. School at no time threatened to regain the lead and University College rode to an easy victory on the crest of their second period scoring spurge.

Jr. S.P.S.: Usatis, Bishop, McRae, Ballagh, Walsh, Archibald, Johnson, Fisher, Detweiler and Pilsworth.

Sr. U.C.: M. Mirsky, Bamsky, Casson, Humenick, Krueger, Hipman, J. Mirsky, Laskin, Sharpe.

the failure to satisfy, are so obvious. Once the sugar is on, the cream will simply wash it all away. The Irrationalists assert that, in the ease of dry cereals, the cream drives the sugar down through to where it will creep around until it coats evenly each corn flake or grape nut. This is the wildest sort of fancy. The first thing that occurs to me to say to this type of argument is, "Pooh!" It simply is not in the power of cream to do such a complicated job; cream is too simple a substance. The sugar immediately washes to the bottom of the bowl and is irredeemably lost.

On smooth cereals, of course, the cream just sweeps the sugar to the sides where it may be reclaimed, though not without a great deal of ugly slushing, and the results of unprofessional redemption are disagreeable; there is always too much sugar here, and too little there.

No, gentlemen, however much freedom we allow ourselves, in other things, in the case of the proper irrigation and care of cereal there is only one clean, wholesome, and logical method. You must pour on your cream gently and devotedly until it has reached every portion you wish lubricated. Then, with a graceful, supple motion you must powder your sugar so evenly that it will sink through the cream and dust the material beneath with a delicate, invisible sheen of sweetness. Some of the sugar will be absorbed by the cream, thus adding a certain exotic tang to the liquid which makes the cereal so-so-good. Mmmmm!

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Jim Tiller

We didn't jazz the interfaculty hockey situation although it was open for all manner of wise-cracks. At the first glance, the play-off rules, as now instituted, seem to rival the much disputed final rounds of Olympic hockey for complications and are almost as confusing. This is, however, only apparent. Digging deeper into the matter, one finds these play-offs sensibly and methodically arranged. They were necessitated by a booming mercury and the "near" approach of the period of intensive study. The fact that The Varsity will soon go out of circulation for another year may have had something to do with it, too.

The leading three teams in each of the three groups were declared "in". Then the second and third teams of each group were turned loose, with a two-game series per pair to eliminate three of the nine. These games were Series A, B, and C for Groups 1, 2 and 3, respectively. Now, the first teams will each have a two-game encounter with a winner of one of Series A, B and C, with an added provision that it shall be a team from another group. These contests will be officially known as Series D, E and F, and will culminate next Wednesday barring tie-games. This will leave three teams in the hunt for the Jennings Cup, necessitating Series G, H and maybe I. Or will they skip I and call it J?

The Broadview basketballers are on their way to another Dominion championship, maybe. They beat Varsity last night to win the Big Four title in what was reported to be the best and most thrilling cage-game of the year. The Broadview boys played nice ball but we think they are unlikely to realize Coach Rennick's dream of three successive Canadian championships, junior, intermediate and then senior. We'd like to see them do it—it would be something to write about, but that step to senior is a mighty big one.

Last night's T.H.L. hockey game which Varsity lost to Telegram was marred by an accident when goalkeeper George Campbell's forehead was struck by a skate as he dived to smother a shot. What makes it doubly unfortunate is that Varsity had already lost the game and anyway they were out of the running for the play-offs. Campbell's play was surely an ideal example of the good old game-for-the-game's-sake spirit. It's easy to play hard when you've almost won but it takes courage to take risks on a beaten team.

The interfaculty basketball play-offs commence this afternoon at 5 p.m. when Jr. Meds encounter Dents. Four other teams are left in the running—Sr. Vic, last year's champions, Sr. U.C. and Jr. S.P.S. After about four weeks the surviving two will battle it out in the finals.

Canadian sports lost one of its most colourful figures and one of its most influential writers in the death of Lou Marsh, Sports Editor of the Toronto Star. Mr. Marsh's column carried more weight than probably that of any other in Toronto. He will be hard to replace and not soon forgotten.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Tonight the big interfaculty swimming meet takes place in the Hart House pool. It's going to be good, so come out and support your faculty. The preliminaries were held Tuesday night, and Phil Haslem won the style, placing second in the ornamental; Molly Stevens of U.C. taking the latter event, and coming second in the style.

A diving competition was held also, and by elimination the number of entries reduced to five. These five girls, Peggy Bailey of Vic, Vi Ord of Trinity, Kay Brown, Betty Rowlin and Fran Carlyle of U.C. will compete again tonight, and the winner will be presented with the University diving trophy.

The plunge entries were also reduced by competition, and Rosemary Greening and Amy Britton of Trinity, Molly Stevens and Elizabeth Manning will try to win the honours tonight for their respective faculties.

There will be only one final game in the interfaculty hockey, between U.C. and Vic Seniors, which will be from 12.30 to 1.30 today. This is going to be a keen, hard-fought game, so come on up to Varsity Arena and see it.

KEEP IT CLEAN

Following up The Varsity's policy of "Keep it Clean" we are now able to present a little inside light on the laundry situation in Hart House.

Mr. Rimmer, Chief of the Locker Room Staff, yesterday volunteered the life story of the towel-washing game, telling of the first tub andringer and subsequent efforts with domestic-type washers to eliminate the athletic aroma which formerly pervaded the atmosphere of the House.

For some time now the towel-dispersing service has been carried on with a commercial machine and an electric, centrifugal dryer. The towels in this dryer reach a temperature of about 300 degrees and are automatically sterilized.

In an average day about 800 towels are used and in the rugby season the number mounts to over 1000. To keep this many towels in circulation, it is necessary to have a gross supply of nearly 3000.

The average life of each of the sandpaper articles is about 2 seasons, so it is necessary to buy about 500 new ones every year.

With the system operating as it is, "Keep it Clean".

"LITERATURE AN ESCAPE"

self with the neglected Cinderella who rises triumphantly from the ashes. As he grows older, he does not discard this form of escape. This motif has been used in the movies "75,413 times". Moreover, the two best sellers of the last 25 years are Zane Grey and Edgar Rice Burroughs, who supply real cowboys and white-haired Vermont fables with vicarious thrills, lacking in their lives.

The detective novel and pseudo-travel book are other forms of this type of writing.

The group of books called literature, however, is read with a different purpose. The characters who people these books "have not ink but blood in their veins". They are human beings, but on a greater scale. We do not necessarily learn anything from them, but through them we do become something.

Mr. Untermeyer remarked that the best modern literature has become distinctly realistic, and referred to Mrs. Pearl Buck's The Good Earth as an example. In accounting for the popularity of Anthony Adverse Mr. Untermeyer pointed out that this novel fulfills both demands of the reader: for an escape from life and for a coming to closer grips with it. It is a "veritable anthology of fairy tales" of the male Cinderella type, but on the other hand it "makes a real world out of the world of romance".

This realism has invaded modern poetry also; in this connection Mr. Untermeyer read two of his poems, not, as he said, because he considered himself the three best poets, nor even the two best poets, but merely to support his thesis.

S.P.S., U.C. WIN IN HOCKEY

Schoolmen possess plenty of speed on the attack and can also backcheck very effectively. As a result their defense had a very easy time and Stroud in goal had few anxious moments.

The first period was slow and sloppy with S.P.S. garnering two points, both being notched by Wilmot. In this frame Walkey, the School storm centre, tangled with Red Burke of rugby fame and both were waved to the ice-box.

St. Mike's crashed the score sheet for the first time in the series when Sirdevan parked the disk behind Stroud after a scramble. This proved to be just a flash, however, and the game returning to its old rhythm of School trying vainly to get going against the unorthodox style of the visitors. Fisher banged home two goals and Wilmot came to complete the scoring for the victors. Fighting till the last Wright bulged the twine for St. Mike's just as the closing bell clanged. The winners definitely established themselves as a serious threat to Vic's crown and will take a lot of beating. In this game Stodhart, Wood, Fisher and Wilmot looked best.

The other game of the double bill was a close fight between U.C. and Pharmacy with the big college being lucky to take the nod. The score on the game was 2-1, and this will be carried over to the next game. Both teams were evenly matched and played ranged up and down the sheet with many players sampling the softness of the cushion due to the numerous tough body checks. John Young of the U.C. sub line opened the scoring when he sank the disk after a scramble around the druggists' net. The second Red and White goal came soon after. Donaldson sent a lazy life goalwards and the puck bounded off the back screen in front of the net. Before Garneau could clear Morrison, U.C.'s one-man team, dented the twine to put U.C. two up. Pharmacy kept plugging away and were finally rewarded when Ramsay put the puck away just near the end of the game. Morrison as usual played the same steady brand of hockey, while Caswell, Donaldson, Self and Young also looked good. For the druggists Pronger, Campbell and Ramsay were best.

Sr. S.P.S.: Stroud, King, Stodhart, Kerr, Wood, Fisher, Davidson, Wilmot, Walkey and Press.

St. Mike's: O'Brien, Burke, Seandiffio, Dolan, Lavery, Wright, Walsh, Hoy, Sirdivan and McCarthy.

U.C.: Caswell, Donaldson, Campbell, Morrison, Lang, Slingsby, Self, Young, Ridley, Evans and Harpur.

Pharmacy: Garneau, Evans, Campbell, Pronger, Ellinghausen, Souliere, Ramsay, Blackmore, Johnston, Coulter, Cushing.

HOPEFUL FOR MONARCHY

Europe and the late King extended this to the British Dominions. George V was the first king whose personality was made known around the world, said Mr. Ratcliffe and this was due both to travel and the influence of the institutional radio. The Great War which caused so many European thrones to topple, left the British crown even stronger than before during the momentous quarter century of this "citizen king's" reign.

Edward VIII shows himself a true descendant of these powerful monarchs, his father and his grandfather. Entirely democratic, even more a "citizen king" than his father, he is considered by his people as one of themselves. He is not so conventional as George V, and correct behaviour is pushed aside when a person or group of persons engrosses his attention, whether it be a foreign ambassador or a peasant in front of his hut.

The new king's interest is most pronounced in two aspects of national life, the first being the unemployment question and the second the movement towards the rehousing of the entire British populace. King Edward VIII has shown a continued and genuine interest in these two problems, and it is mostly his influence which brought about the attack of the slum evil and a provision of new houses on a large scale. This, Mr. Ratcliffe designated as the most heartening movement in Britain and under a monarch who knows a great deal about it and provided the peace of Europe is kept he sees its completion within the next ten years.

CO-ED CHEERLEADERS for the Varsity football games is the latest idea on the campus. Most of the boys who have been questioned on the matter seem very enthusiastic. At least one of last fall's cheerleaders is heartily in accord with the idea of adding girls to the squad, believing it would increase the glamour of the games. Schoolmen apparently favour the innovation to the limit, but suggest that there should also be a proportion of usherettes.

SPECIAL FEES are charged at the University of Oklahoma for students who live outside the state. That university has lower fees than most American ones, and the influx of scholars has been so great that official action has been taken to make them pay their share.

THE MAN WHO KEPT QUIET at last year's Hart House elections, did not spend any money for signs or blotters, and didn't appear on election day, was not only elected to the Hall Committee, but was carried over to this year's committee. This prompts us to wonder how much is accomplished by shouting and din. Do the voters appreciate being partially deafened or do they prefer to select their men in peace?

THE MOST ORIGINAL VALENTINE received last month was sent by a pathologist at the University of Minnesota. It is a blood-covered plate with a white heart in a lacy border and had the word "Gerry" above, and "Be my Valentine" below. The white part was made of enough "culture" germs to kill most of the people in America.

THE MOST NOVEL ELECTION STUNT attempted yesterday was banned by the Warden as "not in keeping with the spirit of Hart House elections". TEN PER CENT OF HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS in Pennsylvania know more than half the graduating classes of the universities, according to tests conducted there over a seven-year period. Not only that, but twenty-five per cent of college seniors know less than half the sophomores do, and ten per cent of college seniors know less than half the high school seniors do. The tests were conducted on 12,000 students in forty-nine colleges and many high schools.

BROADVIEW TOPS VARSITY

The minutes of the opening session ticked by. Both squads were a bit too anxious. This resulted in a spotty brand of passing and some reckless shooting. At half time, Varsity left the court holding an 18-16 lead.

Connolly contributed a pair of charities and McGregor found the cords once. Bedford displayed uncanny skill in garnering gift tosses, converting five out of six. Gold added another free shot.

In the first two minutes of the second half the big bad Broadview basketweavers tied the count at 18-18 on a "swish" by Breathet. Wagman, the "Y" long-range basket flipper, followed with a fielder and Bodrug counted from the charity line on a personal charged to Gold for shooting. Here the Varsity captain was banished from the fray on personal fouls. In quick order, a basket and another charity by Breathet gave Broadview a 24-18 advantage, the largest lead of the tussle. Varsity halted the rally and evened matters with Marks peppering the net twice and Connolly registering once.

JAZZ ISSUE APPROVED

opinion that their college came in for more razzing than its size deserved, but in general they took it in good part and claimed that they thought it was a fine issue.

The few poor opinions of the issue were ludicrously diverse. A Meds student took exception to some of the remarks made, and said that a student paper was no place for smuttiness. On the other hand, several undergraduates claimed that they had been waiting for the jazz issue for some time and were just a little disappointed at its purity. They all admitted that it would be impossible to please everybody.

The thing that got the greatest laughs? As far as could be ascertained, it was that little pseudo-rhyme in the bottom left-hand corner of the third page—the one under the cut of the black witch. "It was just a little thing," said one S.P.S. man, "but it struck me just right to appear uproariously funny."

We came across one lad with a very long face as he read the paper. It looked as though he disapproved, so we asked him about it. His reply was enlightening: "Disapprove? Of course not. It's the best Varsity I've ever seen. But this is only a borrowed copy, and I can't get one anywhere to send to my girl-friend."

rubber struck the string, Selkirk, uncovered before the college cage, tied the totals on a four-man Telegram rush.

Hamilton slipped Selkirk a neat pass for another Telly tally but McFligham, assisted by Sissons, prolonged the deadlock during the second twenty minutes. Two minutes later Johnson's goal decided the two-period contest.

McPherson, Selkirk and Hamilton packed plenty of pep on the newspapermen's scoring division while McFligham and Campbell were the best of the Blue and White.

MERCY-KILLING UPHELD

The speaker quoted Seneca of ancient times who, like Francis Bacon, later Dean Inge and Huxley of our own day, commended voluntary euthanasia. Mrs. Charlotte Gilman, an author and lecturer, last year took her own life in accordance with her statement that "justifiable suicide is the simplest of human rights". She was an ardent advocate of euthanasia saying "when intelligent consciousness is gone forever, the body should be removed."

The speaker pointed out that a prominent English physician confessed committing five mercy slayings and said he had never suffered any remorse but remembered the happy faces of those sufferers. The bill which Lord Moynihan has drawn up in England provided all safeguards for medical accuracy and the whims of a patient, the speaker concluded, and would be of benefit to sufferers and those obliged to watch them suffer.

Miss Helen Carscallen protested that such a bill would increase the gap between the aristocratic and common people because the poor are more subject to disease and despair. Such a step she thought would be a "retrogression" from the high point to which man's intellect had evolved and the effect of all cases of euthanasia, not merely isolated ones, would be very demoralizing on society.

She stated that the medical profession is very much divided on this question and euthanasia would make people give up hope, and all those who were sick would be haunted by the fear of it.

Miss Anne Ferguson, upholding the affirmative, stressed the effect suffering has on other people and the thought that a person is a financial and spiritual burden to those he loves would increase his agony. She stated that euthanasia is a "fuller, more satisfying way of dealing with things that are not right."

Miss Peggy Fleming referred to the Egyptians and Spartans who practiced euthanasia, as the easiest way out and our reasons are much like theirs. We have not plumbed the depths of medicine, she stated, and until we have given medical care to all and achieved sterilization of defective parents we should not think about euthanasia. The advances of tuberculosis treatment in the last thirty years has saved the lives of hundreds of people, the speaker stated, and if these had been killed by euthanasia when they were thought incurable children the medical profession would have been retarded.

HEIDELBERG INVITATION TO TORONTO STILL STANDS

Student Electorate Undecided

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Rome: Italy admitted the bombing of a British Red Cross Unit in Ethiopia but placed the responsibility for the attack on the British Government.

London: The British government is expected to make a vigorous protest to Rome.

Rome: Mussolini is expected to make peace. An Italo-Austro-Hungarian Alliance is foreseen.

Addis Ababa: Haile Selassie accepts the League's peace plan without qualifications.

Toronto: Hon. W. H. Price, K.C., forecast a power famine by 1940, saying that Ontario faces the greatest power shortage in its history, in a speech in the provincial legislature yesterday.

Haggis Abandoned By Modern Scottish

Historic National Dish Has No Appeal to Taste of Modern Macs.

In yesterday's issue of the Mail and Empire a despatch from Ottawa told of a ban which has been placed on the importation of Scotch haggis (the Scotch national dish) into Canada, because of foot and mouth disease regulations. Judging by the item it would seem that haggis is the life blood of the Scottish race, but judging by the opinions expressed by some of the students of Scottish ancestry at the University it would certainly never be missed.

Bill Carruthers of the Dumfries Carruthers, "hates the stuff", and remarked upon its similarity to pig-swill. And Bill Allen of Glaswegian ancestry was in absolute accord with Mr. Carruthers. Ed. Fraser referred to haggis as "frightful stuff", but went on to say that "nevertheless it has made the Scotch race the backbone of the British Empire." His brother Bud stated that haggis was "the most horrible dish in Scotland."

W.A.A. ANNOUNCE ANNUAL ELECTIONS

Will Elect Women's Athletic Directorate on March 16 at Household Science

The electoral meeting of the University of Toronto Women's Athletic Association to elect the five student representatives on the Women's Athletic Directorate for 1936-37 will be held in the Lecture Room, Household Science Building, on Monday, March 16, at 5 p.m. sharp.

Nominations will be received by the Secretary of the Association until Thursday, March 12, at 5 p.m. Nominations must be signed by two members of the U. of T. W.A.A., and must be made on the forms to be obtained from the Secretary, Room 82, U.C.

A student eligible for nomination must at the time of nomination be in her second or higher year, but not in her final year, at the University.

Representatives to the Electoral Body must be elected and sent to the (Continued on Page 3)

CIVIL ENGINEERS GET OPTIMISTIC TALK FROM HEUSTON OF C.N.R.

E. G. Heustis, Maintenance Engineer of the C.N.R. central division, was the speaker at the last meeting of the Civil Club which was held in the graduates dining room at Hart House yesterday noon.

Mr. Heuston, who graduated from S.P.S. in '08, was very optimistic about graduates in civil engineering finding positions with the railways. During the depression years the maintenance of the C.N.R. has been cut from twenty-two to twelve million dollars annually. With the inevitable expansion from this low level many jobs will open up for university graduates.

The attention of research workers in the railway field has recently been directed to high speeds. Mr. Heuston estimated that within five years a speed of 100 m.p.h. will be a common occurrence on the main lines of the C.N.R.

(Special to The Varsity)

Ottawa, March 5th.—Although the question of representation of Canadian universities in the House of Commons will be studied by a special committee on election and franchise laws, political observers expressed opinions here tonight that it is very unlikely the universities will be granted the right to send members to parliament, as is the English custom.

The whole matter will be considered within the next few weeks by the special committee under the chairmanship of C. Bothwell, Saskatchewan Liberal.

Many members voiced interest in university representation in parliament, among them William Mulock, M.P. for North York. In the main, however, members generally dismissed the suggestion when questioned last night, contending that such action would upset the balance of distribution of electoral districts as laid down in the B.N.A. act.

Many classes in Canada are more in need of House representation than universities, contended J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader.

TECH. PRESENTS ANNUAL BAZAAR

Everything from Aeroplanes to Clay Modelling Featured

At last the time has come for all the males to learn the secrets of the girls' success. Everything from the preparation of delicious candy that melts in the mouth to the art of perfecting a slip that fits snugly around the hips will be revealed at the annual bazaar sponsored by Central Tech. this coming Saturday.

Nor are those bearers of pulchritude, those spirits of gaiety, without whom the world could not exist—in other words, the ladies—completely ignored. They too may gain astounding insight into the workings of automobiles and other such gadgets that have been a source of mystery to them since the passing of the Victorian era.

An aeroplane, constructed by the boys of the graduating class, to be christened "The Sky Flea", will make its first public appearance. This magnificent project is the first of its kind to be seen in this part of Canada, and will be one of the main features of the exposition.

STUDENT PEACE MOVEMENT

Scarcely a dozen people were present last night when the Student Peace Movement held an open meeting to arrange for sending delegates to the League of Nations congress at Geneva next autumn.

Placing the blame on The Varsity for the lack of interest shown by the undergraduate body, officials of the organization complained that they were limited to very little space in the paper and that they were not allowed to write their own publicity.

A DEFINITE LIMIT TO DEBT CREATION DECLARES ELLIOT

Elliot Tells Commerce Club of Effects of Depression on Finance

"Business men have not realized that there is a limit to increasing debt creation," stated Courtland Elliott in an address on "Financing the Depression" to the Commerce Club at Hart House last night. Outlining the characteristics problems in depression finance, Mr. Elliott summarized the main factors in government expenditure, described the method of financing, and indicated the significance of recent financial trends to the future development of the country.

"The depression has been characterized by three things," he said. "First, the tremendous decline in wealth values. Second, the decline of incomes. And third, the growth of unemployment." The destruction of wealth values led to a rush to liquidate in order to avoid loss. Between 1929 and 1932, the wealth of Canada fell from thirty billion to twenty billion dollars. "This was a very important factor in the depression," he said, "because a substantial part of these values was pledged as collateral against loans. With these values falling, creditors were forced to call in loans and this accentuated the deflationary process."

In spite of declining tax receipts, increasing expenditure and a mounting debt, Mr. Elliott said, our economic system has not come the collapse predicted.

M.P.P. TO SPEAK AT LUNCHEON

Wilfred Heighington Will Address Conservatives at Hart House

Wilfred Heighington, Conservative M.P.P. for St. David's, and possible nominee for the leadership of the Conservative party, will speak in Hart House today when the Macdonald-Cartier Club holds its last luncheon meeting of the year.

The luncheon will take place at one o'clock this afternoon in the North Common Room. A good turn-out is expected, the president of the club, N. D. Pilcher, said yesterday. Speaking of the activity of the club during the past year, he said that it had been most varied and that considerable interest had been shown by students. In spite of the fact that both houses of parliament are Liberal, no considerable lapse of interest in the club has resulted.

Today's luncheon promises to be one of outstanding interest, he said. It is expected that Mr. Heighington's address will be of a critical nature, though the topic is not yet known.

Cambridge the Only University Whose Invitation to the 550th Anniversary of Heidelberg Has Not Been Cancelled

Heidelberg University has not as yet officially withdrawn its invitation to members of the faculty of this university to attend the celebration of Heidelberg's five hundred and fiftieth anniversary, W. J. Dunlop, Director of Extension Work and Publicity, said last night. It has been reported that all invitations issued to universities in the British Empire, with the exception of Cambridge, have been cancelled. An official notice may come to this university within the next few days.

The reported move on the part of the Nazis is seen by some authorities to be in the nature of petty revenge, for it comes after most British universities had announced their intention of boycotting the event.

Officials are mystified that exception should be made for Cambridge, for although the latter has made no official announcement as yet, it is extremely (Continued on Page 3)

VICTORIA HOLDS INFORMAL HOP

Fred Evis and Hal Taylor Will Supply Dance Rhythms

Friday evening, March 13th, the second annual Victoria College Informal will be held at Hart House. Following the custom set last year, only Victoria students may attend and there is no admission charge.

Fred Evis' orchestra will play in the big gym and Hal Taylor will assist in the east common room.

The Senior Sticks will be presented at intermission and for those interested there will be an exhibition of water-polo in the pool.

Ticket distribution will follow the same order as last year; double tickets will be given to men if they are accompanied by their partners and if they present both registration cards. They will be available in Alumni Hall every day in the week of March 9th from 1 till 2 o'clock.

CO-EDUCATION VINDICATED

American statisticians, psychology professors and Varsity editorials to the contrary, there are some Varsity women who get their man—and they don't have to wait for Leap Year either. The ladies (God bless 'em) may come to the little college town with every intention of arming themselves with degrees so they can go forth to conquer the business world and carve themselves niches in the Halls of Fame, but are their intentions serious? A thousand times no! The sweet girl undergraduate stoops to conquer all right, but a career? No! She carves herself a niche, but in the Halls of Fame?

No—in ye little gray home in the West—or East, as the case may be. Inquiries have revealed that a large proportion of the girls who are graduating this year are already engaged, and that a good many of these intend to get married as soon as they graduate. Maybe they'll arrive at Convocation Hall this June with the license clutched firmly in one hand, and use their graduation flowers for wedding bouquets. We suggest that the President get a special dispensation or something, so that he can confer a degree and his blessing at the same time.

You might think that most of these—shall we say successful—girls come from such domestic courses as Household Science, but this is not the case. Apparently the great marriage market is the Moderns course; one girl who is taking it informed us that at least half the women were engaged, and of the women graduating this year who are engaged, all but one are engaged to U. of T. men. The other one is engaged to a man from New York. How's that, girls?

BUT ER-UH, DON'T THESE THINGS SMELL?

Suppose you had to cut up, probe into, and expose the innards of a rabbit? Well?

Suppose further that it was the body of a beautiful, silken-coated cat which you had to dissect. How could you, with tears in your eyes and thoughts of your own dear tabby at home by the fire, how could you yield the knife? Well?

Well, rest assured on the second point. In the labs at Toronto, cats are not used often. Preference is given to rabbits—some 210 of them per year. (What a pie they'd make!) And these rabbits are bought, not chased. Apparently down south they use cats, and they have to catch them. Says the Daily Texan, "Each student is required to furnish his own martyr for experimental purposes, and how and where they are obtained is left to individual scruples." Says The Varsity, Fear for the frisky feline, if he be not frisky enough to escape the stealthy student who pursues with perseverance. Now, assured of the fact that you're not operating on your pet puss, do you still relish the job? I'll take vanilla.

Girls attack this problem in a characteristically feminine way. Confronted with a rabbit, they look at it. Look for some time. Then one stretches forth a finger, cautiously. The other titters. First girl draws near, second stands afar off. But by the time the first has pinched and punched the corpse, has gingerly begun to cut, and has laid it open, the second has overcome her dislike in favour of her curiosity. Result: Two sweet young things tearing at the vitals of the unprotected rabbit like hungry wolves at a carcass. Pleasant scene.

But then women are like that. Suppose you had to cut up, probe into, and expose the innards of a woman—(pardon) rabbit? Well?

The University Deserves a Franchise

A dispatch from Ottawa in today's Varsity indicates an intention on the part of the members of the House of Commons to dismiss the plea for University representation as impractical at this stage of the country's development. While the possibility of the various universities in Canada having their own representatives in Ottawa is at the present time rather small it is nevertheless apparent that the students at the University deserve some consideration in the matter of voting.

The question which was raised at Ottawa by W. P. Mulock, member for North York, was yesterday more or less dismissed as constituting a threat to the balance of electoral districts as laid down by the B.N.A. act. However, it is necessary to consider several things before thus relegating to the region of the unsolved, such a question as has arisen.

When the British North America Act was instituted almost seventy years ago, it was amid conditions which have been greatly altered in the subsequent seventy years. And no phase of Canadian life has changed more radically than the Universities. From a mere handful of students at the time of Confederation, the University of Toronto has grown to include more than 7,000 persons. Such an increase in students should necessitate some increase in the consideration granted. The University of Toronto is at the present time considerably larger than some constituencies which send members to Ottawa. As they grow they are granted recognition. Should the University of Toronto not be treated in the same manner?

Some time ago we suggested that it would probably be considered impractical to have a member from the University of Toronto at Ottawa. However, we did suggest, and we still think it a suggestion worthy of more consideration than it has received, that the elections act be changed to allow students enrolled at the University of Toronto to vote in a riding within voting distance. To ask 1500 students at the University to travel from 50 to 2000 miles to vote is somewhat nonsensical. And that is what the present situation demands.

It would appear then, that while it may be impractical to ask the public to bear the burden of a candidate from the University of Toronto, it is not unreasonable to ask that students located at the University when an election occurs, be permitted to vote there. Mr. Mulock's suggestion is fundamentally sound. It may take generations to prove it. It may cost the public considerable money to prove it, but eventually it will be proven that it is cheaper and more practical to have University students voting as a body, if it is only as part of an electorate, than having interested parties paying the student's fares home to enable them to cast a vote. Eventually it will come. But why must Canadians learn all these things the hard way?

When 80 per cent of the political leaders of Canada are chosen from Universities does it seem fair or even practical, a somewhat different term, to disregard them? It does not!

What About A Farmer's Club?

The Editor, The Varsity,
University of Toronto.

Dear Sir:

My congratulations! Your recent editorials on rural problems have been most timely. Too much attention can not be placed upon these questions, which undoubtedly constitute a major social and economic issue in Canada. Revenue from agriculture is more than twice that of mining and forestry in Canada. Considering the tremendous buying power of the farmer, one wonders at the mentality of anyone suggesting recovery can come by reviving the building trade, or textiles, or some other secondary industry.

Agriculture is more than an industry. It is a way of life, with its own social and economic standards. Few fully appreciate this fact, including those who allow the farmer's pronunciation, or clothes, to obscure the man whose genuine difficulties should challenge him to sympathy and action.

The University of Toronto, following the lead of the St. Francis Xavier University of Nova Scotia, is giving wise leadership in this direction. Farmers are being offered extension courses in history and economics by correspondence. Wherever Agrícola Study Clubs can be organized with a membership of twelve or more the Extension Department provides them with a weekly lecturer. Supplementing the weekly bulletin is the Farmer's University of the Air program from CRCT every Saturday night at 6.50.

I am, I am happy to say, a son of the soil, and hope to operate a farm after graduation. I have been pained at the lack of self-consciousness in students coming from the country, who hasten to lose their identity in the urban culture of the University. Almost every phase of society, social and economic, is represented by some type of organization on the campus, with the exception of the farm. In my judgment the time is ripe for a Farmers' Club in the University of Toronto. Such a club could seek to understand agricultural problems, and by various means seek to raise the deflated social status of rural people.

Respectfully,

R.A.S., II Victoria.

Re Dr. Porter's Lectures

The Editor, The Varsity, Queen's Park.

Dear Sir:

I should like to draw to your attention the success that has attended the lectures being conducted by the Physical Training Department of the University. Dr. Porter, treading on new ground, is to be complimented on the manner in which he has carried out these lectures. They have been full of interest, and sound information and advice, pleasantly surprising the student who came reconciled to being thoroughly bored.

Yet, sir, let us hope that this is only a beginning to satisfy a long felt need. There is much room for further development in this field. Man can only be of use to himself and society in proportion as he can retain his health. What good is gaining an education if one loses one's health? As Dr. Porter said, everybody suffers from handicaps but let these handicaps be made fewer by a proper physical, mental and eugenic training. The average student knows too little about the working of the human mechanism and how to take care of it. It is an angle of our education that has long been neglected and yet it seems to me to be just as important as a sound mental training in turning out good citizens which, after all, is the aim of any educational institution.

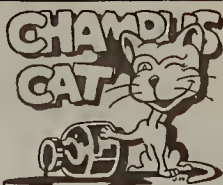

The course should be a compulsory full year affair and of much wider scope.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Congratulations are in order for U.C. Yesterday they won two interfaculty championships, the hockey, and the swimming, and they are planning to celebrate in a big way at their athletic banquet next Tuesday night. Hockey laurels have not come their way for thirteen years, and the swimming honours for some time, so this is a peak year in their athletic history.

Kay Brown and Molly Stevens were largely responsible for U.C.'s success in the swimming meet held last night in Hart House. Kay garnered eleven points and Molly thirteen, the latter placing second to Phyl Haslem who took the cup for the individual honours. Mary Davidson, also of U.C., deserves special mention. She broke the plunge record once made by Sophie Goode, sixty-five feet four inches, by plunging sixty-eight feet four and one half inches. Vi Ord of St. Hilda's gave a beautiful diving performance, winning the Cochrane cup and making ten points for her college.

U.C. played smart hockey yesterday to defeat Vic Seniors in the interfaculty finals. The whole team was good, but Jean Atkinson, Bunty Lang and Chippy Grant deserve special mention. For Vic, Maisie Cowan played a sensational game, no fooling, and Gladys Wagg scored the Scarlet and Gold's one goal in the second period. It was rather unfortunate that U.C.'s winning goal was disputed at first, but the referee allowed it and it turned out to be the deciding goal.

Another interfaculty championship will be decided today, when U.C., St. Hilda's, Vic and the Nurses will compete in the annual badminton tournament which is to be held at the York Badminton Club at 1.45. Come on over and support your faculty. It is too bad that St. Mike's and Meds couldn't make up a team, but enthusiasm for this bird racket seems to be lacking. Betty Cleenct, St. Hilda's champion, will be the Saints' entrant in the singles, and Helen Kaufman will represent Vic. The doubles are going to be exciting, too, so better come out and see them. U.C. have been very generous and have presented a very fine cup.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By J. C. Mondo

Now that the curtain has fallen on this year's edition of the Varsity cage campaign, oodles of orchids are in order to the tossers of Warren Stevens and to the Blue strategist himself for a well-nigh successful season. Even though Queen's deposed the local lads as Intercollegiate champions, they managed to down the Tricolour crew here and finished on top in the Big Four standings.

Intercollegiate competition in all phases has ceased for "mother ever dear" and Interfaculty competition, now in the spotlight, is fast drawing to a close. Play-offs are already in progress—for the Sifton Cup in basketball, the Spalding Cup in baseball and the Jennings Cup in hockey. These three titles are now held by Victoria.

To us, the very mention of Max Baer, the Livermore Larruper, hitting the comeback trail, sounds as ridiculous as the possibility of discovering a "white hope" to dust off that "Ebony Embalmer", Joe Louis. On the basis of a recent sports writers' poll, Louis is listed at the top of the heap, with Braddock in the second division. The Best Maxie could do was the fourth division, which also includes Tommy Loughran, Charlie Retzlaff and Paulino Uzcudun.

Who do yuh like for the pennant, kid?
The Cubs, the Gints, or Cards?
You think the Dodgers will make a bid?
Quit kiddin', the Cubs by yards!

The Red Sox will knot the Tiger's tail?
Where do you get that stuff?
With Simmons, Greenberg and Mick under sail,
They've more than power enough!

(Thanks to Stuart Rogers)

Yes, Brethren, that's how we're stating them to finish. How do we figure? Probably the same way you do—study the rosters, calculate a bit and let guesswork constitute about 60 per cent of the process. The Tigers will have an improved ball club, especially because of the acquisition of Al Simmons. If Al is "on", Detroit is "in". Charlie Grimm's "Chi" Cubs are intact and can boast the best pitching staff in their league. Veteran strength plus probable rookie success makes the Cubs our choice.

Phyl Haslem Takes Individual Honours

U.C. won their second championship of the season last night in Hart House, when they piled up forty-seven points to take the interfaculty swimming honours. St. Hilda's coming second with twenty-four. Phyl Haslem of Social Science, the president of the Swimming Club and of Olympic and British Empire fame, won the individual honours, and Vi Ord of St. Hilda's received the Cochrane diving cup for her spectacular performance.

A feature of the meet was the breaking of the plunge record by Mary Davidson of U.C. when she made sixty-eight feet four and a half inches in the opening event.

Kay Brown, Molly Stevens and Bunty Lang were largely responsible for U.C.'s win, and the Ord sisters and Amy Britton for St. Hilda's success.

Two exhibition events were featured on the program. Molly Stevens and Phyl Haslem gave an original ornamental swimming performance, and the diving of Ross Cameron of Central Y.M.C.A. and of Johnny Tett, Junior Canadian champion, was loudly applauded.

Results—
Long Plunge: 1. Mary Davidson (U.C.); 2. Rosemary Greening (St. Hilda's); 3. Amy Britton (St.H.).

Free Style: 1. Kay Brown (U.C.); 2. Clara Ord (St.H.); 3. Bunty Lang (U.C.).

Back Stroke: 1. Kay Brown, Clara Ord (tied); 3. Peggy Bailey (Vic).

Breast Stroke: 1. Phyl Haslem (Social Science); 2. Bunty Lang (U.C.); 3. P. Bailey (Vic).

Style: 1. P. Haslem; 2. M. Stevens; 3. D. Samuel.

Ornamental: 1. M. Stevens; 2. P. Haslem; 3. B. Curry.

Diving: 1. Vi Ord; 2. Betty Rowlin; 3. Kay Brown.

Relay: 1. U.C.; 2. St. Hilda's; 3. Victoria.

Total points: 1. U.C. (47); 2. St. Hilda's (24); 3. Social Science (16); 4. Victoria (3). unlikely that they will accept the invitation when all others have been banned.

The trouble started when Birmingham University of England officially decided to boycott the celebration. This was followed by a protest issued by Heidelberg's official Student League, which said "Heidelberg's Student League recognizes that it is in perfect agreement with our foreign comrades when it deeply deplores Birmingham University's attitude and declares it has served badly world peace and the relations of peoples."

The Student League is an organization present in all German universities, formed under Nazi auspices, and of which every student must be a member or else be expelled from the university.

When, in spite of the protest, other English universities also decided to boycott the celebrations, Professor Wilhelm Groh, Rector Magnificus of Heidelberg, cancelled the invitations to all British universities except Cambridge.

VIC WOMEN LOSE HOCKEY TO U.C.

Interfaculty Title Goes to U.C.
For First Time in Thirteen Years

U.C. defeated Vic yesterday by a score of 2-1 to win the women's interfaculty hockey trophy for the first time in thirteen years. It was anybody's game from start to finish but the greater part of the play was at the Vic end of the ice and Maisie Cowan was forced to make some sensational saves to keep the score down.

U.C. in particular, played a rough game, two penalties being handed out to both Jean Atkinson and Kay Robertson.

There was no score for the first ten minutes but in the second period U.C. turned on the heat and Bunty Lang, on a perfect pass from Jean Atkinson, slammed in a goal.

In the third period Gladys Wagg put in a neat goal for Vic but Jean Atkinson soon placed U.C. in the lead again with a pretty shot. After this U.C. held their own till the final bell.

Both teams put all they had into the game, but special congratulations should go to Charity "Chippy" Grant, Jean Atkinson, Bunty Lang and Peg Snyder on the U.C. team, and Gladys Wagg, Ruth Leavens, Joy Brownlee and Maisie Cowan on the Vic team.

the world." These two claim to be good sons of Inverness-shire.

Thinking that perhaps it was only certain parts of Scotland that were addicted to the mania for haggis, the reporter tried two Aberdonians. Miss "Jimmy" MacGregor was not very enlightening. She said she had never even seen "the stuff", much less eaten it. But apparently Jim Hamilton had done both, and pronounced it "foul, dirty, stuff". Then another Glaswegian was asked her opinion, with a similar answer "I only tasted it once and never again".

There are also a certain number of good Scotch Canadians who do not know what haggis is. They are Miss "Midge" Munro, whose ancestors hail from Ross-shire; Keith Campbell from Edinburgh. Don Campbell thought that haggis was a kind of intoxicating liquor. Possibly he was thinking of "Haig and Haig." For the edification of these and others in blissful ignorance, haggis, according to Webster's is "a pudding made of the heart, liver and lights, etc. of a sheep or calf, minced with suet, onions, oatmeal, etc., and boiled in the stomach of the animal".

meeting as follows: University College, Victoria College, St. Michael's College, St. Hilda's College, and Medical W.A.A.'s, four representatives each; Basketball and Hockey Clubs, six representatives each; Swimming and Tennis Clubs, four representatives each; Baseball and Badminton Clubs, two representatives each; the undergraduate members of the 1935-36 Directorate. Names of representatives must be given to the Secretary not later than Thursday, March 12, and no substitutions or proxies will be permitted.

The annual elections for the women's Basketball, Hockey, Swimming, Tennis, Baseball and Badminton Club executives will be held in the Lecture Room, Household Science Building, on Thursday, March 19, at 5 p.m. sharp. Preferential voting for candidates will determine the office to be held.

Nominations for each club should be signed by two voting members of the club in question and filed with the Secretary of the Athletic Association, Room 82, U.C., not later than Tuesday, March 17. Voting members for each club are restricted to those who have been registered with the Secretary of the W.A.A. as members of University or Interfaculty teams in that particular sport during the academic year, or who are certified by a team manager to have attended at least 50 per cent of the practices of that team; members of the club executive and managers of all teams playing under the club.

The O.C.E. choir will sing a program of English part-songs and ballads, assisted by the orchestra at 8.15 p.m., Saturday, March 7, in the O.C.E. Auditorium. Admission free. Come early and get a seat.

FORESTRY SUGGERS WIN BASEBALL 13-6 KNOX FIELDING WEAK

Smashing their way through the feeble defence of the Knox team, Forestry ran up a 13-6 victory in the Hart House gym yesterday afternoon.

The four-inning game seemed a one-way affair until the last inning when the Knox team rallied to add 5 runs to their score. Forestry retaliated with splendid hitting and brought their total up to 13 runs before they were finally put out.

Knox: Campbell, Warren, MacDonald, Graham, Sinclair, Taylor, Murdoch, Thompson, Williams.

Forestry: Sider, Hick, Barron, Johnson, D'Argiviel, Ward, Merchison and Chalk.

ELECTIONS TAKE PLACE FOR V.C.U. OFFICERS

The Hare-Spence system of voting will be followed at the V.C.U. elections today. This system consists of marking on the ballot, in order of preference, the various candidates.

Eaton Auditorium

Trudi Schoop, at the Eaton Auditorium last night, presented one of the most amusing programs we have seen this season. Miss Schoop has a troupe of comic ballet dancers and while they may not please the ballet lover they cannot fail to appeal to anyone with a sense of humour.

We do not feel competent to judge Miss Schoop on the grounds of her ability as dancer. We can but testify to her excellence in pantomime. There is much controversy as to whether last night's offering was dancing in the true sense. We can only say that Miss Schoop is certainly a talented and clever comedian.

Fridolin on the Road is the more famous of the two numbers presented. It won fourth prize in an international competition in Paris. The adventures of Fridolin, a gawky youth who sets forth to see the world are well done, amusing and satirical, but in entertainment

In the fourth episode of this story of what lies behind the classified section of a newspaper features some very clever work on the part of Meta Krahn. Miss Schoop appeared in only one of these episodes, the last, and the build up she gets from her company is the result of some very fine clowning.

It would be impossible to give a final verdict on Miss Schoop without a knowledge of other dancers. Unfortunately we can only go as far as to say that she has the ability of Chaplin in her medium. N.C.P.

Toronto Symphony

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra's seventh concert of the season opened with Rimsky-Korsakov's Overture "The Russian Easter". Based in part on themes from the Russian Church Liturgy, this overture is music of a highly pictorial and dramatic nature; that is, perhaps, the most that can be said of it.

The second part of the program consisted of the Cesar Franck Symphony in D Minor—music of a more profound and emotional sort. Constructed, to quote the program, "in what has been called the 'cyclic form', the individual movements are complete and self-contained, but are bound together by the recurrence of common thematic material sometimes as mere quotation, sometimes as the germ of new development." This thematic repetition becomes over-intricate and tedious in the second and third movements; the real power of the work is contained in the first movement. The violins here were magnificent, though considering the superlative quality of the melody they could hardly have been otherwise.

The program was concluded with the Mendelssohn Midsummer Night's Dream music, whose combination of fantasy and humour successfully balanced the Cesar Franck Symphony. Sir Ernest MacMillan's treatment skillfully developed the swift fanciful mischief of the Overture and Scherzo, the slower, more romantic tempo of the Nocturne, and the robust and lively pageantry of the Wedding March. The horn solo in the Nocturne were disappointing, but the violins here, as throughout the program, were superb.

On Friday and Saturday, March 6th, and 7th, the Actors' Colony Theatre is presenting "Petticoat Fever" by Mark Reed at the Margaret Eaton Hall. The action of the play takes place in a cabin of a radio operator up in Labrador. Dascom Dismore, a Cambridge graduate, who is the radio operator, is complaining to his Eskimo servant that he hasn't seen an attractive girl for two years, when suddenly there is an aeroplane crash, and a beautiful girl and her fiancé drop in on him. Dascom tries to give a formal dinner party in her honour and even produces a floor show of Eskimo girls doing the hula-hula. Later his own fiancée arrives, and there are all sorts of complications, Dascom having fallen in love with the other girl, and there are some most hilarious scenes, not to mention an amazing wedding ceremony.

John Holden plays Dascom, and others in the cast are Babs Hitchman, Grace Matthews, Frank Hemingway, Richard Fonger.

We were pleased to note in the reports from the recent elections that many of our good friends and associates did nobly. Ignatz topped the polls for Tuck Shop by advocating real cream for the recently acquired coffee supply. Col. Mint Julep, S.C.I., executed a coup with his military support to gain command of the Soldiers Tower Committee, so it looks like the S.C.M. will have to continue holding their Peace service in the Theatre. Aunt Sadie swept into Chapel Committee on a ripple of votes created by her campaign for new windows. "Using pieces of broken glass from old French buildings is a disgrace to the House," declared

Aunt S. "We can afford real windows of our own for the Chapel, and by crackle we'll get 'em!" And our fran' Counterfeit's election to Pool was a triumph, for the boys from S.P.S. turned out in hordes to put him in. The last report we received he had gone down for the third time and they were holding him there.

Thus you have a permanent escort for all parties, and when you graduate, well—this is straight goods—we had it from a girl who had it from a girl who had it straight from a girl who went to Victoria.

It seems that most of the lucky lasses are fixin' to get hitched as soon as they can; those who do intend to get jobs for a while first are doing it chiefly because their "finances" cannot yet afford to support them in the style to which they would like to become accustomed.

All in all, college women don't do too badly when it comes to the point, and it doesn't seem to matter whether it's Leap Year or not—they get their man anyway. Very comforting to those of us who have been discouraged by recent editorials. There's a theory that reporters are always supposed to get their man too. We wonder—

As Yet, No Official Decision On Heidelberg Invitation

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Strasbourg, France: Europe was today in the grip of the most general war scare since 1914, as the French military high command put whole armies along the Rhineland frontier as a precautionary measure against the wholesale occupation of the demilitarized Rhineland by 25,000 German troops on Saturday and Sunday.

Paris: Premier Sarraut announced the firm intention of the French Government to maintain the Locarno pact, which Germany has deliberately broken by sending armed forces into the Rhineland. In a broadcast to the French nation, he said that France will not even examine Germany's proposals for new treaties. The allies of France, namely, Russia, Czechoslovakia and Poland, are reported to have promised France unlimited backing against Germany's abrogation of the Locarno Pact.

London: Revelation of Italian sympathy with France materially stiffened the British attitude toward Germany. The Baldwin Government was considering asking Hitler to withdraw his troops from the French frontier and to pledge good faith while the Locarno signatories negotiated with him on his peace proposals.

DUDE RANCHERS COLLEGE BRED

Out in the West where men are men and the women don't suffer from repressions, they get a lot of bright ideas. Look at Bible Bill Aberhart. Look at Potato Patullo. Men of ideas, it cannot be denied. But the brightest inspiration that has yet come to our notice is that of the University of Wyoming. This beacon light of culture in the great open spaces has recently instituted a new course to fill a long-felt need. It is a complete course in Dude Ranching.

Dude ranching has become so popular and profitable in recent years that the demand for strong silent men exceeds the supply. The situation was becoming desperate. Every year hordes of women suddenly get tired of it all, go out and buy clamorous shirts and cast-iron breeches, and turn their faces towards the land of Romance and Gary Cooper. For weeks, sometimes for months, they endure the tortures of "The parliamentary system has given us years of sound government in this country," he said. "Students graduating from the university should make an effort to improve interest in political affairs and make representation more efficient."

The speaker applauded the party system and urged that young men entering business and the professions do their utmost to assure its maintenance.

Under the somewhat misleading title "Man's Last Spectre," Dr. C. M. Beginning by showing that diseases of the mind are worthy of consideration because they are widespread and crippling and continually threaten both the individual and the nation, he told how medical science is beginning to realize that cases of this kind require more than physical treatment. Since an individual reacts to his environment in his thoughts, emotions and actions, a psychological approach is used and sometimes a cure is effected by a re-orientation of the patient's life.

LITERARY QUALITY IS HIGH

"If the minds of the students occupied the level with which tradition has credited them, the Undergraduate would be the perfect type of magazine," said Mona Lang, IV U.C. However since this is not true, the problem shifts down to whether an endeavour should be made to raise the intellectual appreciation of the students to its correct status by continuing this type of magazine, or whether defeat should be acknowledged, and a lighter type of publication produced in the future. The former alternative is the one which finds favour with Mary Bell, II U.C.

History will be in the making tonight, when the first all-university drama "The Inspector-General", will open in Hart House Theatre. Efforts of many years to form a representative drama group on the campus have resulted in the University Drama Committee, the sponsors of this Russian comedy.

Every college and every faculty has representation on the newly-formed committee, and as a result, an all-star cast, drawn from the entire campus, will take part in tonight's performance. The play chosen is Nicolai Gogol's "Inspector-General", a satirical comedy just as pointed and humorous today as it was when it was written almost a century ago. Here again, is an innovation. VARSITY SHORTHANOE

By Meredith Fleming

A 4 to 1 defeat for the Beavers at the hands of Hinde and Dauch on Saturday afternoon drew the shrouds over the current University hockey season. Varsity's record in the T.H.L. is one victory, sixteen losses, and a lone tie. Saturday's disaster may be attributed to the fact that the blue team had only two subs on hand for the contest and they were eight exhausted Beavers who watched H. & D. run in four goals in the final twenty-five minutes.

Sissons opened the scoring on a solo tally after thirteen minutes of play by a drive from just inside the blue line which caught the corner. Varsity continued to dominate the action until Clark Heyd of Hinde and Dauch pushed in a pass from brother Cecil half way through the middle period. Brown, (Continued on Page 3)

THE MYSTERY AT 53!

Just an old red-brick building almost on the very threshold of the University. A large dwelling, in no way remarkable by its appearance in the eyes of the casual passer-by. But a house, nevertheless, that has given rise to more bewilderment in the undergraduate mind than any other private residence in the vicinity.

"Number 53", as it is known to the men in the residence next door, is a large, old-fashioned edifice of red brick situated in large, well-kept grounds which are sub-divided by neat little lattice fences. An iron fence, studded with spikes, and with a stout iron gate, separates "53" from the busy street. Another iron fence skirts the walk between the neighbouring residence.

The dwellers of "53", if real flesh-and-blood dwellers there be, are no believers in the inventions and comforts of this modern age. No automobile has ever been known to stop there, and no garage has been provided for one. The magic currents of electricity do not invade the building, and illumination is by gas, or sometimes gassy tapers. No telephone line enters that house, nor has a telegraph boy ever been known to stop there.

Several years ago, during a small-time riot, the residence men succeeded in breaking a fair proportion of the windows on that side of "53" which faces the residence. The next day a workman appeared and replaced the shattered glass, then went his way. The householder, indignant or not, had no word to say. Later, more windows were broken, and it became a custom to throw debris from lunches over the fence, sometimes adding old cans and (Continued on Page 4)

Law Students Should Get Paid For Working

One of the many abuses which goes on year after year meeting with little opposition is the practice in which firms of lawyers are prone to indulge—that of hiring a law student to do the odd jobs around the office and paying him off in experience. This apparently was a practice started back somewhere in the dark ages when the practice of law was just emerging. At that time in the world's development it was customary to apprentice willing lads to practicing tradesmen and allow them to learn the trade. While it cost about a cent and a half per day to live in those days it was regarded as being scarcely worth while to pay an apprentice and it was generally agreed to give him the experience and groceries and call it square.

However, the price of groceries went up in time and little by little the idea sunk in that an apprentice could not live on experience. So for some time now every other department has been paying apprentices. But not the law. Law is founded on tradition. What was decreed as just a century ago is still right and just to the lawyers. It was long ago decreed that students would receive no pay. That was supposed to settle the question for all posterity. So far it has not been questioned.

However, it must be apparent to all thinking people that students who work should get paid for it. Not merely in lunch money—but in amounts proportionate to the work done. When a student does the work of an office boy he should be paid at least the salary of an office boy. To assume that because he is getting experience he does not deserve pay is somewhat nonsensical. What man doing a job of work of any kind is not getting experience? And it is not suggested that all men getting experience should work for nothing.

As the matter stands at present it amounts to exploitation of the student body. It is unfair to ask men to work for nothing under any circumstances. Merely because there happens to be a surplus of law students anxious to learn the business is not adequate reason to take advantage of their eagerness by permitting them to work for no wages. A change in this time-worn custom is long overdue. The present system does no credit to the profession.

Comfort a Necessity While Writing Exams

With just three more issues of The Varsity left we feel it is time that we put in the annual plea for more comfortable quarters in which to write our examinations. None of the rooms in the various buildings on the campus which are used for examination purposes are planned to give a maximum of comfort and convenience but one above all stands out as a den or horrors. That is the one which is the largest and therefore used by more students, Examination Hall at the rear of Simcoe Hall.

No torture chamber of medieval times could compare with it. It is stuffy, it is dark, it is dirty. And in addition the desks must have been an invention of the devil. The tables, having been made for men to work at while standing, are so high that the chairs have to be perched on two by two wooden blocks. The unfortunate student, who in the throes of concentrated thought, unconsciously shifts his chair by so much as two inches suddenly finds himself on the floor. A smart blow on the back of the head can hardly be considered conducive to great mental exertion.

It is disgraceful that in a university of this size which prides itself on its modern equipment there is no proper space for writing examinations. Examinations are a mental strain and are quite capable in themselves of causing headaches without any assistance from a poorly ventilated room. The first requisite of an examination hall should be airiness; this none of them are. The next requisite should be comfortable chairs, and no chair in which one is afraid to wriggle is comfortable.

There are still nearly two months before the beginning of examinations, time enough to provide more adequate accommodation for the unfortunates who must write them. We hope that those responsible will have pity on us and spare us at least the horrors of Examination Hall.

University Becoming Music Conscious

The undergraduates of the University of Toronto can be justifiably proud of the standard of musical entertainment that is available on the campus. The Hart House String Quartet gives a series of concerts in Convocation Hall; well known artists appear regularly at the Sunday Evening Concerts and the Friday Afternoon Recitals in Hart House, and at the musicales arranged by college societies.

In addition to this there is the work of undergraduate musical bodies, the fame of which has spread beyond the campus. The Victoria Music Club, the Hart House Glee Club, the informal recitals in Hart House, the University Band, all feature the work of student talent. Now that the permanence of the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra is assured we have another body that merits the appreciation of students who are interested in music.

The first appearance of this organization last year was the result of hard work on the part of J. J. Weinzwieg, the director, and of the members of his orchestra. This year's concert, held a week ago in Hart House Theatre, indicated a rapid improvement in performance and an added interest on the part of the student body.

The University of Toronto Symphony is sponsored by the Students' Administrative Council, who provide the financial backing for this and several similar organizations. The orchestra was founded through the efforts of its present director, J. J. Weinzwieg, who is now in his final year in the Faculty of Music. The musicians who work with him come from the different faculties and colleges in the University.

Rehearsals are begun in the fall for the annual concert which is given at the beginning of March and the members devote considerable time in order to produce a satisfactory program. According to members of this year's audience the orchestra is living up to the standard of music to which students at the University of Toronto are accustomed. It is to be hoped that the efforts of the original members will result in the permanent establishment of a University Symphony.

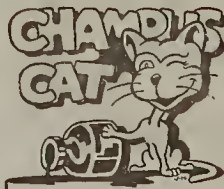

Did You Flunk Your Exams?

Those who obtained low grades in the Christmas tests may find some consolation in the results of a recent enquiry conducted by a distinguished British commission on the question of examiners. Startling discrepancies in the marks awarded to the same papers by various examiners working under identical rules were revealed.

Ten different examiners marked one English essay and the marks varied from 15 to 78. The average range in marks was as high as 36.5. These papers were marked by impression. When marked under a detailed scheme it was expected the discrepancies would tend to disappear, but the average range was reduced only from 36.5 to 28.9. Even in a mathematical paper, the difference ran as high as 39 marks. Fifteen scripts which had originally been awarded the same mark by the authority concerned were given to fifteen examiners and the marks ranged from 21 to 70. The same papers were given to the same examiners twelve months later and the marks ranged from 16 to 71 with individual examiners disagreeing with their own previous decision. In another test of a similar nature examiners changed their minds as to the verdict of pass, fail and credit in 92 cases out of 200.

The experiments were carefully conducted and the examiners knew of the experiment. Such facts are amazing and are more than likely true in similar situations in

HUMAN INTEREST

It happened two years ago but we still find it refreshing enough to chortle at. A friend of ours was out of work, so he replied to an ad in the paper offering a job in a town a hundred miles distant. He wired the advertiser collect in somewhat the following manner, "Job accepted. Will be up tomorrow". By hitch-hiking all night he arrived in the town the next day with exactly ten cents. The telegram would cost thirty-five. A sign on a roadside hot-dog stand advertised peanuts at ten cents a bag with a lucky coin in each package. Blithely our hero laid out his last dime. Inside the package was a fifty cent piece. The perfection of the story is only marred by the fact that he didn't get the job.

C-C

And then there was the friend who tried to smuggle a saw into a bundling party . . .

C-S

Yes, we have three of them. This one, after reading about the Engineers taking time out for a spot of tea, is making a good thing out of selling them embroidered lab smocks.

C-C

Funny about these Spers. Strictly applicable to them is, we believe, our epigram for 1935 concerning women. They are all right as long as they are in a group of less than two.

C-C

Found a new low in radio advertising on Sunday. A certain laundry in Buffalo was advertising a special laundry service for babies. As an extra inducement a flat rate was offered for twins at the same price as a singleton. Diapers to be some truth in the statement that two can live as cheaply as one.

C-C

The usual motley crowd were gathered in Bowles at 3.40 a.m. A panhandler was carefully counting out his earnings. A nickel slipped through his fingers and rolled crazily across the floor. An over-dressed youth kicked at it and sent it flying under a row of upturned tables. The panhandler scrambled after it and

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Hart House String Quartet

The Hart House String Quartet played their fourth concert of the season last Friday and Saturday, playing works by Mozart, Schumann and McEwen.

The Mozart Hunting Quartet opened the program. The charming melody and facile construction of this work have made it one of the most familiar pieces of all chamber music. The dainty opening theme, the graceful minuetto, the tranquil adagio, and the vigorous finale mark the work a light-hearted one from beginning to end. The players were, as usual, splendidly capable, although the polished brilliance of Mr. Levey's playing was not too adaptable to the idyllic simplicity of the adagio theme.

McEwen's "Threnody" Quartet is a rather formless work, difficult to describe, except to say that it displays the modern tendency to be so engrossed in subtle harmonies as to forget about melody. Hence, it formed a decided contrast to the Mozart Quartet. The tonal and harmonic contrasts, the dramatic crescendos make the work an interesting one. It is interesting, also, for the novel and pretty effects it obtains, particularly the eerie beauty of the muted viola.

The little-known Schumann Quartet in A Major displays the poetic fancy and the delicacy of treatment for which the composer is noted. The opening movement is gently whimsical, while the second movement is a series of variations—one of Schumann's favourite forms. The adagio, a profoundly beautiful thing, is followed by a lively finale which shows Schumann's capacity to achieve astonishing and effective contrasts without once nearing the limitations of his medium.

You would naturally expect Country Doctor to be very obvious of plot and treatment since it was deliberately manufactured out of the now familiar legend of five girls babies all arriving to one mother at the same time, without benefit of incubators or other advanced Burnside equipment. Yet Jean Hersholt takes the central role to give a sincere portrayal of the modest Dr. Dafee and his lines are so characteristic of that famous general practitioner that they have doubtlessly been taken from life. But the extremely long build-up to the quintuplicate climax is disjointedly thrown together, and a whole column could be filled with the ridiculous boners that are the result. The location of the big event is arbitrarily given as "north of Montreal", yet the proud papa telephones all his birth notices exclusively to the North Bay weekly as in the real story—and the telephone lines have all been down for weeks. As the last steamer is shown pulling away from the dock carrying the lumberjacks down to Montreal for their winter

St. Hilda's won the interfaculty badminton championship Friday afternoon, and their name will be the first to be inscribed on the cup presented by U.C. Betty Clement won the singles, and Mary Becker and Elspeth Chisholm took the doubles, making it a double win for the Saints, and giving them ten points. U.C. came second with five and Vic got two.

Tonight the intercollegiate basketball team will play its return game with McMaster. They had two practices last week, and will travel to Hamilton this afternoon if the roads are good. Unfortunately Kay Brown will not be able to play because of the hand she injured in the Bronze Baby series. Alice Elshout also may not be on the lineup, but Marjorie Leslie is going up in her place.

The Varsity hockey team will attempt to lift the Toronto championship tonight at 7.40 in the Royal Canadian Arena, when they meet the Toronto Pals. In the four games the co-eds have played, they defeated the Toronto Ladies twice, and won one and lost one to the Pals. If they can win tonight they will get the T.H.L. title, and will be eligible to compete in the Ladies Ontario Hockey Association games. Here's wishing them luck.

Jr. School Basketeers Take Emmanuel 14-13

Jr. S.P.S. defeated Emmanuel in an interfaculty basketball playoff in the upper gym Friday afternoon by a score of 14-13.

The game was poorly played with both teams showing a decided lack of any kind of passing attack. Emmanuel were particularly adept at throwing the ball around with no one on the receiving end of their passes. The shooting of both teams was also decidedly off, both on long and close shots, which was responsible for the low score.

S.P.S. scored 10 points to Emmanuel's 5 in the first period. In the second period Emmanuel speeded up and Edwards gave them a 1 point lead by sinking 3 foul shots. But Usatis came back to score the winning basket for school on a neat one-hand toss.

FACULTY TEAMS IN HOCKEY GAMES

Sr. School Defeat Emmanuel; Victoria and Dents in Draw

3-3 TIE GAME EXCITING

Friday afternoon at Varsity Arena Vic and Dents battled to a 3-3 tie, and Senior S.P.S. defeated Emmanuel College 6-1, in the Jennings Cup play-downs.

In the opening game between Victoria and Dents, the Victorians seemed to have a decided advantage and held it until half way through the second period. They opened up with a fast, clean attack, and after four minutes Gregory beat McHugh on a nice rush up and down the ice with Vic having a little the better of the play, when Spence broke through to tie it up. Gregory broke loose again, cut through the defence and scored. Two minutes later Saunders banged the rubber in during a scramble around the Dents net, and it bounced off McHugh's head into the net.

In the last frame the Scarlet and Gold team was taken by surprise when Shultis banged the puck home in the first minute. Both teams steadied and there was no scoring until the last few minutes, when Leask made a nice pass to Shultis, who tied the game up. This ended the scoring and the final result was a 3-3 deadlock. For Vic Saunders, Monzon and Gregory turned in excellent performances and Shultis, Spence and Leask for their opponents.

In the second game, Senior School were superior to the Ministers in every phase of the play and the game was nothing more than a good work-out for the Engineers. Dyke of Emmanuel scored their lone counter, which incidentally took place on a long shot from the Toike Ojke blue line in the first minute of play. Davidson, Kerr and King shared the scoring honours for the team from the little Red School-house.

BADMINTON CHAMPIONSHIP WON BY SAINT HILDA'S

St. Hilda's won their second interfaculty championship last Friday, when Betty Clement took the singles event and Mary Becker and Elspeth Chisholm the doubles, in the badminton tournament held at the York Badminton Club.

The final games were contests between U.C. and St. Hilda's, since the Nurses' and Victoria's entrants were eliminated in the earlier rounds. The singles final was featured by long rallies and the games were hard fought, but Betty Clement played a hard driving game to defeat Mary Hughes of U.C. 13-14, 13-10 and 11-6.

In the doubles final, Mary Ecclestone and Pat Downey of U.C. were defeated by the Saints' team by scores of 15-6 and 18-17, but the games were long and evenly matched.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Clarke Hood

'Tis election time around the university, and daily some new executive body is being polled into office. The bug extends to the Athletic Directorate and elections will be held next Friday to select five new members from the undergraduates. The retiring members, all well known to sport followers, are Bobby Coulter, Hughie Marks, Wince McCatty, Jimmy MacPherson and Bruce Squires. Each athletic association of the various faculties have two votes with O.C.E. and Forestry being limited to one. Six votes are given the executive committees of each of the major sports, namely rugby, track, hockey, basketball and boxing, wrestling and fencing.

On the 26th of this month the athletes of the university will stage a grand "Get-together" in Hart House when the Athletic dinner will be held. Members of the board of governors will be there along with representatives of the various colleges. At this dinner first T's will be given to all those who have earned them this year and those who have won first colours three times will be presented with a bronze T. Gus Greco will be presented with the Johnny Copp Memorial trophy which he won by his great work on the gridiron last fall. In addition all the cups representing interfaculty championships will be presented.

Next winter international hockey will be extended to include intercollegiate competition. For years the pros have had international hockey while a few amateur leagues of questionable status have included teams on both sides of the border. So this venture can truthfully be called the first International Amateur Hockey League. A cup has been presented by Alexie Thompson of Yale and will go to the winner. The American colleges are Yale, Dartmouth, Harvard and Princeton. They are the members of the Quadrangular League, one of the oldest hockey associations in the States.

This league will have many advantages to Varsity. Intercollegiate competition should raise the attendance figures as the university boys can really do some hollering for their Alma Momma. Then too this league has definite eligibility rules which are enforced. This is something that has been lacking in the O.H.A. for many a moon, and Varsity teams, out for the fun of the game, have been up against players whose business is hockey. With prospects appearing so bright for a good team next year and with the added incentive of intercollegiate competition, Ross Workman may yet see a full house out to view a hockey match.

Elsewhere in these columns appears the rest of the interfaculty baseball schedule. As these games are played entirely for the game's sake, it has been decided to play all the postponed games, including the ones that have no bearing on the group standing. Teams with a view towards defaulting are reminded that such action disqualifies the team concerned from interfaculty competition next year.

This afternoon at Varsity Arena two crucial games will be played in the interfaculty playdowns. Two teams will advance into the semi-finals while two others will retire for the season. Dents and Vic will start their game tied on goals scored which means that everything depends on this game. Vic are defending champions and were strongly favoured to capture the Jennings Cup again. However, they have encountered strong opposition from the Dents who are out to avenge their defeats in the Mulock and Arts Faculty cup finals.

In the other game Pharmacy will face a one-goal handicap when they meet U.C. In their first game there was little to choose between these two teams and judging from their last game the score can quite easily go the other way. Either team are bound to be strong contenders for the title. While Pharmacy can be depended upon to display a large cheering section, the other faculties have been rather lax in their support. Visitors to the arena will witness two classy hockey games, and it doesn't cost a thing. The first game is at four bongs.

 the purpose of teaching the art of fine printing.

"We have hardly done anything at all yet," declared Miss Ray, "but when the group becomes more proficient, we will expand our activities. We intend sometime to publish a small book of contributions from our members, which will be set up on the press. More and rarer kinds of type will be added in order to provide an opportunity of doing fine printing work." She remarked that the present press was one of several hundred private hand presses whose owners were emulating the example of William Morris. Morris, we learned, had done invaluable service in restoring printing to a fine art.

The library press was officially inaugurated last November, and was christened "the Little Cachalot Press" after Dr. Pratt's poem of that name. No commercial work is being done on it, but members may use it for themselves or to provide publicity for any group in which they are interested.

U.C. MAGAZINE LIKED

 which are of vital and everyday interest to the undergraduates, instead of catering to the small majority of intellectually minded people who alone are equipped to appreciate the material found in the "Undergraduate".

Wilfred C. Smith, II U.C., when questioned, said that he considered the cover excellent, showing an improvement over that of last year, and the general impression gained by looking through the book good.

Anita Faessler, I U.C., when interviewed said: "The Undergraduate rounds out the serious element which is lacking in The Varsity. I also like the art because it is not so conventional, and is getting back to nature."

"A book of this type is exactly what its editor wishes it to be, and Claude Bissell wanted to have a literary magazine," said Saul Rae. He added that in his opinion, a splendid effort was being made in protest against the growing lack of interest in creative literary work, which is being endangered by the strong emphasis placed on political and economic problems by the students.

Other opinions gleaned during this survey were to the effect that "the Undergraduate does not adequately reflect the literary propensities of U.C."; that "something should be done to stimulate the students' interest in the magazine"; that "in general, the poetry printed this year was tripe and compared unfavourably with high school efforts"; and that the cuts of last year were not appreciated in this year's issue.

STUDENT PLAY BEGINS

 tion. Several Russian tragedies have been presented in Toronto this year, but it is believed that this will be students' first chance to see a Russian production of lighter vein.

The scene of the comedy is placed in a provincial Russian town of the last century. It depicts, in humorous and satirical style, the corruptness and pomposity of the petty officials of the town, who have been free from government inspection for ten years.

The consternation of the officials when they hear through secret sources that an Inspector-General from the capital is coming incognito to check up on their activities, and their ludicrous attempts to placate the great man when they think they have penetrated his disguise, give full scope for the sharp-pointed pen of Gogol. Their final downfall supplies a fitting climax for a fast-moving and ever-uproarious artistic work.

The cast chosen is one well-fitted to get the full benefit from the satire and humour of the writer. With the entire dramatic talent of the university to choose from, Martin B. Loeb, student producer of the play, has chosen his cast with all possible care, and every player is well-fitted for the part assigned. Twenty-three men and women take prominent roles.

Drama Committee officials are confident of a full house for both nights of the production. They have every reason to be: the Committee came into being for the express purpose of filling a student need, while the type of play and the all-star cast are of the kind to attract a large following under any conditions.

floor of the legislature. "Commission government has gone so far in tearing down our parliamentary government that even Sir William Mulock considers it a menace," he said.

Mr. Heighington attacked the "great babit of probing everything." He said that all enquiries should be undertaken in the parliamentary chambers and fully debated by the members of the House even though it would probably take longer than the commission procedure.

Warning against brain trusts and experts in government, the speaker pointed to experiences of Britain and the United States as evidence of inefficiency when governments by experts are introduced.

In his rambling address, Mr. Heighington contended that political patronage was "perfectly all right as long as it is not abused and then made into an evil."

He believed it was much better to hire a man for a governmental position on the recommendation of a member than to hire a perfect stranger who "might be a rascal."

The annual meeting of the club will be held next Thursday in Hart House at eight p.m.; it was announced at the close of the meeting.

Speaking on the problem of the hydro contracts and the controversy now raging in the Ontario legislature, Mr. Heighington said that the objections made by the Conservative party were not made in a partisan manner but that the Opposition was conscientiously convinced that the Hepburn Government is in the wrong.

All doctors, nurses and assistants are salaried officials responsible to the government.

Not only medical students, but all university and professional-school students who achieve a certain scholastic standard are paid a day labourer's wage, according to Dr. Reed. Moreover, tuition, rooms, meals and books are free to all. Only the students who fail to reach the standard must pay their way.

The windows facing the residence are so covered that curious students cannot see into the mystery house, and no one has ever been seen to enter or leave it. Even the postman passes it by, day by day, as if there had never been such a number on his beat.

The big red house still stands there in all its Victorian majesty, unruffled by the march of progress, and too disdainful to pay any attention to the foolish frolickings of the undergraduate body. Even the little number, "53", looks forth with mid-Victorian modesty, apparently abashed at all the curious comment which it has caused.

lack of intelligence or by a mental conflict.

Mental diseases may be divided into two groups—feeble-mindedness and insanity. The former is divided into 3 classes, idiots, imbeciles and morons. For this group there is no cure but remarkable results have been achieved by correct education and supervision. Although 50 per cent of the morons have inherited their mental condition, the two lower grades are not hereditary and therefore wholesale sterilization is hardly warranted.

The resulting argument culminated with the youth saying, "O.K. Smart Guy. If you'll give the bum a quarter, I will." Our well meaning citizen withdrew a change purse and proffered the eager bum two dimes and a nickel. The youth tossed him a quarter. A clanging street car emptied the restaurant of all except the youth, the bum and Ignatz. The bum walked over to the youth and with genuine gratitude said, "Here's your quarter, Mac."

ART, MUSIC AND ORAMA

Margaret Eaton Hall

Petticoat Fever demands one matinee idol in the leading role and a cast of fairly competent actors. The Actors' Colony Theatre production of the play has John Holden as lead and a very excellent supporting company. Mr. Holden, however, cannot exude personality in the manner in which Dennis King does in his production.

The Dennis King show went to New York to become "the season's screwiest success". In our opinion that measure of success was achieved by the work of Mr. King alone. There is not much to the play itself, it is a farce with its good moments and with its bad. The bad part is centred in the third act which on Saturday night dragged very badly.

The Actors' Colony Theatre seem to have great difficulty in securing suitable plays. While we did not see "The Wind and the Rain" it appears to us that their choice of plays is made with a view to putting Mr. Holden in the leading role. Indeed their policy of casting leading local actors in their plays seems to be done in order to attract the personal following of the individual actor.

Until the Actors' Colony group begins choosing their material on the basis of the play itself we fear that they will not be able to achieve their aim, a repertory theatre. They have competent talent in Grace Matthews, Babs Hitchman, Frank Hemingway and Dick Fonger, actors who can put across a good play.

It is our opinion that audiences will not spend their money watching capable performers working with flimsy material. We hope that some day we will see a play under the auspices of this company in which the actors are given a play worthy of their talent.

N.C.P.

Last Saturday night witnessed the debut of a new musical organization in the form of a mixed choir consisting of students of the Ontario College of Education. Under the capable leadership of Mr. William Little they gave a credible performance in the auditorium of U.T.S. The ensemble was well balanced and was particularly fine in the soprano section. Songs such as "Hunting Song", "Bonnie Dundee", and "Call Her Herring", favourites with the audience, were well received. Outstanding amongst the soloists was the singing of Miss Puynghyong Rhu, who rendered a group of Korean songs in her own native tongue, and a group in English. She possesses a pleasant soprano voice which was particularly effective in her own folk songs, "Border Ballad" by Scott, sung by the choir, proved to be the climax of the evening, with its stirring march-like rhythm. The choir was supported by an instrumental ensemble who rendered a group of their own numbers.

binge, those picturesque fellows join lustily in chanting The Maple Leaf Forever, and they know all the words, too. While the little northwoods hamlet is cut off from civilization in the winter blizzard, a bar room pianist pounds out that favourite of the dear dead days gone by, I'm Shooting High. And the rescue plane bringing serum to the diphtheria sufferers in the snowbound community takes off on wheels from the Montreal airport, in which balmy southern retreat there is nary a snowflake in sight.

But you forget all this nonsense when you suddenly find yourself on the scene at the event which Hollywood has rendered more funny than blessed and very funny indeed. In fact, you may well be pardoned for thinking yourself still at Daftdill night, for the local censors must all have been out to lunch when this sequence came through. The wind-up of the film, featuring the quints in a blend of newsreel clippings and shots taken while the company was on location in Calendar, is fortunately more entertaining than touching.

FEES QUESTION TO BE DISCUSSED AT QUEEN'S PARK

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

London, March 9.—Great Britain stands today as a bulwark against European war, attempting to negotiate a new European peace treaty. Officials are apparently convinced that Great Britain will have to be an intermediary in any discussion between France and Germany concerning the recent denunciation by the Reich of the mutual security treaty.

Berlin, March 9.—German troops continue to pour into the Rhineland; police garrisons there have been incorporated into the army.

Rome, March 9.—Italy and Germany signed a treaty today by which each country agreed to recognize the other's civil and juridical codes. It is rumored that the two countries are seeking a rapprochement in the present crisis.

No Immediate Danger of War in Europe as Germany not Prepared

FRENCH ATTACK UNLIKELY

There is no immediate danger of a European war unless some unexpected "incident" occurs, in the opinion of Professor L. T. Morgan of the Economics Department.

"Hitler is not yet ready to fight," he stated, "and won't be for perhaps two years. If France attacks, she nullifies the advantages of the Franco-Russian pact, for that treaty is valid in the case of German aggression only. Mussolini is tied up with the Ethiopian problem. And Great Britain is still fence-sitting."

PHI LAMBDA PHI TO MAKE MERRY AT CHARITY BALL

The annual charity ball of the Phi Lambda Phi fraternity will take place at the Crystal Ballroom of the King Edward Hotel on Saturday evening, March 14th.

So successful has this function been for the last eight years that accommodations have been procured to provide for a record crowd this time. The entire proceeds of this venture are turned over to charitable purposes. In the past, funds from the ball have equipped a games room at the Boys' Club, subscriptions have been given to two Toronto hospitals, and donations to such organizations as the Federation of Public Charities.

The dance is entirely convened by the Phi Lambda Phi fraternity. Music will be provided by Luigi Romanelli's orchestra.

W.U.A. CONTEST WON BY ANN FERGUSSON

Blames Women for Dominance of Men in Debating Field

SIX ENTRANTS IN CONTEST

Charging that University College co-eds through lack of confidence in their own ability were allowing the men of the college to completely dominate the field of debating, Ann Fergusson, III U.C., with a vigorous plea for a revival of women's debating, won the St. Margaret's College Alumnae public speaking contest held last night in the Women's Union.

Miss Fergusson declared that the president of the Debating Society had found it necessary to beg and implore co-eds to join in debates, and suggested that aid might be sought from the men in attempting to arouse more interest in women's debates.

Six co-eds entered the contest, speaking on everything from "Euthanasia" to "The History of the University" and "Genius Versus the University". Other subjects were "Historical Medicine" and "Character as Expressed through the Medium of Personality".

Judges were Miss Gray, representing the St. Margaret's College Alumnae Association; Mrs. Kirkwood and Professor Humphries. The meeting was conducted by the Women's Undergraduate Association and nominations for officers in the next elections were held.

CONANT ADVOCATES MORE SCHOLARSHIPS

President of Harvard Addresses Progressive Education Association Convention

20 PER CENT NEED AID

Chicago, March 8.—A condemnation of the "work your way through college" theory was made here by Dr. Conant, president of Harvard University, before 2,000 delegates at the Progressive Education's Association Conference.

Classing the old theory as more destructive than productive, Dr. Conant urged that the "promising youth" be helped through college, not with part-time work, but with "large scholarships".

"It is for this youth that scholarships usually are given and there is a widespread debate now as to whether a given scholarship fund should be divided into small or large scholarships."

"I say 'large' for a promising student should be given sufficient funds to enable him to complete his higher education, without luxury, but also without privation. This 'trying to earn a living' at the same time results only in disaster."

Approves Police Censorship Callaghan Tells Debating Parliament

AVERAGE 'COP' NO MORALIST

Censorship Necessary for Immature Minds, Says Honey

"I believe the average 'cop' is not a moralist. He is not an enlightened censor. He gets around a bit and learns what people are like. And he would have the greatest diffidence about telling people what they ought to do. He is a man of the world." With these words, Mr. Morley Callaghan, speaking from the floor of the House, assured the Victoria Debating Parliament that he meant what he said to the downtown press, that he approved of censorship of books by the police.

In supporting the motion "That this House favours a vigorous censorship of the press and theatre", Floyd Honey wished to make clear that he did not favour any present form of censorship. But since we have the mentality of a fourteen-year-old, it is necessary. In matters of art "the after effects of an aesthetic experience must be taken into consideration."

Although many things could be said about the stage he confined himself to the motion picture, pointing out the bad effects of gangster films on slum children. He ended his arguments by an urgent plea for "enlightened censorship."

The negative took as their motto the saying of Patrick Henry, "Give me liberty or give me death."

Roy Kemp, first speaker, felt that the sustaining of the motion would be a backward step. He decided to deal with the political side of the question. Aristotle said that "Man is by nature a reasoning animal." "What can he do," the speaker wondered, "in a state where the press is muzzled?"

ENGINEERING SOCIETY HOLDS FINAL MEETING

Laurel and Hardy Film Plus a Successful Report Provided Cheerful Finale

NEW EXECUTIVE PRESENTED

The annual general meeting of the Engineering Society was held yesterday afternoon in Room C22, Mining Building. At this meeting the new executive was introduced, and the old executive made the annual reports. Before getting down to the serious business on hand, the Engineers enjoyed a Laurel and Hardy comedy film entitled "Do Detectives Think?". The conclusion reached by most of those present was that they don't, and some of the audience ventured to help the actors out of their dilemmas. For a silent picture, the sound effects were particularly good.

In serious vein, the retiring president, W. M. Lawason, summed up the activities of the society during the past year. He pointed out that in each case—School Dinner, School Nite, and School At-Home—a great success had been scored, and that the School Semi-Centennial Convention was an outstanding event in the history of School. The president congratulated the members of the executive and heads of committees in charge of these functions on their success in making the past year stand out as one of the best.

"This has been a very active year for the society," he stated. "We have gained the name of the most active (Continued on Page 4)

SKITS AND PLAYS TO BE PRESENTED BY DRAMATIC DENTS

Dentantes, the annual dramatic night of the Dental Faculty, will be presented in a new and improved form in Hart House Theatre on Friday evening. The innovation will consist of three one-act plays, as well as three skits.

There will be two comedies, "East of Eden", and "On Dartmoor", and one detective play of the melodrama type, "The Yellow Triangle". Thirty-five actors will take part in the presentations, which are under the direction of George Young, who also directed Daffydil Night.

Tickets have been selling rapidly, and a full house is expected.

Mr. Henry will use the Ad Hoc committee's report on the increase in fees as the basis of his attack on the educational policy of the Hepburn government. The Ad Hoc committee was formed early in the fall term to investigate the reasons for the fees increase and made a lengthy report which was published in this paper before Christmas.

War may result in Violent Revolution

Present developments in Europe appear to be precipitating the Western Civilization toward some such catastrophe as was experienced in the Great War. But the world today is in a condition which is far removed from the situation of 1914. And the results would differ proportionately.

Prior to the last world war the elements of gory romance still clung about marching men in uniform. At the beginning of that war it was a real difficulty to get into the Canadian Army. That condition has changed. There are left no longer any illusions about the horror and waste which such a struggle would entail. And potential soldiers are certain to consider these things before rushing to the defense of their own or some other country.

However, this is not the only difference which would be apparent. There is no similarity whatever between the outlook of the average man of today and the man in 1914. Almost all literature within the last ten years has been of a distinctly socialistic nature. And slowly but surely are men's ideas changing. While the ideas prevalent today do not tend in any particular direction it is certain that men are more politically conscious than ever before. And men who do their own thinking make poor soldiers. To get enough men under arms today to fight a war would be extremely dangerous. The possibilities of a revolution are so strong as to render hazardous any attempt to conscript men in America today for foreign service of any kind.

This tendency on the part of potential soldiers does not necessarily entail any lack of patriotism. Wars have in the past been used as an excuse to avoid revolutions. But under the present conditions a war would probably plunge the western world into a revolution which would surpass in disastrous consequences any war.

Hitler himself may be making warlike moves to divert the attention of trouble makers within. This charge has often been laid at Mussolini's door. France has seen trouble of this nature in the not so long past. Spain is at present seething under the stress of internal eruptions, while England alone is at the present time free from disorder. If the Anglo-Saxon Society is to avoid trouble of this nature it cannot afford to underestimate the dangers which lie along the pathway of an armed conflict.

Five Dollar Fee Would Aid Athletes

A solution to the financial embarrassment of the Athletic Association is being suggested by various people here connected with athletics in its several branches. The suggested solution comes from Warren Stevens, Director of Athletics, who would have a fee of five dollars from each student introduced as compulsory. This fee, he says, would enable the University not only to carry on their present activities, but allow them to bring many more outstanding teams from United States colleges to compete here. It would do away with the present Students' Season tickets, which cost $3.25. All students, by paying the five dollars, would be enabled to see every athletic activity free of charge, it is said. And there would be more activities to see than now.

We have every sympathy for the Athletic Director in his effort to make the Athletic books balance, and to bring added sports to this University. There must be few students who would not welcome additional sports here, and there are a great many athletes who would bring fame to Toronto, if they were enabled to compete with other universities. The swimming team is able to take only one trip a year into foreign fields, but has been victorious in every competition. Toronto boxers, given the opportunity, would probably show themselves of first rate ability in intercollegiate sport. As it is now, they are compelled to find matches with local amateurs at the Gardens. Although track men are few here this year, there are still some of outstanding worth, who should be given a chance at the larger intercollegiate meets. As long as there are only a couple of meets a year in which to compete, no worthwhile results can ever be won in this field. Frequent competition is necessary if outstanding track men are to be had.

But while we would like to see more athletic activity at the University, we quite realize that Mr. Stevens' suggestion has weak points. It appears to us that every time any organization on the campus cannot make ends meet, steps are immediately taken to make it compulsory for students to pay the shot for it along with their fees. If there were only one such compulsory fee, there would be little to grumble about. But, coming as it would as merely one more thing to pay for, amid an ever-increasing number of them, we fear there would be a great deal of opposition from all quarters. Our chief quarrel is not with the proposed compulsory athletic fee, which would probably be of great benefit, but with all the seemingly senseless other compulsory fees.

Alumni Society Needs Student Support

One of the organizations on the Campus of the University of Toronto which apparently needs more student support is the Alumni Federation. This body, while active to the extent of its financial limits, does not occupy the place in student affairs at the University of Toronto that it does in other Universities. While the number of students at Toronto makes it difficult to unite them all as graduates, it is nevertheless important that the students lend themselves to the support of this society.

With the May examinations about one fifth of the University's population will be permanently leaving the campus. It is regrettable that the one organization which tends to keep alive the contacts made among the undergraduates does not figure more prominently in the affairs of the students. The fault lies not with the officials of the organization, but with the students themselves.

The value of an active alumni association can not be overrated. It is not likely that the immediate future will see much change in the difficulties which undergraduates experience in locating employment. At present it appears that the potential employer is quite willing, to give employment to graduates as long as they are successful business men before they apply. "Show us how you can make money for us and we will immediately hire you," is the answer which many students will hear in the next few months. In other universities the alumni society is very active in locating jobs for the graduates. In Toronto, unfortunately, it appears to be slightly different, a condition which should be remedied.

The numbers of students make the function of any society of this nature rather difficult. When four years at college does not suffice to get students acquainted with each other, it is difficult to get them acquainted and co-operating after graduation. The only means of accomplishing this is by greater effort and support from the students themselves.

On the 20th of March the Alumni Federation of the University of Toronto is holding an evening of entertainment and dancing in an effort to bring the undergraduates and the graduates together. The idea merits the support of every graduating student. The value of a strong alumni Society cannot be overestimated. The present drive for increase in membership should get results. The dance promises to be equal in entertainment value to any function on the campus. The purpose of the dance is one which surpasses most social events. It is in the interest of the students and the society alike that the project meet with success. And only the co-operation of the students can make it the success which will enable the society to be of increased value to students in the future.

Mere vocal ability and glib phrases have been permitted to masquerade as forward thinking.

The other night Hal T. took time out from his thesistical endeavours to arrange a date for himself, and from the following we suspect it rather got off to a bad start.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Hart House Theatre

"The Inspector-General", a satiric comedy by Gogol, Hart House Theatre, March 9 and 10.

The newly formed University Drama Committee is to be congratulated on giving us a production of a good play with a hard working cast under competent direction.

Gogol is comparatively unknown to audiences outside of his native country. In view of the fact that he is ranked with Dickens as a master of caricature and that his work is reflected in the classical Russian school of Turgenev, Tolstoi and others, it is important that we have some knowledge of Gogol's work.

Gogol is one of the few Russians who chose realism in depicting the happier side of Russian life. He is a master of the mimetic and of caricature.

The Inspector General is a satire on small town officialdom. It presents the problem of whether or not the author is introducing morals into the drama. Is art art if it does not teach a lesson? The Soviet Theatre has used this play as a satire on Czarist bureaucracy. But in our opinion the Inspector General is valuable simply because it presents a series of very clever caricatures. Gogol did not write his play with a definite idea in his mind, he writes of (Continued on Page 4)

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Jim Tiller

Spring is here. Old Man Winter may re-assert himself with chilling blasts but one trip through the athletic wing of Hart House will convince you that the season of mud, apple-blossoms and examinations has definitely arrived. They do keep it clean wonderfully well but no amount of towel-washing or air-cleaning can remove the atmosphere of apathy that pervades the place. Having noticed this condition for the last three years, we feel we must exclaim: "What is so depressing as a gym in Spring!"

Gone is the lively enthusiasm not long ago displayed in pick-up basketball games, amateur sport in its purest form. The interfaculty series struggles on, sustained by a hope of championship, and perspiring players repeatedly comment, "The gym is too hot!" Up in the arena, the puck-chasers seem to lack their former zip (or maybe the ice was soft), and back to the gym again, we have it on good authority that even the corrective classes are worthy of the vulgar interpretation of the symbol "P.T." The ennui extends to the locker-rooms where yawns go unsmothered and where anyone may be seen drowsing under a hot shower. A few brave souls take it cold. Then they boast about it.

The one bright spot is the baseball. Lovers of the diamond game peg the old pill around with the utmost delight, no doubt getting practiced-up so they'll have the jump on the other fellows when they try-out for the neighbourhood team. Now for a contrast, take a look at the rowing-room (awful) and at the boxing and wrestling rooms—here the determined athletes toil at the machine and perform muscle-disciplining contortions on the mat, wearing a gotta-keep-in-condition look on each sweat-streaked visage. . . . Down, up, down, up, one, two, three. . . . creak, creak. Yes, Spring is here.

Pharmacy and Emmanuel were eliminated from contention in the hockey rounds yesterday, and by their defeat, U.C. and Sr. S.P.S. progressed to the semi-finals. Vic and Dents will attempt to reach a decision tomorrow afternoon, and who do you think will win the Jennings Cup? We favour Victoria, because they've held the trophy in question for the last three years, if for no other reason. We wouldn't be surprised if they met the Schoolmen in the finals again. Wonder if S.P.S. can out-bruise them this year. Last season they boasted of winning the fight although they lost the hockey game. And don't forget, O.A.C. gets a crack at the winner.

The spectators at these hockey games have been deplorably few. We suggest that the attendance would increase considerably if the East and South doors of the arena were thrown open. Why must one go the long-way round just to enter by the North door? The arena caretakers explained it was to keep the kids out. But there was nothing to stop them coming through the North door. They evidently meant college kids. What about it, Mr. Workman?

VARSITY PUCKSTERS TRIUMPH IN SERIES

Senior S.P.S. Victorious Over Emmanuel in Last of Two Game Series

MEDIOCRE PLAYING

Last night at Varsity Arena the University College hockey team fought to a 1-1 tie with Pharmacy, to take the series by a 3-2 score. The game was not particularly well played, but U.C. had a few more opportunities to tally than did the Druggists. The first period saw some fair hockey, but neither side could get far, although the players did their best. Even when Young went to the cooler for tripping, Pharmacy was unable to click, and the period ended with no score.

In the second session Ridley of U.C. was boarded by Evans, and had to be carried from the ice. He suffered a slight concussion, and Evans took a five minute penalty. A few moments later Donaldson was penalized, but still the U.C. defence held off the attackers. Garneau stopped a shot of Morrison's that was deflected by a defenceman, and was toted to the dressing room, but returned to the game after several minutes. Finally Evans tallied from a pass by Ramsay to put the Pharmacists one up on the game.

The last frame was dull, and U.C. missed a lot of chances to pile up a lead. Blackmore took two trips to the sidelines, and after several tries, Donaldson scored on a fluke, when a shot hit Pronger's stick, and bounced into the net. Fifty seconds later he went off for a trip, but there was no more scoring. Pharmacy dragged off their goalie and substituted a forward, but it was too late—they couldn't break through the Collegians' line, and the final score of the game was 1-1, which gave the U.C. team a 3-2 victory on the round.

The second game of the afternoon completed the variety show when Sr. S.P.S. took a 2-0 verdict from Emmanuel in the finale of their two game series. School won the first encounter by the useful score of 6-1 and started out this game in an easy-going fashion that held Emmanuel in check but at the same time did not add to their lead. The first period was merely a ragged exhibition of expert shinny, though King scored for School with a hard drive from a scramble in front of the net. The last session began at a faster pace with School forcing the play and cooping the Preachers in their own defensive area. Walkey scored the second and last goal for School with a shot that caught the top corner of the net, after a general milling around with every man playing up the ice.

School had all the best of the play in this game and were able to do everything but score. Emmanuel only broke away on a few attempts and Dyke was their most dangerous threat; Walkey, Kerr, Stothard and King stood out for School.

The ice for this game was in terrible shape and the players had difficulty controlling the puck, while combination was nearly an impossibility since the passes came too slow on the soft, cut up surface.

U.C.: Caswell, Donaldson, Campbell, Morrison, Slingsby, Laug, Scif, Pharmacy: Campbell, Ellinghausen, Ridley, Young and Evans. Pronger, Evans, Garneau, Blackmore, Ramsay, Coulter, Souliere, Gilmore and Johnson.

Sr. S.P.S.: Stroud, King, Stothard,

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Last night's hockey game between the Varsity team and Toronto Pals was postponed, so the possession of the city championship will not be decided for another week or so. Since it is getting rather late in the season, it is open to question whether the Varsity girls will wish to keep on playing, but they may take a trip to Preston.

Now that all the interfaculty championships have been decided, it is interesting to note that Victoria, U.C. and St. Hilda's got them all. Vic took the tennis and baseball, U.C. the hockey and swimming, and St. Hilda's the basketball and badminton. All of the championships except one changed hands; the basketball honours were the exception, and they were retained by St. Hilda's.

If swimming in puddles isn't your idea of fun, remember that the Lillian Massey pool offers slightly larger scope. Next year an intercollegiate meet such as was held in Hamilton this year, may be staged here, and Queen's have indicated that they might be interested in sending up a team. Swimming would certainly be an ideal inter-collegiate sport, and it is to be hoped that the plan may succeed.

JR. MED. CAGERS DEFEAT SR. VICS

Game Close Despite Continuous Lead of Victors after First Session

SPURTS AND THRILLS

Smearing the Sr. Vic scoring thrusts, a scrappy Jr. Meds quint romped over the stubborn dribblers of Sr. Vic by 25-19, in Hart House gym yesterday afternoon. Only once during the entire heat, did the victors lose control of hostilities. This occurred after about eight minutes of play in the opening stanza when Sr. Vic spurted to a temporary lead of 5-4. The aggressive Jr. Med cagers, at this point, resumed the lead and held it during the remainder of the tussle.

Play started at a slow pace with each outfit concentrating on defensive tactics. During the first ten minutes, the leather changed hands continually on some wild shooting and wilder passing. At the whistle ending the first canto, Jr. Meds found themselves on the long end of a 13-9 tally.

In the opening of the final session, Victoria displayed an offensive spurt which netted them five points and closed the gap in the scoring to 15-14 for the young doctors.

Here the Med men halted the rally and training their guns on the Victoria basket, they proceeded to establish a 19-14 advantage. The losers kept plugging along to the end but the fast breaking offense and smooth working floor game of the victors proved a bit too much for them to handle.

Fenner, Holden and Wise shone in the feature role for the winning club, garnering 17 counters between them. For the losers, Faux, with three field goals, looked best.

INCREASE OF FEES WILL BE DISCUSSED

Varsity grant was reduced by $100,000 and the university officials found it necessary to increase the fees 25 per cent.

Mr. Henry indicated he opposed any policy which put a premium on education. "During my regime, although we did have to cut off some of the revenue of the University in the early years of the depression, we endeavoured to prevent the students being burdened," commented Mr. Henry. "At any rate I will bring the matter before the house tomorrow."

He indicated there was little chance of the fees being further increased this year but intimated there was little possibility of the grant being restored to the university. "The whole thing is in line with the government's policy of cutting expenditures in half," Mr. Henry said. "It is an outgrowth from extravagant language used by Premier Hepburn during his campaign in which he promised to reduce expenditures."

The Varsity campaigned during the fall term for a restoration of the grant. On Dec. 5, 1935, an editorial explained the entire situation in regard to the fees increase. It read in part: ". . . It is to be sincerely hoped that the government will realize the seriousness of the 25 per cent increase to most students and that it will include in its next budget a restoration of the grant."

St. Michael's Elections

Three candidates for the office of president of the college S.A.C. will face the voters Wednesday when St. Michael's College holds its annual elections for that office and for Chairman of the Athletic Directorate. For the latter office there are two candidates. Voting hours are from 9 to 10 a.m., 12 to 2 p.m., and 4.30 to 5.30 p.m. in the college library. The Hare-Spence system of voting will be used.

MORGAN BELIEVES

HITLER BLUFFING

Prediction is always precarious, Professor Morgan suggested, especially where all the difficulty of understanding all phases of a situation is heightened by distance from the scene of action.

However, he hazarded the comment: "Hitler seems to be attempting to bluff Europe into giving Germany the equality she seeks. There is always the possibility that he will carry the bluff too far."

VIC DEBATE

Miss Jessie Johnstone, second speaker for the affirmative, told of the enormous interests and the control of the press effected by Hearst, and asked if we could call such a press free.

Miss Beth Good, second speaker for the negative, spoke of the untold harm done by the Victorian type of censorship which gives people the inclination "to see dirt for dirt's sake and to be unable to distinguish an honest treatment of crime and sex."

CONANT ADVOCATES MORE SCHOLARSHIPS

Financial aid should be extended particularly, he said, to the "promising youths" seeking to follow expensive professional careers. Fully 20 per cent of them, he said, should have their education completely financed, "opening up these careers in every feasible way."

The Show Must Go On

Lloyd Sommerville played a leading role.

A few days before the play was scheduled to be presented, Gordon Robertson, who was cast in the leading role of the pseudo-Inspector-General, was taken ill and rushed to the Toronto General Hospital. Later it was ascertained that he had pneumonia and would definitely be unable to take his part when the play opened.

It was a bad blow to Director Loeb and his cast. The first production of the Drama Committee, the opening performance a few nights away, and the star with a most important and difficult part, in the hospital with pneumonia. Small wonder that all was gloom within the dramatic camp.

Then Loeb found Sommerville. The rest of the story is history: he stepped into the role without hesitation, worked day and night to learn his part, and carried that part off last night.

Roy Daniells appears before the foot lights as the soulful professor's associate.

Fitting about in the background darkness will be the Professor's soul, the disturbing element in the life of that personage. The momentous decisions, any pedagogic must constantly face are no strangers to this faculty member, and life for him is complicated by the embarrassing presence within him of this strange spirit, —strange in a professor, John Bates, the soul of many a Music Club show and, appropriately enough, an embryo theologian, will play the part of the disturbing element.

The one-act will be preceded by a brief curtain raiser, Joe's Place, in which the unquenchable Anabelle of an Acta poem, who has already gained the attention of no less noteworthy a literary critic than William Arthur Deacon in the Mail and Empire, will be met with in person as interpreted by Margaret Davies. Her ear-scratching friend Mr. Murple will also be represented by his (and her) own creator, George ("Jerger") Johnston. The cast will also include Bob McRae as Sydney, and Doug Butler, as the guy who puts the Joe in Joe's Place.

In conclusion he said that it had been a great honour to him to be allowed to hold the presidency of the society, and that in leaving, he wished the new executive every success in the future.

With John C. Dent

THE UNION BUILDING CAMPAIGN at the University of British Columbia received unexpected support when the manager of the Hotel Vancouver gave the committee permission to use the hotel's Crystal Ballroom for a dance.

Since the proposed Union would provide a spot for University dances and parties, this action of the hotel's seems the acme of benevolence. The party will be the first all-University dance since the University of British Columbia was founded. The programs are being supplied free, so that the affair will be surprisingly easy on the pocket.

DANCING LESSONS have been inaugurated for faculty members at Columbia. The Assistant Dean of Engineering presides at the instruction classes, which are directed by a professional dancing teacher. Among the types of dancing taught are square dances, Kentucky jigs, rhumbas, and tangoes.

THE WESTERN CONFERENCE has announced that the University of Wisconsin will be suspended from the Big Ten on July 1, if it is not demonstrated before that time that the Wisconsin Faculty Council has regained a proper degree of control over athletics.

Coach Spears and Athletic Director Meenwell were dismissed by the Faculty Council recently for running counter to the rules of the Big Ten, but were reinstated by the Board of Regents. The Big Ten has decided that Faculty control in Wisconsin is a myth, and therefore feel that there is no place in the Conference for the Badger State.

THE DEPRESSION is so bad in Minnesota that a coffin manufacturer has started to make fruit boxes instead.

BARNARD GIRLS have begun to have their finger prints taken. The move is part of a drive to have all Americans place their prints in the hands of the police for identification purposes. The Columbia Spectator regards the idea with alarm. Should it become universal, says the Spectator, the police would use it as a means of picking up strike leaders and other liberals. The Spectator seems to think that Barnard girls should stick to their purity tests, and not play into the hands of reactionary groups.

"AND NOW, ladies and gentlemen, put your dancing feet in the hands of Nels Kelly . . .", says the master of ceremonies at a Toronto dance hall.

Martin Loeb has assembled a cast that has a definite appreciation of the comedy contained in the play. While the sudden illness of Gordon Robertson left a great gap, Lloyd Sommerville has stepped into the leading role and is carrying on with considerable success. Lucy Jane Grabel gives another of her fine pieces of work. The rest of the players, particularly E. Bromberg and Graham Sanderson, show a decided flair for caricature.
The production is the result of co-operation of undergraduates in all faculties. The department of Architecture have designed some attractive and simple sets. It is deplorable that an audience of only a hundred and twenty-five turned out for this maiden effort of the Drama Committee.

Loretto College
The presentation of "Sanctity" by Loretto College Dramatic Society last evening was a credit to its amateur actors and was effectively produced. The Chorus Mysticus was a novel feature and provided a supernatural atmosphere in keeping with the theme. Lavish costumes and finished acting on the part of the major characters made for a well rounded production. Marie McKinnon as Elizabeth, Winnifred Fletcher as Lewis and Ruth Hobblerlin as the Duchess deserve special mention.

UNIVERSITY GRANTS TO REMAIN UNCHANGED

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Many residents of Eastern and Central Ontario have been driven from their homes by one of the worst floods experienced for twenty years. Damage done has been estimated at over $300,000.

London: At a meeting here last night of four of the allies of the Great War France demanded the immediate evacuation of the Rhineland area by German troops.

New York: The war scare has shaken the stock market so severely, that many of the major issues dropped greatly in value.

Toronto: In his second Budget speech Premier Hepburn yesterday announced Government estimates for 1936-7 which will net a small surplus at the end of the year.

TRINITY COLLEGE SCENE OF CRIME

Office Thievery Results After Reading of College Scandal Sheet

RESENT MUO-SLINGING

Following the annual reading Friday night last of Episkopon, one of the oldest traditions of Trinity College, the Scribe's office was broken into and the volume of Episkopon was removed.

Claiming the reason for their action to be that they did not want to have defamatory statements about them to go down in the annals of Episkopon, the guilty students confessed to the action on Thursday. Their apology to the college now appears in the halls of Trinity.

For almost fifty years the reading of Episkopon has been an annual feature. The purpose of the reading is to reprimand certain members of the college for their misbehaviour. Contributions are received from any man of the college. These contributions are, as a rule, directed at some person or group of persons who they consider may need a little tanning down. The "Scribe", who writes the volume, also reads it. He is known as the Venerable Father Episkopon. The head of college plays this part.

There seems to be a certain faction among the Trinity men who consider that Episkopon is not only a useless, but also childish type of mud-slinging, and that it would be well if it were abolished for all time. The reason for this is that the contributions, while usually witty, are not always entirely true. Apparently something of this kind happened in the recent reading. The opinion, however, seems to be that the abolishment cannot be accomplished by such means as theft, but that a movement, open and above board, against Episkopon would meet with more success.

U.C. PARLIAMENT

The last regular meeting of the University College Parliament yesterday defeated the motion "That this house favours a stronger Dominion government and weaker Provincial governments." The motion being put to the house Premier J. Nicol's government was rejected 13-12.

Professor Mackenzie Giving Farewell Talk

Popular Figure to be at Last Commerce Club Smoker Next Week

ELECTION RESULTS

At its Smoker in Hart House next Wednesday evening, March 18, at 8:00, the Commerce Club will honor one of the best-loved mentors in the Commerce and Finance Course, Professor M. A. Mackenzie, who is retiring this year from his active professorship in Mathematics and will make his valedictory talk at the Smoker.

Michael Alexander Mackenzie, M.A. (Tor., Cantab.), F.I.A., born in Ingersoll, Ontario, was educated at Trinity College School, Port Hope, Trinity College, Toronto, and Cambridge University, England. He was appointed Professor of Mathematics at Trinity College in 1895 and retained that status in the University when Trinity College entered federation in 1903.

Professor Mackenzie was the prime mover in the founding of the courses in Commerce and Finance here, and again when the course emerged in 1921 with the separate degree of Baccalaureus Communitis or B. Comm. (it had previously conferred a B.A.). In 1912 he published Interest and Bond Values, and in 1932, with Professor N. E. Shepard, An Introduction to the Theory of Life Contingencies, both of which are (Continued on Page 6)

THIEVING STUDENT RECEIVES SENTENCE

Well-Known Campus Figure Arrested in Huron Street Coffee Shop

IS STUOENT OF MUSIC

Convicted on two charges of theft and fraud, James Martindale, student of music and well-known campus figure, was sentenced to six months determinate and six months indeterminate at the Ontario Reformatory, in police court Wednesday.

Martindale, although not registered at the University, was well known to many students, and was to be seen constantly in campus rendezvous. He was arrested Saturday morning in the Campus Coffee Shop, on Huron St., and held for trial.

After stealing a cheque from the wallet of a student, in the Library, Martindale forged the signature of the signing authority, which had been missing from the cheque, and succeeded in cashing it. This was the offence which led to his arrest. When police searched his room they found a number of letters which had been stolen some (Continued on Page 6)

FRANCE GUAROS INTERESTS.

American Correspondents Are Accused of Making News

By Robert Allen
European War will not result from recent developments in the Rhineland crisis, was the unanimous opinion of several Faculty members interviewed last night. The conversations at London would probably bring an understanding as to the stability of Europe.

"I would be surprised if war should break out in the near future," commented Norman MacKenzie, Professor of International Law. "The situation does not call for it."

"War is unlikely," agreed R. K. Arnold, Professor of German at Victoria. "In resorting to conflict, France would lose the sympathies which are now hers. Further, she would be at the mercy of communist Russia, her present ally, for Russian armies in Central Europe would bolster the cause of communism and add prestige to communist groups and their activities."

"The outcome of the conversations being held at London is, of course, unpredictable. There may be incidents, perhaps a storm, on frontiers. But the (Continued on Page 3)

The tenth meeting of the Joint Executive S. A. C. was held in the Women's Council Room, 82 University College, on Wednesday, March 11, with the President, Mr. Shaw, in the chair. The following items of business were transacted:

1. Provision for reasonable publicity for the meeting initiated by the Student Peace Movement on March 20th.
2. Appointment of Mr. S. F. Rae to represent the Students' Council at this meeting.
3. Withdrawal of the Editor from "Torontoensis".
4. Provision for better lighting facilities in the S. A. C. office, Hart House. (Signed) A. E. M. Parkes

If Fri. 13 Bothers Your Head Take Our Advice and Go to Bed

By Chas Mohammed Sink
(Editor's Note: Readers of "The Varsity" who may have noticed a mysterious dark figure in flowing crimson robes and gleaming turban haunting the campus yesterday will be pleased to learn that the stranger is none other than our old friend Chas, who a few years ago enlightened the columns of Varsity with his mardani wit and sanguine puns. Following his graduation, we understand, Chas returned to his native India—it is a little known fact that he was the original of Kipling's "Kim", and also the inspiration for his story of "How the Elephant Got Its Trunk"—and through his deep knowledge of moonshine was appointed Astrologer Royal to the Prince of Bhadpur. He has kindly condescended to prepare an article for "The Varsity" on certain unique features of today's horoscope.)

COMMITTEE FORMED TO ROUSE INTEREST IN WORLD CONGRESS

Representatives Chosen from Various University Faculties

WILL CONDUCT GROUPS

At a meeting in Wynnwood of undergraduates, interested in the Geneva World Congress, Finance and Publicity Committees were appointed, composed of representatives from Victoria, U.C., Trinity, Meds, S.P.S., two members from the Student Peace Movement and two from the Student Christian Movement.

In addition to publicizing the Congress and canvassing for funds the committee will choose the delegates for the Congress to be held in Geneva from Aug. 31st to September 7th. Lectures and discussion groups will be conducted, dealing with international problems, the preservation of peace and the question of concerted action by the youth of the world.

It was decided to organize a committee of three in every college and faculty to assist the Finance and Pub- (Continued on Page 3)

Mr. Johnston is now in Europe and it is not yet certain whether arrangements can be made for him to carry on similar work this coming summer. The whole future of this experiment which has been so successful is under consideration and no decision can be expected for several weeks.

Walk-Out Staged At V.C.U. Meeting

Small Number Attempt to Force Compulsory Class Fees for All

TO START GROUPS

The plans for social reform at Victoria College met unexpected opposition when a walk-out was staged at the open meeting of the V.C.U. on Tuesday last, by some half dozen members who were determined to spike the issue until a larger representation of opinion could be secured.

Realizing that without their numbers the necessary quorum of thirty-four students would not be present to cast a legal vote, the group suddenly determined upon their move as it became apparent that the first reading of the Report of the Sub-Committee on Social Functions would be successfully passed.

The Committee's recommendations, which require two successful readings to be made effective, call for a compulsory fee upon all Victoria undergraduates for the support of class parties and the newly proposed interest groups, the figure being set at $1.75 annually.

The hasty conscription of residence men, begun as a ruse to complete the quorum, was forestalled by Ross MacDonald, President of the V.C.U., who (Continued on Page 5)

FIRST ALUMNI NIGHT OFFERS MANY FEATURES

Fencing, Boxing, Wrestling, Waterpolo and Jiu-Jitsu Are Some

Alumni Night, the first of its kind in the history of this University, will take place on Friday, March 20th. Over two thousand graduating students and members of the Alumni Federation will be present to dine and be entertained in the most elaborate celebration of its kind ever planned here.

Four hundred invitations are open to undergraduates and the remaining sixteen hundred will be used by graduates. Tickets for undergraduates went on sale two days ago, and a number are still available. "It is the hope of the Alumni Federation that these will be taken up almost entirely by students in graduating years," Mr. B. F. Wood, secretary-treasurer of the federation, under whose supervision the celebration is being planned, said yesterday. One of the chief objects of the celebration, he said, is to introduce the graduating year to the Alumni Federation.

Entertainment of nearly every form imaginable has been arranged to fill a long night's enjoyment. Fencing, boxing, wrestling, jiu-jitsu, Japanese wrestling, and many other branches of athletics will be seen in the gym. Three orchestras, under the baton of Don Romanelli, will supply music for an entire evening's dancing.

Grants to universities in Ontario will not be further reduced, nor will reductions already effected be restored, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn told the Ontario legislature yesterday in the course of his budget address.

He referred specifically to the reduction of the University of Toronto grant last year by $100,000 which led to an increase in the University fees here of 25 per cent.

All hope that the grant may be restored by the government was dashed as the government reiterated its stand that every economy measure possible would be pursued in an effort to increase the solvency of the province.

Following the pronouncement of the premier, officials here believed the fees for next year would remain the same as they were this year.

KOREAN SPEAKER TO GIVE BIOGRAPHY

Well-known Translator and Social Worker to be at S.C.M. Service Sunday

WOMEN'S UNION SATUROAY

Mrs. Induk Pak, of Korea, will speak to students in Convocation Hall next Sunday morning. She will also speak at an informal meeting in the Woman's Union on Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the S.C.M.

Mrs. Pak spent the first five years of her life in a Confucianist environment in Korea. Her mother then adopted Christianity, and Induk received her early education at the Methodist Girls' School in Seoul. She took part in a Korean Independence Movement in 1919, and spent some time in prison as a result.

Graduating from Ewha College, Mrs. Pak taught there for some years, and then came to America, to graduate from Georgia Wesleyan College in 1928. She secured her master's degree at Columbia University in 1931, and then returned to Korea.

Mrs. Pak's chief efforts are directed toward the establishment of folk schools for the women of the rural districts in Korea. The purpose of these institutions is to teach the women about Christianity and also about modern methods of home management. Practical instruction is given about such topics as sanitation and health, child care, food, clothing, and education. Attempts to foster community spirit are aided by instructions about co-operative societies, and the conditions of industry.

Mrs. Induk Pak has translated several books into the Korean language, and has written considerably herself. She does a great deal of teaching in conferences and summer schools throughout her country, and has also done considerable work as president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Seoul.

Bouquet for S.A.C.

This being almost the conclusion of the year it is appropriate that we say something, preferably something platitudinous, about the Students' Administrative Council. It is altogether fitting that we do this for many reasons. The most important reason is that the S.A.C. happens to be our boss.

However, it is not difficult to make comments of a platitudinous nature about this year's S.A.C. A more likeable lot of lads and lassies would be difficult to assemble anywhere. A singularly peaceful year has been spent in the basement of University College where the body assembles every second Wednesday to discuss the problems of importance which confront the student body. So peaceful in fact have the meetings been that one of the members of the body was moved to remark, "things have been too quiet around here lately. It is time we did something about it." While the subsequent doings may or may not prove a boon to the next generations of students it indicates that the body has the students' interests at heart.

In the past there has arisen considerable difficulty between The Varsity and the S.A.C. While some of the friction which has arisen in other years to confront other editors and other Councils has appeared to us to be unnecessary, a certain amount of this is inevitable. This is not surprising when the facts of the case are known.

The S.A.C. is the assembled representatives of the various colleges. They have the authority to do very much as they please with The Varsity. On the other hand The Varsity is an organization which prefers to assume that it is independent. This, too, is a situation necessary to the welfare of any journalistic endeavour. And in all fairness it must be assumed that journalistic freedom is necessary to the welfare and progress of a great University.

But any editor that feels that he is in a better position to know what the students want and need in the way of reading matter than the members of the council. This is only natural since he has devoted several years to the study of this situation. The S.A.C. members, who have the responsibility of administration of the paper may view a situation from a different angle than an editor, who it must be admitted, is inclined to be cold blooded about such matters. Then the friction appears. There appears to be no remedy to this situation. It is impossible to make all men think alike. The only manner in which this difficulty can be eliminated, or at least minimized, is by engendering a maximum amount of confidence between the two interests.

During the past year there has been relatively little conflict between The Varsity and the S.A.C. We are sincerely grateful to that body for this situation. True, we have criticized and have been criticized. But as criticism is necessary to a society if it is to progress, so it is necessary to a paper if it is to retain a proper balance between opinion and facts. We are genuinely appreciative of the confidence which has been placed in The Varsity by the S.A.C., a situation which has made possible a quiet but constructive year.

All Over Again?

It says in the papers that Hitler has asked a group of his soldiers to step over the bridge across the Rhine and stay on the other side for a while.

So the question arises, how is this going to affect us here in Canada? Will we soon be going over there to get our arms and legs shot off? A few of us with certain firm convictions are going to run off up north and live on a secret island if the government wants to fight it out, so it doesn't really matter to us, but what about the rest of the people?

According to France, it is just a matter of time before Germany recommences her struggle for power which was postponed by her unfortunate series of accidents in 1918. Naturally, being closest to the German border, France would begin to feel uneasy first. She suggests direct action in the form of armed alliances.

Thus France states the whole problem of keeping a peaceful world from the dangers of war. If one nation makes certain definite moves which would indicate that she intends to occupy other people's territory, the other people cannot sit by and allow her to do it. So very soon everybody is in the war, because they can't allow someone else to intimidate some one else by threats of war. In the end, the bluff is called, the threats made by the various armed alliances in the hope of scaring each other into a state of inertia have to be made good, and away we go. Probably Canada will join Britain if she is forced to fight, that is a depressing thought, but nevertheless highly probable, and once more men who don't especially want to will be killing each other.

A Saturday Evening Suggestion

It has been brought to our attention that the student body as a whole are not aware of the lectures given every Saturday evening in Convocation Hall by the Royal Canadian Institute, or at least are not aware of their value. It is unfortunate that more students do not take advantage of these lectures.

The lectures, which are held weekly from October until April, cover a wide range of subjects. The speakers, invariably men of distinction and attainment in their particular lines, come from far and near to speak. Technical language is avoided, and an attempt is made to discuss specialized subjects in a manner within the comprehension of the average person. With very rare exceptions this is accomplished, and even the intricacies of biology, astronomy, or physics are explained to the edification of the lay mind.

Inasmuch as the interchange of ideas is always beneficial, the Royal Canadian Institute is doing good work in bringing here men from other countries, who are well acquainted with economical, industrial and scientific conditions in their own countries, and who can, in the light of that acquaintance, bring valuable information to us.

It is rather late in the year to begin urging people to attend these lectures now that they are coming to an end, but we do so in the hope that some may remember next fall and not neglect what is really an excellent opportunity to obtain some knowledge of many interesting subjects presented in an entertaining manner.

French Movies

The extravagant praise of Hollywood's press agents make casual criticism of a really outstanding production seem very quiet and unenthusiastic; a picture that really merits our attention often slips past unnoticed. Magnificent, gigantic and colossal films appear about once a year, Maedchen in Uniform, Chapayev, Maria Chapdelaine, The Informer, and La Maternelle belonging to this category.

It is due to the tireless energy of Miss Macdonald and Professor Jeanneret of University College that two of these have come our way. The series of French films has brought some of the finest of continental productions. The National Board Review, in choosing the ten important movies of the year, listed five French films of which we have already seen three, the fourth coming next week. They are, above all, fine artistic productions; infinite time and care has been devoted to research to insure perfection of detail; the simplicity of the photography is amazing; the musical scores are arranged by the leading artists of Europe.

As a final triumph the French Department is able to bring La Maternelle (the nursery school) which has been running for packed houses in New York for the past six months. According to the Literary Digest "it makes international film history . . . and the critics have not recovered yet." According to London it shows the best work of direction seen in years. The stars include Madeleine Renaud of the Comedie Francaise, and Paulette Goddard, a wail of Montmartre streets.

We believe it was our Hither and Yon comrade who, one day as Ignatz was observed handing us a contribution, remarked that it was indeed fortunate for the good of this department that people who go to Victoria have a sense of humour. The inference being, of course, that under the existing regime persons of no other faculty affiliation could gain favour with the Great God Champus. It is admittedly perhaps more than coincidence that such regular standbys as Col. Julep, Hal T. and the aforementioned Ignatz, along with the Yorker himself, do all at times own allegiance to the north-eastern alma mater. However, we stoutly deny the exclusion from this column of any sense of humour which seeks admittance, due to faculty preference, and merely suggest that if persons from a particular quarter of the campus seem to be favoured by the Comic Muse more than those of other origin, this is to be readily understood. Attending Victoria you have to have a sense of humour.

Giving the lie most emphatically to friend H & Y, is the evidence provided by the numerous anonymous contributions which have found their way to the Cat with gladdening frequency all year, for while your guess is as good as ours, we would judge from the variety of viewpoint, subject matter, and humorous slant exhibited, that the sources of these have been fairly well scattered over the immediate scene. Trinity provided us with Aunt Sadie and her Ennu, and P.C. who conducted his own investigations of local con-

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Victoria Dramatic Society

The Soul of a Professor, presented on Tuesday afternoon as the final one-act of the current season, came close to rivalling "1976" for laughs, and it struck us that its humour was of sounder quality. The "Soul" provides the whole show, very nearly, and John Bates was high unto perfect in the part, getting the last ounce of effectiveness out of every line in his script. The Professor role must have offered a peculiar difficulty in the necessity of achieving close co-ordination with the Soul as it prompted his actions, and Mr. Woodside handled it so well in this respect that some slight stoddiness of delivery in his longer speeches was easily excused. Director Charlie Joliffe's casting of the play was also particularly fortunate in the two co-ed parts, neatly handled by Margaret Van Avery and Lois Longmire.

The curtain raiser, Joe's Place, seemed like an unnecessary effort. It added nothing to the idea originally and much more pertinently expressed in the double-decker poem Meet the Folks (Acta for December), except length, which if anything detracted from the poetically created picture of Annabelle and Mr. Murple.

Those who are superstitious are advised to go straight home and stay in bed all day today, where nothing more serious can happen to them than being caught in a fire, or having the ceiling fall on their heads—provided they are not run down by an auto on their way home. Today will be especially dangerous to all who were born on March 13th, 1913, and they are advised to be particularly careful in walking across the front campus without rubber boots on.

Among other local and international catastrophes which are predicted for today are the following:

Mussolini will make a speech.
France will send another 100,000 soldiers to the German border as an assur-

S.P.S. will be defeated in a mud-fight with Meds.

President Roosevelt will invent seven new kinds of taxes.

general outlook is one of peace."

S. E. de Champ, Professor of French at U.C., suggested: "There is little likelihood of war on the eastern front between Russia and Japan. On the European front, nobody outside of Germany is looking for trouble."

Professor Glazebrook of the History Department, saw but scant danger of war. "Hitler is in no position to fight. Britain doesn't want war. A commercial alliance between the Reich and the Monarchy is possible."

In connection with the attitude of Great Britain and Germany toward one another, Professor Arnold stated: "The National Socialists must be on good terms with Great Britain. Germany is counting on conservative antipathy to bolshevism to alienate England from the Franco-Russian grouping and to promote pro-German agreements."

Professor de Champ refuted the suggestion that French statesmen desire war immediately while the Republic is still in a position to defeat Germany. He accused American correspondents of manufacturing news.

Of the coming elections in France, he said: "There is no possibility of Fascist interests gaining power. Fascism implies a dictator, and there is no one in France likely to assume that position. The coming elections will not result in much change—the everlasting government-without-majority will persist."

Let's Go Places

Since there will be no daily issues of The Varsity next week in which to present reviews of the current attractions at the local theatres attention is directed to the following summary.

FILM GUIDE

Imperial—

Lulu's back in town! Here she is, boys—Mae West does her gold digging in the Yukon, as Klondike Annie, and who has she got to toy with this time but that mild little fellow, Victor McLaglen

Let's go!

Loew's—

Another but entirely different setting in the North American wilds. Royal North West Mounted Policeman Nelson Eddy singing the lead in the talking version of Rose Marie, with Jeanette MacDonald as the Indian maiden. Allan Jones, you heard him at the Alex two years ago in Bitter Sweet, and more recently as the juvenile lead in A Night at the Opera, is also billed, indicating much fine music indeed.

Let's go!

Uptown—

So many Medicos called our bluff and went to see if The Country Doctor really is as funny as Daffydil that the quints have been held over at the Uptown. Another coloured comic also features the bill as Mickey Mouse conducts grand opera, with Donald Duck taking the lead, the bows, and the breaks.

Keep an eye on this column next week, and now

Let's go places!

Hollywood—

If the New York critics know what they're talking about, we'll probably enjoy La Matrielle. Most of the stars are scruffy-faced little gamins of Montmartre quite unaware of the fact that they are appearing in the movies.

U.C. Elections

At the annual University College Literary and Athletic Society elections held last Wednesday, P. A. Bridle, a third year student, was elected president of the society for the year 1936-37. Contesting the presidency with Jack Brunke, Bridle won out by a very narrow margin of votes.

SCARLET AN GOLD HOCKEYISTS ELIMINATE DENTS ON ROUND

Win Second Game of Jennings Cup Playdowns by
Score of 4-2

MEET SR. SCHOOL NEXT

On Wednesday afternoon, another team was eliminated in the Jennings Cup playdowns, when Victoria College defeated Dentistry by the score of 4-2, taking the round 7-5, and qualifying to meet Senior S.P.S. this afternoon in the first game of a two out of three series.

The first period saw some quite good hockey at the beginning, but the play slowed in the last few minutes. After six minutes of see-saw rushing, Vic was left short-handed when Joblin was sent off for tripping, and Dents took advantage of this when Teask blinked the light to put his team one up. A minute later Spence was put off, but the defence held well. With 10 minutes to go, Gregory scored alone on a nice rush, and Monyon duplicated his feat to put the Scarlet and Gold 1 to the good. Schultes and Wainwright took a trip to the cooler for a private squabble, and the period ended a few moments after Joblin tallied on a pass from Gregory.

In the last session Vic turned to defensive tactics, and held Dents off, and Gregory, ragging the puck around the losers' blue line, let go a shot which McHugh hardly saw, and added another point to Vic's score. Dents started their power play and did everything but score, holding the puck inside their opponents' area for minutes at a time. Noble net-minding by Matheson was all that kept Dents' score down. Finally with 5 minutes to go, Shultes scored during a scramble, putting the Dentists only 2 behind. However, Vic kept shooting the puck down the ice, and there was no more scoring. Final result, Vic 4, Dents 2.

The game with Sr. School to-day promises to be good, so how about lending your support to two good teams? See you at the game.

Dents — McHugh, Greco, Spence, Teask, Shultes, Moore, Hamby, Tankin, Squires, Finkbeiner.

Vic — Matheson, J. Matheson, D., Samnders, Wainwright, Monyon, Gregory, Deacon, Joblin, Pratt, Lenahan.

Referee—Tinahan.

SR. VIC CAGERS DEFEAT DENTISTRY

Victoria Players in Second Period Rally Run Up
Big Score

HAMILTON HIGH SCORER

The fast-moving Victoria cagers virtually eliminated Dents from inter-faculty contention by defeating them 27-17 in the upper gym Wednesday afternoon.

The Scarlet and Gold outfit played a strong defensive game and Dents resorted to long shots which got them nowhere. The Dentists held the Vics to 12-11 at half-time but in the second session Vic's combination began to click and they ran up ten points before Dents could retaliate. Down 14 with five minutes to go, the Garnet and Grey made considerable splurge but the Vic sub-line held them down to 17.

Outstanding was the work of Hamilton of Victoria who potted five field baskets and six out of six free throws to make himself high-scorer. Faux and Gladish scintillated on the Vic attack, scoring five and four points, respectively. Rutledge and Toole played a strong defensive game. Kinsberg, Shukun and Andrews were the most effective for the Garnet and Grey.

Sr. Vic—Faux, S.; Gladish, 4; Rutledge; Toole, 2; Cockfield; Hamilton, 16; Price; Goudie; Dunlop; Dalziel.
Dents—Shukun, 4; Andrews, 4; Kinsberg, 5; Herwitz, 2; Brown; Potashun; Weir, 1; Kulyk; Parish, 1.

Referee—Wm. Crookover.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

There will be a very important practice for the Varsity hockey team on Monday from one to two in Varsity Arena, in preparation for the game with the Toronto Pals which will be some time next week. This will be the last game the team will play, and it is hoped that they will be able to carry off the title.

The McMaster-Varsity basketball game last Monday up in Hamilton ended in defeat for the Varsity team. The score was 15-6, and only the stellar work of the Toronto defence prevented it from being a larger score. The McMaster girls specialize in team-play, and are a fast-moving squad. In their game with Western, the Bronze Baby champions, they came out on top 25-14 and deserved their win even if Western did not play at full strength.

The U.C. athletic banquet was a gala event of last Tuesday night, when all the teams were presented with their crests, Junior and Senior T's, cups, etc. The coaches were also present and appreciation was expressed for their services. Granny Henderson, fourteen-year-old coach of the hockey team and mascot of the men's Varsity hockey squad, was loudly applauded for his successful application of Ace Bailey's technique to the girls' team, which resulted in the winning of the hockey championship for the first time in many years.

DENTISTS TO PRESENT THREE ONE-ACT PLAYS

Friday the thirteenth holds no terror for Dental Students, it would appear. For to-night in Hart House Theatre they are giving their annual dramatic presentation. Three one-act plays and three skits will form the program.

Two comedies will be presented, "East of Eden" and "On Dartmoor", and one detective play of melodrama type. Thirty-five actors will take part in the productions. Interest has grown to a new peak this year, and it is thought that every faculty on the campus will be represented in the audience.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crookover

At the present moment the sport spotlight at Hart House is focused on the interfaculty contests as the struggle for the remaining interfaculty honours draws to a close. If any of you have nothing to do at 4 in the afternoon we'd suggest a visit to Hart House. The basketball race has advanced to the semi-finals and the teams are displaying excellent form. The baseball playoffs attract a fairly large crowd every afternoon and the idlers are rewarded with some fine entertainment. Vic and S.P.S. start a two game series today for the right to meet U.C. in the finals for the Jennings Cup. The second game is scheduled for Monday. Coupons No. 28 and No. 29 or 15 plus tax will admit you to the Arena.

The race for the Sifton Cup has narrowed down to a three-team struggle. At the present time there still are six teams left in the competition. These quintets are divided into two groups of three. In the stronger group Jr. Meds and Sr. Vic are the only contenders. In the other Sr. U.C. reigns supreme. As far as we're concerned it seems that either Jr. Meds or Sr. Vic will take the Cup. The Medicals have a one-game lead over the Scarlet and Gold squad and appear to have a slight edge but the present champions are still full of hope and fight (Cockfield please note).

St. Michael's and Sr. Vic are still in the midst of a stirring struggle for group honours and the right to enter the baseball playoffs. We wouldn't be at all surprised if one of these two teams walks off with the Spalding Cup. Both squads are full of team spirit and fight for every run. Dents and Sr. S.P.S. also have strong nines and the finals between these squads will certainly be worth watching.

As the athletic year draws to a close we would like to take this opportunity of thanking Mr. C. J. Griffiths, well-known Chrysler dealer, for favours extended during the year. Through the courtesy of Mr. Griffiths the U. of T. wrestlers were able to fill their U.S. engagements.

What the Critics say about "LA MATERNELLE"

LITERARY DIGEST:

Not since Chaplin and "The Kid" have the movies discovered a child actor with the tragic sensibility of Paulette Goddard.

"TIME" Magazine:

The qualities of simplicity and tenderness in which the best French pictures outclass Hollywood, give this production the dramatic impact which by comparison makes the collapse of Pompeii a pindrop.

"VARIETY"

By any standard this is the finest foreign-language film shown in this country in years.

Thornton Deleanty, NEW YORK POST:

It is a signal triumph of "LA MATERNELLE" that it is told without a trace of sentimentality. The children are so magnificently real that one can well believe that there is not a professional stage child among them.

Andre Sennwald, NEW YORK TIMES:

A film of extraordinary insight, tenderness and tragic beauty.

NEW YORK TELEGRAPH:

"LA MATERNELLE" must take its place among the truly great classics of the screen.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

St. Matthew Passion

Bach's St. Matthew Passion will be presented in Convocation Hall on the evening of Tuesday, 7th April by the Conservatory Choir, a competent orchestra and a distinguished group of soloists. The performance, which will be the fourteenth annual presentation of this great work, will be under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan.

In 1923 Sir Ernest conducted the first annual performance of this great work which, with the exception of the year 1933, has been performed ever since at the Easter season. The principal roles—those of the Christus and the Narrator, will in all probability again be sung by Mr. J. Campbell McInnes and Mr. Hubert Eisdell respectively. The minor solos and reflective arias will be sung by other well known Toronto soloists from the ranks of the choir.

Arrangements for student tickets are the same as were in effect last year. These are obtainable from faculty representatives and should be exchanged at the box office of Hart House Theatre, where the plan for the student section is open. Early reservations are desirable since those who purchase and reserve their seats promptly will enjoy the advantage of the more favourable locations.

New plays by Bertram Brooker, Jameson Field, Arthur Burrows, and a dance drama, "Romeo and Juliet," to Tchaikovsky's music, are offered by the Play Workshop in its closing production of the year on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week.

Bertram Brooker's play is written after the style of the mediaeval mystery and morality play. "Cabana" by Jameson Field, might be called a drama on two planes; it is a dramatic study of a ruined steel magnate, written with great intensity and employing non-real figures and action to complete our knowledge of character. "Cast Out," by Arthur Burrows, is a comedy satirizing the foibles of little theatre authors and actors.

"Romeo and Juliet," which opens the program, is another Workshop experiment toward a "symphonic" theatre. The story is enacted to music in dramatic pantomime and plastic dance, with an accompaniment of changing light and colour on a formal stage setting.

The plays will be presented in the Auditorium of the Central High School of Commerce, Shaw Street. They are directed by Herman Voaden.

St. Thomas Church

In addition to the broadcast of Choral Music over CFRB at 6 p.m. during the evening service, a beautiful short Lenten Meditation, "The Last Supper," by Cecil Forsyth, will be sung. The Rev. W. Lyndon Smith, M.A., will preach and the choir will sing Mendelssohn's motet, "Lord, I flee to Thee for refuge."

stabulary affairs is an individual of even more catholic tastes. At least one column came from the pedagogical centre on Bloor Street, and the few professorial limericks called U.C. their home. Which leads to the embarrassing problem as to whether any of the Unknowns may or may not hail from S.P.S.

This is something that gives us serious thought, for the humorous propensities of the Engineering section have always sorely puzzled us. S.P.S. and Victoria probably do about equal service as the butt of wise and witty remarks in the local area, for obvious and widely divergent reasons. That being by tradition rather meek and unresisting, Victorianites take what is coming to them with little comeback offered, suggests the interesting theory that after this sort of thing has continued for a while they finally become inured to the hurt and begin to appreciate the humour, which accords with the opinion of our DOT Hither and You DOT compatriot. The Engineers, being of opposite temperament, can never become aware of a jibe aimed in their direction but they must flare up in the most menacing manner to forcibly squelch the jiber, thus allowing themselves no opportunity for quiet contemplation of the witticism itself. Their favourite beverage probably is responsible for their being physically in a constant state of flux, and mentally in a constant state of flare, and so sensitive do they resultantly become that they go through life with a powerful fist clenched protectively about a taste for wit that eventually curls up and dies. One repentant in a throng of sinners is encouragement for any evangelist, however, and the enlightening effect of the single sense of humor to whose existence in the Red Schoolhouse we are prepared to testify, should do untold good over a four year stretch. Even it, we fear, is none too ready a recipient of anti-Science humour, and it is difficult to say to what degree it was in operation when its possessor gave the press to understand that "Engineers are gentlemen!"

Which is just about sufficient for the final Cat, all but one, except perhaps to relate that one Chaz, curator of this corner some three years back, wandered into The Varsity office today with a forlorn and lonesome air, only to be welcomed with peans of praise and asked to write a feature, which no doubt you have already discovered some where else in this issue. Perchance in some dear distant day in the future the scribes to come will be so considerate as to offer welcome to another ex-Caterer, and offer similar flattery to that aged scribbler.

WALK OUT STAGED

AT V.C.U. MEETING

urged that the meeting be adjourned in order to prevent any appearance of railroading the debated bill.

In an attempt to provide class executives with sounder financial support and to offer students other social activities in addition to the class-party dances, the report of the Committee proposes that a compulsory fee be levied upon all students of the college.

The defaulting element at Tuesday's meeting felt that whereas at present students who do not wish to attend the class dances have the option of not paying their class fees, this privilege would be withdrawn under the new scheme by which all must pay even if they wish to participate in neither parties nor interest groups. Not realizing that there was a possibility of a compulsory fee for this purpose being forced upon them many students who would disavow the move had not come out to the meeting, according to the "walk-out" faction who were of the opinion that it was unfair for a bare quorum to decide so important an issue.

It is hoped that a larger turn-out will result at the next open meeting, although the executive of the V.C.U. have been unable to set a date for this as yet.

IN FRENCH UNIVERSITIES examinations are written only in the final year. The French undergraduate has no compulsory lectures, and knows nothing of the "college spirit" prevalent in American universities.

The high school course in France lasts seven years, and the university year begins in November and ends in July.

ABOLITION OF THE COMPULSORY ATTENDANCE rule at Queen's has been shelved by the Faculty Council. The Queen's Journal held a poll earlier in the year, revealing that most of the voting students objected to the rule. The Alma Mater Society took up the matter and endorsed the result of the ballot, referring it to the Faculty, where it was promptly squelched.

"HOT MICE PIE"—item on the menu of a campus restaurant.

ELECTORAL REFORM is advocated for the University of Alberta. The most radical suggestion is to take the franchise from all freshmen. Another proposal is that elections be held in the autumn, instead of the spring, as is done at present. The most radical of all the ideas put forward was that the editor of the "Sheaf" should be elected by a vote of the students at large. Apparently there are westerners who fail to realize that an editor must be outside politics, and must be selected on the basis of experience.

FOUR VASSAR GIRLS whose escorts for the Yale Junior Prom disappointed them applied for permission to attend the event "stag". A heartless committee, however, kindly but firmly rejected their petition, in spite of several enthusiastic lobbyists.

A PROFESSOR WHO SITS IN ON LECTURES of other departments is more or less of a rarity in any university, yet there is at least one of the gentlemen in Toronto. We refer to a professor of Engineering Drawing in the Faculty of Applied Science who attends lectures of the Department of History and takes notes. It seems to us to indicate the true idea of scholarship to wish to learn the subjects taught in other faculties.

A JANITOR at Stanford delights in paying income tax. V.C.U. OPEN MEETING WILL DECIDE FATE OF FEE PROPOSAL

Investigating Committee to Present Report on College Social Life

FAVOURS COMPULSORY FEE

Will Recommend Clubs be Formed on Different Basis than Now Exists

The fate of the new deal in social activities proposed for Victoria college will be known on Monday when the report of the committee investigating the social life of the college will present their report to an open meeting of the Victoria College Union.

An abortive attempt to pass the recommendations of the committee was made last week when several recalcitrant students withdrew from the meeting, forcing it to be adjourned.

The salient features of the report of the committee include a recommendation that clubs be formed in the college whereby students could get together and meet socially on a different basis than that which exists in the college at present.

In an attempt to provide class executives with sounder financial support and to offer students other social activities in addition to class-party dances, the committee also urges that a compulsory fee be levied upon all students of the college. It is estimated that the fee would be about $1.75 a year.

"Everyone who really understands the proposals of the committee's report favours the innovations which are advocated," Edith Clydesdale, a member of the committee, stated last night. "It is the ones who make little effort to understand it who are critical of the whole scheme."

It is understood that there is a faction in the college which objects strenuously against the "new deal" in social activities. The objectors base their case on the claim that another compulsory fee (Continued on Page 6)

PLUMPTRE TO LECTURE IN ENGLISH COLLEGES

Mr. A. F. W. Plumtre, lecturer in the department of economics, will leave for England on April 2 to deliver a series of lectures on money and prices at Cambridge University. He will sail from New York on April 3.

He will lecture at Cambridge on monetary problems of the dominions and it is believed he might publish a book, the basis of which will be the lectures he will give in England. Final decision has not been made as yet in regard to the new book.

Mr. Plumtre's plans for the summer are still indefinite but he indicated he would probably remain in England until August.

STUDENT DEATH

The death occurred on Tuesday last of George Stanley Lund, a former student of the class of '36. A few weeks after entering his third year, he was forced to leave the University on account of poor health, and his condition had been uncertain for some time prior to his last illness.

Registered at Victoria College, he was a member of the Commerce and Finance course, and commanded the love and respect of his fellow students. Keen regret was felt by his friends when he was forced to leave the University and his loss will be felt by all.

Course in English Literature Will Be Added Next Season

Will Supplant English and History Within Period of Four Years

MANY OPTIONS AOOED

Lack of Centralized Control Over English Studies Will Be Overcome

By Richard Hobbshaw

Next season a new course in English Language and Literature will appear in the Arts calendar. At the same time there will begin the gradual disappearance of the present English and History course.

The change will not affect those who are now registered in the English and History course. The first year only of the new English course will be available in the 1936-37 session, and the other years will be added year by year, so that the present English and History course will not have entirely disappeared until 1940.

Features of the new course will include, in the first year, the changing of the present Honour course in Greek and Roman History to a pass course in that subject, with an option to it of General Science. History will become a pass course after the first year, and the Honour language options will be continued complete throughout the four years of the course. There will be an Honour course in Philosophy added for the third year, and two extra Honour courses in English philology and Chaucer for the fourth year.

Professor H. J. Davis, Chairman of the English Department of the four Arts colleges, expressed his approval of the new course, declaring that his department had been working towards that end for several years.

The new course was designed, he remarked, in order to provide an English course complementary to the present Modern History course. The De- (Continued on Page 8)

GIRL GOLD MEDALLIST

Readers of the Toronto Star may remember a story in the Monday issue about a girl who was refused admission to the medical course at the University of London on the grounds that if too many women were allowed to enter the course the men therein would become effeminate, and the football team would suffer in consequence. "Too many" apparently means any number over twelve per year. Varsity readers will be relieved to learn that the authorities here have no fear of such horrible results; according to Dr. E. S. Ryerson, Assistant Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, there are absolutely no restrictions as to the number of women who may enter the medical courses here.

Dr. Ryerson hesitated to make any definite comment on the University of London's policy, but admitted that the reason for refusing admittance to women, as stated, scarcely seemed valid. In any case, he said, there were no limits set here; as many women as wish to enter the course may do so. Of course fewer girls than men do apply, but at present approximately ten per (Continued on Page 8)

Visitors' Day

Sunday 29th March will be Visitors' Day in Hart House when members may introduce visitors including ladies into the House between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. Members will be asked to show their registration cards at the door.

EXPECT BIG CROWD AT ALUMNI NIGHT

Elaborate Program Has Been Planned for Tonight's Innovation

DANCING IN BIG GYM

Over 2000 graduates and undergraduates will crowd into Hart House this evening for the first gala general Alumni night in the history of the University. For the first time this year, every faculty of Hart House will be placed at the disposal of the pleasure-seekers.

In the Big Gym will be dancing, to the tunes of Don Romaneli and his orchestra. A floor show will also be featured, twice during the evening, with Danish folk-dancers in native costumes going through their routines. There will also be two demonstrations of Japanese sword-fighting, by native medical students, using the regulation two-handed swords.

In the pool, there will be exhibitions of swimming and diving, followed by the act of the Dolphins. Later, the S.P.S. water polo team, interfaculty champions, will take on an all-star team drawn from the best players in the other faculties.

Badminton as it really should be played will be demonstrated in the Double Gym by a mixed team in a doubles exhibition. The University gym team, in the peak of its form in preparation for the annual intercollegiate meet, will give a fine demonstration a little later.

At 10.45 in the Debates Room, the Hart House Glee Club will be on hand with a recital of part-songs, following which they will lead all those interested in the singing of well-known folk-songs.

More singing will be featured at (Continued on Page 8)

TRIUMPHS, SCOOPS OF YEAR'S NEWS PASS IN REVIEW

Widespread Interest in Straw Vote of Last Fall Recalled

SUPPORTED DRAMA SOCIETY

Memorable Occasion When The Varsity Gave Sally Rand a Break

By Jack Peterson

As this paper goes to press The Varsity closes one of the most successful years in its entire history. This, the fifty-fifth year of publication, has been marked by possibly a keener journalistic sense than any previous year. A glance through the files for the past hundred issues should serve to convince any reader of the important place The Varsity has occupied in the life of the university this year. Let us look for a few moments at those files and see just what The Varsity has done during the 1935-36 session.

Probably the most ambitious task The Varsity undertook during the year was the straw vote on the federal elections, on October 10th. Polling booths were established in nearly all the faculties and colleges, and voting was carried on for a whole day. Nearly seventy per cent of all students registered at the university cast a ballot—an all-time high for university voting of any kind, and a percentage which was higher than that of the dominion a few days later in the federal elections.

The result of the straw vote showed university students to favour a Conservative government with the Liberals a close second. The result meant to The Varsity an increased interest in the paper on the part of students, which interest was successfully upheld through the entire year.

Of almost equal importance was the attempt on the part of this paper to have a university constituency introduced into the federal government. Early in October in its editorial columns The Varsity advocated that the university be represented in parliament. (Continued on Page 6)

Supplementals

The attention of students registered in the Faculty of Arts is drawn to the change in date for the Supplemental examinations. These examinations will begin this year on August 20th.

It is hoped that Mr. J. R. Johnston, who has been in London for the past two summers to be of service to students visiting Europe, will again be there this year. JACQUES MARITAIN TO SPEAK TONIGHT

Philosopher to Give Critique of Leon Blois Before Alliance Francaise

LEADER IN CRITICISM

Members of the Alliance Francaise are promised an enjoyable evening when M. Jacques Maritain, the eminent French philosopher, will speak on Leon Blois to-night.

M. Maritain, who is on the staff of the Institute of Medieval Studies in Toronto, is at present lecturing on the philosophy of science. He is also a professor of L'Institut Catholique de Paris. After his graduation from the University of Paris, where he was a pupil of Henri Bergson, M. Maritain studied at Heidelberg under Hans Driesch, leader of the vitalistic movement in German biology.

In addition to writing a study of the philosophy of his master, Bergson, and numerous other philosophical works, M. Maritain has embodied his view of art in "Art and Scholasticism" and "Les Frontières de la Poésie". It is in the capacity of a leader in French literary criticism and in modern artistic movements that he will address the Alliance to-night.

HOUSE HONOURED BY FAMOUS MEN

Hart House Visitors' Book Contains Many Names of Distinction

HARD TO OECIPHER

Hart House, the scene of so many campus activities, has had the honour of many distinguished visitors during the past year.

Outside the Warden's office is a book in which well-known visitors to the House are asked to sign their name and although most of these signatures are extremely difficult to decipher, Mr. Bickersteth pointed out a few of the most outstanding autographs.

Signatures to the number of twenty-five were found placed in this book since last September of persons ranging from that of Paul Robeson, actor and rugby star, who was graduated from Rutgers University as the "perfect type of College Man", to Fernand Baldensperger, travelling lecturer from Sorbonne and now at Harvard, and renowned authority on French literature.

Carl Milles, world-famous Swedish architectural sculptor, paid a visit to the House.

Professor Norman Mackenzie and the President to Speak At Peace Demonstration

IN WEST HALL TODAY

High Tariffs Decried as Being Barrier to Harmonious Relations

By Harold Freeman

The University of Toronto will cooperate to the full in the nation-wide Peace Hour scheduled for five o'clock this afternoon. A meeting will be held for all students of this University in West Hall, University College, at that hour, with President H. J. Cody, Professor Norman Mackenzie and prominent students as speakers. The meeting will be held at the same hour as similar meetings under the auspices of the Canadian Student Peace Movement in universities throughout the dominion.

In speaking about the Peace Hour in an interview yesterday, Dr. Cody expressed the opinion that the success of the venture will depend largely on the note struck by the various speakers throughout Canada.

If mere generalities about the advantages of peace are indulged in, the effects will be negligible, thinks the President. In his opinion, Canada is already as peace-conscious as any country in the world, and a negative attitude to peace will merely reaffirm a stand which most Canadians already hold. The place for platitudes about the necessity of peace is not Canada, but some of the more militant countries (Continued on Page 6)

COMMERCE CLUB ELECTION RESULTS

The annual elections for next year's executive of the University of Toronto Commerce Club were held last Wednesday. The following students were elected:

Vice-President—S. Wolfe.
Secretary—G. Ferguson.
Treasurer—R. Taylor.
Third Year Representatives—L. Jones and A. Rankin.
Second Year Representatives—M. Brisbin and A. Ishister.

FIRST YEAR SCHOOLMEN WIN SEGSWORTH TROPHY

Boyd, Fenson and Cooke Win Prizes for Impromptu Speeches

In the Hart House Debates room last night the final debate for the Segsworth Trophy, signifying debating supremacy at S.P.S., was won by the First Year team of H. Partridge and C. Reed, who upheld the resolution that "Canada should uphold any declaration non-aggressive of war by Great Britain".

Following the debate the annual Impromptu Speaking Contest was held. Members of the audience were allowed three minutes to prepare a subject chosen by lot from a number of slips on the table, then they spoke for three minutes. The winner was J. E. Boyd, who gave a noteworthy address on "Trial by Jury should be abolished." He was awarded the trophy for public speaking and a five dollar cash prize. D. S. Fenson, winner of the two dollar second prize, spoke on "The Weiland Canal". The winner of the third prize of two dollars was T. L. Cooke, who gave a humorous speech entitled "If I had a Million Dollars".

Fashions are the Vogue

Members of Hart House are becoming fashion-conscious. Vogue, the leading journal of female apparel, has made its appearance in the reading room and judging from its well thumbed pages, the men are taking a keen interest in what women are wearing.

A perusal of recent editions is sufficient to enlighten the average male on why the girls take so long to get dressed. The intricate nature of female garments is explained in full detail and the latest innovations in all types of clothing are outlined.

The zipper, that modern aid to speed, has been wedded to the corset with the result that the portly maiden may mould her figure without tugging at the laces. Another smooth number, quoted, "stays where it is put and never crawls up because of the longer cut pant legs."

Co-eds will be forced to maintain a high standard of dress or undergo a lecture from the boy friend on how to obliterate those wrinkles. "For the bumpy girl . . . there is a pantie that smooths out tummy and funny simultaneously." "A net brassiere helps to avoid the pointed look."

Other articles explain the theory that lies behind the tilting of hats, the history of fashion trends and how to set a table. As the celebrated magazine for men is not available to members of Hart House it is believed that Vogue will provide a combination of Esquire's humour and a certain amount of valuable information.

A Reluctant Farewell

With this issue The Varsity for 1935-36 comes to an end. The course traced out by the campus paper has, during the past year, been very satisfactory, both for the students and staff of The Varsity. We have been generously complimented and we believe we have discharged the purpose of the paper in the best manner we knew. While it is highly improbable that perfection in any form of endeavour is possible, much less a journal of an amateur nature such as The Varsity, we feel that there were few things which could be accomplished on the campus by a paper that were not achieved this year.

We have been very fortunate in the support received from the S.A.C. and the faculty of the University. Mistakes there have been and will be, but this support has done much to minimize these discrepancies and make the path of the paper both progressive and pleasant. Only by the support and co-operation of the students and faculty can a paper such as The Varsity reach the place of esteem and influence on the campus which it merits. When this condition is attained there can be no greater influence for progress and light than a university paper. And a daily can serve this purpose far better than any periodical.

We are truly grateful for this support and attribute have received during the past year, and attribute much of the success we may have attained to this factor. President Cody, we wish to thank publicly for his interest and sympathy in our journalistic endeavours. This support is invaluable in an undertaking such as The Varsity, which attempts to adequately serve the conflicting interests and ideas of 7,000 students.

Not least of our assets has been the ability of the members of the staff of The Varsity. Every editor is not blessed with the ability and interest among the members of the organization as was contained on The Varsity during the past year. While many of the reporters have served in somewhat obscure roles their work is just as necessary to the welfare of the paper as the departmental heads. It has been both a pleasant and valuable year for all concerned.

We regret having to lay down the responsibility for the welfare of the paper of one of the greatest universities in the British Empire. In passing the torch to our successor we wish him the support and co-operation which was ours, which will assure the paper of success in the future.

In Defence of The College Radical

It has been a kind of a grim joke of the smug college youth who is afraid to think an independent thought for fear of evoking the disapproval of his friends who insist on correctness at all times, that some of the lads at which he points the finger of scorn and sneers "radicals", grow up, like the boys in the Horatio Alger series, and make good in the big city. But such is often the case. While the conventional youth plugs along in his little rut and makes certain that he never offends the sensitiveness of his crowd, the lad who mounted the soap boxes in college and delivered revolutionary orations, now is seated behind a glass top desk and is among "those present" at an executive gathering.

This, of course, is not always the case. There are several kinds of lads and laddies who prefer to be thought radicals at college. There is the lad who wishes to be thought daring, original and superior to the mill run of humans. He is violently and critically destructive, but seldom advances any rational alternative to existing conditions. He is eccentric and gives little or no justification for his eccentricity. With this class of man it is a matter of personal vanity, wishing to attract attention he attempts to be eccentric. And one means of combining the two is to be a radical and antagonize the advocates of law and order. But there is neither hope nor excuse for this type of radical.

There is another type who is conscientiously radical. He is a violent disbeliever in all forms of existing things and would continue to disbelieve in all things regardless of what was existing. These as a rule are a discontented lot who, in their misery, wish company and spend their lives in an effort to bring as much discontent as possible into the world. They make excellent agitators for strikes and other public nuisances which do much damage and no good.

The third form of radical which exists in colleges is the result of a vigorous imagination rather more than any qualities of destructive nature. This is the type of student whose mind refuses to be satisfied with the prosaic existence of things as they are regardless of how they are, and his efforts are directed towards a change in some direction. An active imagination is something which no one can control. Should they turn in one direction, the owners usually make names for themselves. Should they drift the other way they become hopeless dreamers.

The sudden conflict with the reality that is life may change many of these radicals of the third class. They may modify their views to conform with the possible and rational. Then they do a great service for society.

The prosaic existence of a business career offers little by way of personal satisfaction to the man with the too active imagination. But once they do turn their efforts in that direction they give to business and originality of form and manner which is eminently stimulating. Here lies the reason of their success and the reason many college orators who made a name for themselves on the soap boxes of the campus make a more brilliant and lasting name for themselves behind the glass-topped desk of an organization. Their ability is turned now, not to organizing strikes for better hours, but organizing business for better results. Colleagues at college of course bemoan the fact that "For just a handful of silver they left us,—just a ribbon to stick in his coat", and accuse them of mercenary motives. The truth is that maturity has brought a different but still active outlook and their energies tend in that direction.

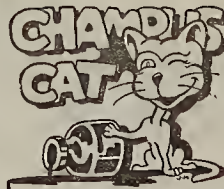

Analyzed, the college radical usually fits under one of the three headings. The eccentric youth who is nothing more than adolescent personification of the "spoiled brat", the down-with-everything crank who wants things down no matter what is up, and the actively imaginative youngster who shocks his smug friends by having ideas of his own, and who usually turns these ideas to a practical and valuable purpose. For the latter class there remains some hope.

The Situation in Europe

The Varsity ceases publication at a time when world peace is threatened to a greater extent perhaps than it has been since 1914. The European kettle is at any time threatening to explode under the pressure of the steam generated from within. While there appears to be little danger of Hitler throwing his Nazis against the dynamite-laden French frontier, it is not probable that such enormous quantities of war materials and soldiers are to be used for pageantry purposes only. In the East, Russia is sparring with Japan, while Mussolini is still waging his war against the Ethiopians.

The League of Nations is not likely to apply sanctions against Germany for her breach of the Locarno Pact. Nor is it feasible to talk of sanctions against Italy while Germany goes unpunished. There appears to be some co-operation between the two powers here and it hints of a sinister alliance, planned or otherwise.

It is gratifying to note an increased political consciousness on the part of the students at such a time. The problems facing the present generation are greater than those encountered by any previous generation of students. Solutions will come. It is necessary that the students be acquainted with the problems that they may advance solutions.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

By Norman Phillips

Art, Music and Drama Editor

Dramatic art at this University is an extra-curricular activity. At the same time there exists on the campus a well-equipped little theatre which is operated for the "furtherance of dramatic art in the widest sense." But undergraduates have never been welcome in Hart House Theatre save as a means to swell the box-office receipts.

The relation between Hart House Theatre and the University is not generally understood. Hart House Theatre is privately owned and endowed by Vincent Massey. It is administered by a Board of Syndics who are responsible to the Board of Governors of the University.

In recent years the attitude of the Board of Syndics has been definitely antagonistic to undergraduate participation in Hart House productions. In order to secure the facilities of Hart

THE ROYAL YORK

TORONTO

The Muddy Yorker's Champus Review

Dear Grandchildren:

It really was a coincidence, wasn't it, that your old Grandpa should have used this particular copy of The Varsity, The Undergraduate Newspaper, Vol. LV, No. 100, to stuff into the back of the frame that has held the Intercollegiate Volley Ball Champions of 1935-36 ever since, until one of you put your clumsy foot through it down in this dusky corner of the basement fifty years later. With prohibition back in, you young folks must have some place to hide your liquor; but now that you've stumbled on this ancient publication, you had better glance through its yellowing pages.

If you keep up with your studies, and get the necessary 25 per cent for your matriculation recommendation, you will be going to Varsity yourself one of these days, and it will pay you to know some of your future alma mater's most ancient and honourable traditions. With a thought to the edification of generations yet unborn (that's you, you brats) the Yorker has here accumulated a few of the highlights of this year of your grandfather's life at college—your grandfather's and yours and yours. (Of course if your grandpaw didn't think enough of his generations yet unborn to use this invaluable document to pad a picture, don't think too badly of him. Perhaps he didn't play volleyball.)

1935-36 was the year when all the world, and the odd Star or two, was filled with amazement at the revival of Hart House Little Theatre. Restless as a windshield wiper was the charming Mrs. Pyper, who went into ecstasies of joy when given the chance to work with students again in the Theatre, and then went into a huddle with a Toronto radio announcer and the secretary in her own office, plus a few debts that dropped in, to produce a few plays. Darn good some of them were, too, and the Theatre almost survived till the end of the season in spite of the floods of publicity so generously supplied by the papers to build up as fine an audience resistance as any group have ever had to overcome. The scandalous rumor that Nancy had eloped with some mysterious Russian army officer, known only as the Inspector General, was quite false in spite of all that you may have heard. The Russian officer, as a matter of fact, died of sheer loneliness after spending a few nights in the Theatre all by himself. He got as much publicity as did Nancy, but he couldn't take it. Hart House Theatre?—Oh, you'll find it's playing burlesque, now, under the direction of one Martini Earlobe, Jr.

Another campus mystery that had everyone agog all year was the Ad Hoc Committee, since what it was was never ascertained, let alone what it did. After hitting the headlines in October, nothing more was heard of it till March when it bobbed up in the local legislature and came out in the headlines once again: Government Unimpressed By Report of Committee. This has been pointed out as the one unsurprising view of the late Liberal administration.

The Dominion elections of 1935 were featured by the U. of T. straw vote, held by this worthy journal, and when the Conservatives registered a strong win, Mr. Bennett (look under B in your H.S. Canadian History index) gleefully told his Canada-wide radio audience that "the students lead the way!" Mr. Bennett found out that the students of today will be the leaders of tomorrow, but not today.

By and large and all in toto, 1935-1936 were a great year. You youth of the future may think you have big times of your own, but never between October and May of one college term will you see the advent of a Mary Dingman, of afternoon tea at S.P.S., of the Big Blue Four Horsemen, and of two Monster Pep Rallies—one for the rugby team and one for the new Governor General. (The first was as solemn and dull as the second occasion should have been, and the second was as boisterous and highschoolish as modern University management could make it.) Thirtysix also witnessed near-revolution in local society circles when the now far famed Leftist group urged their radical principles upon the necking fraternity (that ought to take them all in) only to be at least temporarily squelched by the conservative, big-moneyed and consequently automobile driving Rightists.

The final peculiar feature of this college semester, dear grandchildren, was the near coincidence of The Varsity's final, eight page, issue being scheduled for the Friday after the Wednesday of The Varsity staff party. This resulted in the intervening Thursday becoming just one of those days, when copy is ripped off the typewriters and rushed to the press every half hour, without benefit of clergy or proofread. MANY CHAMPIONSHIPS GO TO VIC ATHLETES

Competition is Keen in Inter-faculty Sports in All Branches This Year

GYMNASTICS IMPROVED

The spirit of true amateurism is very much alive around the University as evinced by the very successful year enjoyed by inter-faculty sports. The boys who take part in inter-faculty sports are doing so solely for the fun derived therefrom. They don't even play for the plaudits of the crowd, as the students are very lax in attending these interesting games. In fact the only criticism to be levelled against these aspiring athletes is that they are out for a sweater and sometimes a P.T. credit. In all branches competition has been very keen and very classy.

Soon after the boys came back to get rested up after the holidays, the pig-skin began to float around as the teams got into shape for the race to gain possession of the historic Mulock cup. Plenty of rugby was seen around the back campus for two months and out of it all came Vic to win the trophy. This victory for Vic was the surprise of the year, but was not won on any luke. In the finals they scored a very convincing victory over Dents, defending champions.

Another championship went Viewwards a week later when the Arts Faculty trophy emblematic of the soccer championship went to the college on the campus north side. On a slippery field Dents were forced into defeat in two games, but they made it very close.

There was a great deal of activity around the Track this year, and although the meet was not successful from the spectators' point of view, it was from the competitive angle. U.C. scored the most points in the afternoon, chiefly due to the efforts of Rankin and O'Connor. In the other division of the running sport, the harrier, O.A.C. took the Brotherton cup back to Guelph, despite the fact that they failed to capture first or second place.

After the Christmas rush the faculties settled down for another session. Trinity were the first college to hold a championship won last year, when they captured swimming honours and with it the Fitzgerald trophy. However, at the present time, Vic have teams in the hockey and basketball finals, which titles they captured last year.

The batters from O.A.C. captured the B. W. & F. title after an absence of one year and the Davidson trophy returns to the Aggies after spending one year in the medical building. This meet was one of the best contested in years.

BASKETBALL—

SWIMMING COACH REPORTED RETIRING

Climaxed Ten-Year Career By Producing Championship Team This Year

Swimming Coach Roy Lowndes, who has piloted the Blue swimmers through the flashing green waters of Intercollegiate and International competition for the past 10 years, last night announced his desire to retire from his position as mentor to the local swimmers.

Coach Lowndes' efforts of the past few years have been marked by singular success. Last year he was able to break a five-year jinx by taking his senior team to Montreal and wresting the intercollegiate title from McGill, who had held the title since 1930 due chiefly to the presence on their team of the world-famous Bourne brothers, who have provided competition of the highest order.

This year the swimmers failed by a narrow margin to retain the championship, due largely to the fact that Cressy McCarty, Varsity's star back stroker, was prevented from swimming.

For the past two years the coach has taken a team on an American trip. Neither the teams of Buffalo State nor Rochester U. have been able to stop the Lowndes-coached boys in any of these meets.

The loss of Roy Lowndes as coach would be deeply felt by all Varsity swimmers. No mention has been made of a suitable coach to replace him.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

To-day's being the last issue, we shall follow the time-honoured precedent, and sum up the activities of the year. It has been very successful as far as women's sports are concerned, and a vote of thanks is due to Miss Parkes, the Athletic Directorate, the executives, managers and coaches and all others who have done so much of the routine work which is necessary in order that the sports may be enjoyed by all who wish to participate.

A great many girls turned out for all the interfaculty games, and enthusiasm was very keen in most of them, although next year we would like to see a little more interest shown in badminton and baseball. The championships were divided this year among Vic., U.C., and St. Hilda's. Vic now hold the baseball and tennis titles, U.C. the hockey and swimming, and St. Hilda's the basketball and badminton. Except for the basketball all the championships changed hands.

In intercollegiate sport, the tennis cup returned to Varsity after an absence of four years, but the Bronze Baby again eluded our possessive hands. Unfortunately the necessary funds were not available for the hockey team to meet McGill, but an admirable innovation was the intercollegiate swimming meet up at McMaster.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

George C. Vair

No. 100 and our final appearance in this column and possibly our last attempt as a sports columnist, so here goes—

Victoria stands an excellent chance of retaining the Jennings Cup following their victory over Sr. U.C. earlier in the week in the first game of a two-out-of-three-game series for the historic mug, emblematic of interfaculty hockey supremacy. The Scarlet and Gold have the jump on their fellow Arts students but the Redshirts are liable to turn the tables in the second tilt to be played at the Arena at 4 p.m. this afternoon. Ticket No. 31 or 15c will let you in to what bids fair to be the best clash of the current season.

The finalists for the basketball honours have finally been thrashed out and against Sr. U.C. find themselves in the race for the money, as it were. Jr. Meds will provide the opposition and from all reports the Medicals figure they are in, but then anything is liable to happen in the field of sport. The exact scoring system has not been determined but Monday and Wednesday will see the two teams battle it out for the league supremacy at 5 in the big gym at Hart House. In the event that a third game is necessary it will be held on Friday.

The five contenders for the baseball crown have been placed in a five-game round robin series with each team playing the other finalists once. Jr. Meds with two games played, are out in front with three points, while Dents have two and O.C.E. one. St. Mikes and Emmanuel have yet to score a win.

After a hasty glance at recent scoring records we have come to the conclusion that the intermediate basketball squad have set an all-time record for consistent victories in the intercollegiate loop; at any rate it is an enviable one for any athlete to look back upon. The club has won 17 games out of a possible 18. Congratulations team and Coach Mac McCutcheon.

In our humble opinion the hard luck team of the year has been the intermediate hockey club who get their exercise in the T.H.L. The last clause is not to be taken as a knock, since after all, what are university athletics participated in for—championships or playing the game for the game's sake? The boys who perform under the sobriquet "Beavers" have a record of one win in the past season. They have finished the three regular periods tied on at least five occasions only to lose out in the overtime. Certainly they deserved a better break than this but they undoubtedly gave their best at all times and it can be said that they were never outclassed. A tough season, boys, but we do not regret the time spent watching you perform at Ross Workman's ice palace.

Just in case you have not heard, here are the results of the elections for the students' athletic directorate held last Friday. The five successful candidates were—Normie McClelland, diminutive centre man for the Blue puck-chasers and captain of the 1935-6 squad who will possibly make O.C.E. his headquarters next fall; Freddy Smith, president of the boxing club and a leather slinger of no mean ability in the 126-lb. division; Caldwell, ace outdoor sprinter on the big Blue track squad; Turney Williams, likeable lineman of the senior football club who filled the breach at snap when Al Williams was injured last fall; Gus Greco, a Dentist in the making and a footballer with an established reputation as a proficient defensive player and a powerful plunger. Gus was also elected as Financial Secretary of the Fratellanza of the university last week. Certainly a capable body of men who should plunge, sprint, battle or stickhandle their way through all difficulties in the coming year.

In fitting recognition of the athletes who have worn the Blue colours in the past season the Athletic Directorate are giving a banquet at Hart House next Thursday night. A fine tribute to a worthy group of good sportsmen and outstanding athletes.

To-night's meet at the Maple Leaf Gardens will see a score of Hec Phillips' best track stars at the university come up against the cream of America's indoor runners. Conway is entered in the British Consols half mile; O'Connor in the 60 yards double sprint; Forrest in the two-mile and many others well known to track fans.

Before we write the customary "30" to this lengthy dissertation on sport we would like to take this opportunity to thank all the men who have so generously co-operated to help make the sports page what we honestly believe has been a success in the past year. I may add that 'me sheeps have made the sheet what it is' and for that I am very grateful and say—Thanks, gang!

LAST YEAR'S STARS FORM NUCLEUS FOR BRILLIANT FOOTBALL SEASON

"T" Holders Note

Will all men who have been awarded first colours please call at the Athletic Office and sign for them before the Athletic Banquet next Thursday. Will those who have received invitations to the banquet kindly reply, immediately.

JIMMY MCPHERSON

veteran wingman who has effectively patrolled the ice lanes for four senior Blue hockey teams and has been an invaluable back on Varsity soccer teams, present title holders. His sportsmanlike conduct has earned him the apt nickname of "Gentleman Jimmy". Past captain of the hockey club and at present vice-president of the Athletic Directorate, Jimmy graduates from O.C.E. this June. Best of luck, Jimmy.

The "Four Horsemen": Gray, Coulter, Connelly and Marks will be Absent

MANY NEW PROSPECTS

By Frank Lambert

The University of Toronto grid stars more than upheld the Blue football prestige as they fought their way to lead the intercollegiate senior rugby series until cruel fate in the form of the Tri-colour rugby squad, dealt a death blow to Varsity championship aspirations in that memorable sudden-death play-off game.

Typical of a game in the intercollegiate senior rugby series were the amazing dashes of the Canadian "four horsemen" of Bobby Coulter, Cam Gray, Joe Connelly, and Hugh Marks, who rapidly ascended the peak of football proficiency, while the brilliant work of Holden, Burke, Lynch, and Edwards gained recognition. Another year should see these lads rated as the best in senior football. Larry Lynch, former St. Michael's College football star, had an exceptionally fine year, featured by brilliant tackling and adept facility in completing passes.

Lost Intercollegiate Title by Narrow Margin of Single Defeat

MARKS, CONNELLY LEAD

By W. A. Crackower

Turning back the pages of the 1935-36 record of Varsity's basketball squads we find that the Blue and White cagers have once again turned in a very creditable season's work. Although this year's record is not as good as last year's, when the Senior Varsity cagers went through their entire schedule with but a single loss, we must remember that last year's Blues were blessed with luck of a very unusual nature. Proof of this can be found in the large number of games this year's squad dropped by the narrow margin of a single field goal. With the same good fortune that graced the cagers last year most of these heart-breaking defeats might easily have been changed to victories.

In the Intercollegiate Senior race the Blues ended up with a record of four victories and two defeats. By the narrow margin of a single defeat Varsity lost the Intercollegiate title to the strong Queen's quintet. The less (Continued on Page 6)

ATHLETIC BANQUET

Next Thursday evening the Athletic Association is tendering to all undergraduate holders of First Colours a banquet in the Great Hall, Hart House. Invitations have been sent to them as well as to all members of Senior teams with a request for a reply. As few replies have been received up to the present, and it is necessary to know in order to make preparations. BRILLIANT STARS
TO BE IN ACTION AT ICE CARNIVAL

By Frank Lamberti

The final arrangements of the West Toronto Community Y for their ninth annual winter carnival which is to be held at Varsity Arena tomorrow evening have been completed and the star-studded line-up of attractions should evoke unusual interest, providing laughs, thrills and spills with plenty of action. Held annually with the proceeds going for boys' work, this carnival has gained merited success and this year should be no exception as no effort has been spared to present a gala event.

A program ranging from individual events to team matches in which the different schools of the city will vie for supremacy, will provide intense rivalry. A standout feature of the evening will be the spectacular barrel jumping by Howard Legg of Galt.

The Ontario Speed Skating Association under Harry Cody will put on match sprints for senior ladies and men, and to top off the whole program several figure skaters of Granite Club will go through the finer intricacies of blade ballet.

Athletic Directorate Enthused Over Advantages of New Arrangement*NO MID-WEEK GAMES

By Jim Tiller

University hockey is at the dawn of a new era. The international-intercollegiate league has been officially approved, confirmed and recorded. It is no longer a delightful prospect. It is a fact.

No longer will the Varsity hockey team cross sticks with Toronto's best, with Hamilton Tigers or with the Port Colborne Sailors in the Senior O.H.A. No longer will the supporters of these teams be entertained or amused by a glimpse of college life when Varsity students shout out the Ripperty, Rappertys. No longer will the Varsity hockey team be outclassed by hand-picked squads of near-professionals.

The newly-formed league takes in four Canadian colleges and four American. Varsity will play home-and-home games with Queen's, McGill and the French University of Montreal. To continue what promises to become an annual classic, Yale will come to Toronto, as will Princeton. Varsity will meet Harvard and Dartmouth in their American tour.

Other games are already scheduled or anticipated. There will probably be a home-and-home series with McMaster and Western. There will definitely be a Christmas vacation excursion, either to the carnival at Lake Placid or to the University of Minnesota. Invitations have been received from other American colleges, and Varsity may visit Michigan, Wisconsin and Boston. The result is a well-balanced schedule beginning December 17th.

The beauty of this schedule is, as Warren Stevens, Director of Athletics, pointed out, that it calls for no mid-week games (as did the O.H.A.), so that the time lost from studies by the student players is reduced to a minimum. Also, week-end games should attract more students to the arena.

AT GARDENS TONIGHT

Twelve Varsity Runners to Take Part in Indoor Meet

HORNOSTEL TO BE HERE

Varsity track men will have an opportunity to show their wares to-night when they go into action against America's No. 1 athletes in Maple Leaf Gardens at the annual Maple Leaf Games.

This meet promises to be one of the best indoor meets held in Toronto in track history, and so exceptional is the field lined up that twelve application forms for new records have been ordered. Twelve men have been entered by Varsity to represent her in six different events, two invitation and four open.

Ab. Conway will represent the University in the British Consols half-mile invitation race, which is expected to be one of the classics of the night, featuring the far-famed Chuck Hornostel, and two other stars.

Larry O'Connor goes to work in another invitation event, the 60 yards hurdles, against some of the keenest track stars in America. Lloyd Dulaney faces Bob Mitchell and Watson of Achilles in the Jr. ½ mile, while Varsity has entered 4 men in the two-mile, although it is expected Veitch and Forrest will be the only ones to run for the Blue and White. Art Clarke, the present Canadian record holder in this event, is out to better his time while Lloyd Longman and Tom Daly of Detroit are also lined up among the large number of contestants.

In the 60 yds. open Harris, McCaffrey, Caldwell, Rowell and Cooper hope to hold down some places, while Rowell and Soper are entering the three hundred yds. open.

The Gardens expect to surpass last year's meet, which drew a crowd of 14,000, and the boys here have been burning up the track all winter in order to get in condition to acquit themselves with credit to their colours, so it promises to be the big night of the year for Hic. Phillips' boys.

BY BLUE OARSMEN FOR BANNER YEAR

At this time of the year, when every other sport is dead and buried, rowing is just making its seasonal debut. Just as soon as the icebergs have gone out of the Bay, the Varsity shells will be lowered into the water to begin what looks as if it were going to be a banner year.

Most of the boys of last summer's sensational Heavy Crew will be back and there are all sorts of newcomers who have been showing up well on the machines ready to compete for any vacancies. The Olympic trials are being held in July, and a trip to Berlin will go to either of two crews, Leanders or Varsity. In addition the Blue oarsmen will be all out to win the Canadian Junior and Senior Championships at the Henley.

U.C. Loses First Game of Finals in Struggle for Jennings Cup

SCORE IS 5-2

In a fast-moving game Wednesday afternoon the victorious Scarlet and Gold team met U.C. in the first tilt of the Jennings Cup finals, to defeat them by the tune of 5-2.

U.C. started the works off with a bang in the first five minutes when Morrison made the light go on after a short scramble in front of the Vic net. The play was fast and interesting but neither team could get in for an effective shot. U.C. played a cautious game, shooting from around the blue line, while Vic preferred to rush right in. Finally Gregory got a good pass across to Monson, who tied it up.

Vic is always dangerous in front of the goal, having a very pretty system of combination that is fatal to the defenders unless the checks cover up well, and in the second period these rushes were only kept down by a lot of good work on the part of Caswell, and plenty of luck. Saunders was penalized for tripping, but Gregory went through with his team a man short to blink the light and put Vic one up. He shot in to the side and followed in, skirted around the net and pushed it over Caswell. Donaldson went to the box for kicking the puck without having his stick in his hand, but U.C. held well. Gregory made another clever play in the last minute, passing to Pratt, who flipped the rubber in.

In the final period, Gregory got credit for two more tallies, passing to Pratt on the first, and scoring the second on a fluke, when he took a shot during a scramble, and the disc bounced off a defenceman's stick to slide past the goalie. Donaldson was forced to retire (Continued on Page 6)

Great Hall Charmer Now Among Graduates

New Position Takes Irene from Task of Brightening the Undergraduate's Day

Irene has gone. The mass of men who cat in the Great Hall have lost one of their cheeriest and most helpful friends. There are few if any of the undergraduates who when they read this will not weep a forlorn tear. Perhaps it will be a lonely tear shed in some inconspicuous corner or perhaps it will be a loud unembarrassed wail. Each will be equally sincere.

Irene was that charming waitress who rain or shine had a ready smile and a cheery word for the studious

Hart House masticators. Schoolmen had no monopoly on her pleasantness as they often boast nor was she intimidated by the freshness of Vic men. Every man got his due in terms of pleasant smile or a knowing glance.

Nor did this "flirting" as some unimaginative authorities choose to call it, interfere with Irene's efficiency as a waitress. In fact the dear girl leaves Hart House for a better position in a well-known restaurant downtown. No one with an ounce of heart could make any legitimate objection to anyone bolstering service with pleasantness. Irene's table was sought after by all students whether they wanted to hurry through their lunch or whether they wanted to eat their lunch in their own free time satisfied with the comfort of the Great Hall's new chairs.

Irene as much as any professor or any event has added to the joys of a college education. Those who graduate this year and to whom the last year is always the most cherished in memory, will think of Irene in their later musing moments and . . . well, we all have our moments.

when his knee gave out, and he was unable to return. Saunders took another penalty, and Campbell followed soon after for a rough bodycheck. With but two minutes to go, Morrison went through the whole Vic team to score his second and last goal, and the game ended with U.C. trailing 5-2.

The stars for this game were J. Matheson, who did some wonderful work in the Vic net; Gregory, Pratt, and Monzon, and for the losers there was no one comparable to Morrison, although he was terrifically handicapped by a lack of support on the wings. To the observers he seems to be the best individual player in the group. The second game takes place Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Arena.

With the season starting a month later than in the O.H.A., next year's hockey coach will have time to thoroughly test all aspirants to the team. Interfaculty stars will be invited to try-out and there will be no chance for ability to go unrecognized. Next year's hockey team will be in every way the best the University can produce.

Varsity's hockey future looks bright, brighter than it has for many years. First, the team itself should be better, and, second, they will be playing only student teams, unquestionably superior. Intercollegiate hockey seems like the answer to the whole hockey trouble. It should give a stimulus to the players and enthusiasm to the spectators. It may even steal the rah-rah from rugby!

which cost the Blues the title and the Wilson Cup was received at London. The second defeat was handed to the Blues in Kingston. In the victory column the Varsity cagers had two wins against McGill's Redmen and one each against Western and Queen's.

In the Big Four, the local league, the Blue and White basketeers finished with five wins and four defeats. Despite the fact that they ended the regular season at the top of their group, the Blues were nosed out of the Toronto title in the sudden-death play-off game against Broadview Y.

On the annual United States trip the Blues were handed six successive defeats. Although they failed to register a single victory the Varsity aggregation were far from pushovers in their across-the-border games. In picking the all-star opposition squad for the Rochester team during the past season the Rochester scribes gave Hughie Marks and Joe Connelly honourable mention.

The Intermediate Blues under the able guidance of Mac MacCutcheon again walked off with the Intercollegiate honours with 6 wins and no defeats. In three years Mac's squad of youngsters has won seventeen out of eighteen intercollegiate contests, dropping one game by a single point in 1934. In the city league the Seconds recorded seven wins and two defeats.

shone head and shoulders above all tackling contingents in intercollegiate senior rugby circles by his steady and consistent efforts. The work of the Big Blue wingline with Greco, Oakley, Witzel, T. Williams and Al Williams, ably assisted by Valerioti and Webber, proved to be a bulwark of strength for the fast breaking Blue halves.

A powerful array of football talent will probably herald the future season as several outstanding performers will once more line up with the Blue grid squad.

Those of the senior squad who will once more don the Blue colours will be Greco, T. Williams, Al Williams, Harris Lynch, Buck Holden, Burke and Edwards, with Bob Isbister and Cam Gray as fullbacks, a nucleus around which a real squad can be built up.

ment, but without result until a few weeks ago, when repeated attempts on the part of this paper resulted in the matter being brought before a federal government committee for consideration, and there it remains at the present time. This attempt on the part of The Varsity attracted attention and interest throughout the whole Dominion, and was widely publicized.

Ready at all times to uphold the interests of the student body, The Varsity supported many proposals during the year, and was successful in most cases. As a result of editorials early in the year, lectures in physical education were established by the athletic department and wide interest was evidenced by undergraduates, when they crowded the lecture room to capacity on the occasion of every address. In a similar way The Varsity attempted to gain more adequate physical training quarters for co-eds, but was unsuccessful.

As a result of a Varsity's campaign for student drama, there was organized this year for the first time a Drama Committee to further those interests. Its first presentation, the Inspector-General, was supported by the paper, and was a financial and dramatic success.

The lighter side of journalism was well represented in the news columns during the year. The chief instance of this was the interview by two news-hunters with Sally Rand, one of the fans. A portion of that famous fan now holds a place of honour in the office of The Varsity. The Purity Test, conducted at the university and reported in The Varsity, is a final instance of the interest that has been shown, not only by students but by the general public, in the paper. Few indeed are the towns or hamlets to which that test has not spread under the name, 'The Varsity Purity Test'.

CANADIAN NATIONAL

of the world. On the other hand, there is a more positive note which might very well be struck at this time. It is based on the idea that Peace is not an end in itself, but rather a by-product of more important things, including fair play, co-operation, and good-will. If the Hour does something to instill in the people of Canada these ideas, and does something to show the way in which these things can be brought about, then the amount of good derived from it would be tremendous.

In spite of its many failures, in spite of the enormous difficulties under which it is labouring, the League of Nations is still the most important factor for Peace in the world today, in the opinion of Dr. Cody, who has himself attended many of its sessions. Second in importance, almost taking the leading role in fact, is the British Commonwealth. In Dr. Cody's mind, it is the British people who are taking the role of co-ordinators and directors of the peaceful moves of all the countries of the globe in the world today. If the peace hour does something to instill faith in the League and in the Empire within the minds of Canadians, it will not find its efforts wasted.

Another essential to world peace at the present time, says Dr. Cody, is a reduction in tariff barriers, so that once more the trade of the world may run freely and without too much restriction. By this, the President emphasized that he was not an exponent of the utter abolition of tariff barriers between countries, but merely of their reduction to a sane and sensible level, where they would meet the demands of revenue and the protection of infant industries of merit, but would at the same time not prove such a barrier as they now are to world peace and co-operation.

In this respect, Dr. Cody felt that the United States is the real culprit, and not until they realize their mistake and lower their barriers will the trade of the world once more flow freely and naturally. The aloof attitude of the United States might also be blamed for much of the weakness of the United States today.

Commenting also on the aloof attitude now being adopted by Canada in regard to the Rhineland situation, Dr. Cody felt that such an attitude would have to be changed if real trouble broke out. Canada is not a signatory of the Locarno pact, but she is a member in good standing of the League of Nations, and as such she is pledged to take action against an aggressor nation in the event of war. A choice faces the people of Canada; a choice between an active participation in the actions of the League, or else complete withdrawal from that body, and an abrogation of all the ideals for which it stands. This latter step, concluded the President, is one which in his opinion, the majority of the people of Canada would not concur.

is not commendable. A heated clash is expected in the open meeting of the V. C. U. on Monday when the report is presented to the undergraduates. Edith Clydsdale claimed that the objective of the committee has been misrepresented and urged that all Victoria students make a sincere effort to estimate the benefits which would come from introducing the new scheme in Victoria College.

Miss Clydsdale indicated that the co-eds in Amesley Hall approved of the new move and she also believed practically every society in the college would support the committee on Monday. It is believed Art Hamilton, V.C.U. president for next year, favours the scheme.

In a statement issued by the committee yesterday it was stated that "the new program itself entails no drastic changes whatsoever in the social life of the college."

The class organizations will remain intact, the new clubs will merely supplement their activities, the statement said. "Crashers" will be wholeheartedly discouraged, the committee members said. "Crashers in the past have put various organizations to considerable expense because of their determination to enter via windows, etc. The opportunity for meeting students from other years—the crashers' main alibi—will be provided through the club activities."

It is proposed that clubs such as skiing, hiking, sing-song and camera should be formed, composed of both men and women from all years. "This would provide students not interested in dancing with other means of sharing in the social life of the college," it was stated.

The fee would be compulsory and would cover all class activities as well as those of the clubs.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

House Theatre for the use of students interested in the drama a University Orama Committee was formed. Representatives from every faculty and from the staff joined together for the purpose of producing plays with the best of the undergraduate talent. Mr. C. R. Delafeld of Hart House, who had provided the inspiration for the movement, acted as secretary. Martin Loeb of University College was appointed director for the first production, Gogol's Inspector-General.

It would not be fair to judge the newly formed committee on the basis of their first production. Gordon Robertson, one of the finest actors on the campus, took sick with pneumonia, and the leading role was taken by Lloyd Souverville at a week's notice.

Nor was the choice of the play very fortunate. A Russian comedy, it is difficult to catch the national spirit, much of the play's value has been lost in translation and adaptation. It is a comedy of character rather than of the customary line and situation type and as such is strange to American audiences.

On two successive evenings a total of two hundred and eighty turned out in response to the committee's appeal. It was disappointing but to our mind the production did not justify full houses. If the student body are to be enticed into paying out money for a university production, that production must be good.

The individual colleges, notably Trinity and Victoria, have the college spirit that gives their plays wholehearted support. The Vic production of Gorki's Lower Depths and Trinity's Jonah and the Whale, had large turnouts. The U.C. Players' Guild confined• hither and yon •

With John C. Dent

WE ARE GATHERED TOGETHER at this time to pay our last respects to B. J. McGuire, Marion Ridout, Roger White, and the other members of our masthead who are being showed out into the cold world this Spring to wrest a living in the fields of business endeavour.

For the last time these worthies have supervised an issue of The Varsity. They may some day occupy responsible positions on outside papers, but those are somewhat different from the undergraduate journal.

Toward the end of September, The Varsity will appear once more, but will be issued under the guidance of new editors, it is our hope that the next year's masthead will continue the present policy of our paper, and improve upon it.

THE RADIO scooped us the other night on the story of the Princeton students who have organized a club to raise a bonus for the veterans of the next war. The girls of Vassar have joined with them in a project to raise funds for their future sons against the time when they do the country's colours.

AT THE VARSITY SPRING FORMAL last night, a female member of the staff suggested that, since we have been turning out this column regularly, we should be made Exchange Editor. Since that young lady has been on the staff only a year or so, she could hardly be expected to know that we have held that position for three terms.

THE ELEVATOR STRIKE in New York has resulted in barricades being placed around the Columbia College residences. The barricades are so impenetrable that it takes half an hour to cross the street in order to obtain a hamburger at the shop on the opposite side. The purveyor of hamburgers has just about had to shut up shop as a result, while the students are forced to attend lectures with that empty feeling unappeased.

FROM AN AMERICAN PAPER: "Or. and Mrs. H. F. Thompson have returned from abroad on the Italian liner Rialto. The ship underwent fumigation yesterday, and will proceed north today."

RUMOUR has it that the commencement of the Fall Term will see hot dogs and hamburgers served in the Hart House Tuck Shop. It is said that Pat has ambitions to become chef, and has already visited clothing shops to pick out a white cap and other appropriate toggery.

THE EDITOR OF THE MCGILL OAILY for the past year, John Nolan, has been elected president of the Student Society. That would seem to be the perfect set-up for next year's Oaily.

THE LATEST STUNT OF THE BET-ARTISTS is to place a copper on top of a silver dollar and put a short worm on top of all. Then one of them bets that the worm will not crawl itself to productions in the Women's Union, where they had enthusiastic audiences.

There are two ways of getting an audience, by dragging people into buying tickets, or by appealing to their sense of value. It has been suggested that the committee sponsor a drama festival with entries from the college dramatic societies. This would combine a satisfactory box office with an incentive to better productions.

The University Orama Committee has a long way to go before they can attract their audiences on merit alone. They have the material and the ambition. We hope that they will be able to draw attention to the undergraduates' ability to produce good shows. And some day we may have a chair of dramatic art at this University.

St. Thomas Church

The Rector, Rev. C. J. S. Stuart, M.A., will preach at the 11 o'clock Choral Eucharist on Sunday. The Litany will be sung in procession, following the half hour of choral music broadcast over CFRB at 6 p.m. The Rev. W. Lyndon Smith, M.A., will preach at the 7 p.m. Choral evensong. The choir will sing Mozart's setting of "When I survey the wondrous cross". On Wednesday evening Mr. A. E. Clarke will give an illustrated lecture on the 1934 Oberammergau Passion Play.

CANIDATES FOR STUDENT GOVERNMENT positions at the University of Southern California are required to write, and pass, examinations on the constitution of the undergraduate executive of the University.

A COURSE IN COURTSHIP has been established at the University of Minnesota. The students are backward about signing up until they learn whether it is to be a laboratory course.

A PRACTICAL-JOKING PROFESSOR at that same University recently invited a number of friends in to celebrate the fact that he had installed a new bar in his home. When the guests arrived, they discovered that it was the kind of bar you do hand-stands on.

THE LIBRARY at Bryn Mawr suffers from the theft of books from its shelves, just as do the rougher educational colleges. Bryn Mawr is a college for the training of young ladies, but among the young ladies seem to be a number of the light-fingered variety.

RUCTIONS were raised at Trinity about the removal of the Episkopon volume, its return, and the subsequent story in The Varsity about the matter. Episkopon is a very solemn and secret tradition at Trinity, and it is difficult to learn much about it, but it appears that a piece is written telling the most flagrant faults of each house-man, and these are read by the Scribe on Episkopon Night. The residence boys are all in favour of the event, apparently, claiming that it leads to the improvement of all the members.

THE GOVERNORS OF Minnesota and Iowa last Autumn bet a prize pig on the result of the inter-State University football game. Minnesota won, and duly received the porker, which they have had copied in bronze as an annual trophy.

WE HAVE NOW reached the end of the trail, and the time has come to write "30" to our last column for the year. Nothing remains but to get down to work on the more academic, if less educational, side of our college career. We have more or less made history with our "hither and yon", since it is the first column of the type ever to appear in The Varsity, and is the first regular news column in The Varsity which has carried a by-line.

This opportunity we take to thank our Editor for the chance which he has given us. It remains only to hope that our readers have been interested in those things which we have had to say, and to bid the undergraduate body good bye until next September, when, if the Board of Examiners co-operate, we shall be back together again.

The fourth production in Toronto of the Actors' Colony Theatre will be "Odangerous Corner" by J. B. Priestley on Friday and Saturday, March 20th and 21st, at the Margaret Eaton Hall.

Mr. Priestley wrote this play shortly after "Good Companions", to show people that "he believed in social masks and humbugs as realities, as much as he did in good fellowship and more or less charming people", such as he had previously depicted. "Odangerous Corner" is a combination of a mystery play and a psychological study. One critic said of it: "It holds you enthralled... on the very edge of your seat..."

'LIVE PERILOUSLY', DR. KENNEDY SAYS AT LAW BANQUET

Is World-Recognized Authority
In Field of Constitutional Law

10 YEARS HEAD OF LAW

Sees Danger of Democracy in Misuse of New Means of Propaganda

The democratic state may survive the crisis it is faced with if the younger generation "learn to live perilously, to give it the prodigality of their souls," but it cannot survive on the continued basis of "lawful license and inequitable acquisitiveness" which has characterized it for the past 30 years, Dr. W. P. M. Kennedy, professor of law at The University, and world-recognized constitutional authority, told the gathering at the annual dinner of the Law Club last Tuesday night.

The banquet this year was a testimonial dinner given by the Law Club to Dr. Kennedy on his 10th anniversary as head of the law department. Bench, bar, staff and undergraduates joined in the tribute, which was symbolized in a silver tea service.

Any survival was premised on the "free power of voting," which depended on absolute freedom of speech, of the press and of educational institutions, "within the reserved powers of the state," he said.

The danger to democracy lay in the misuse of the new instruments of propaganda, in perversions of the criminal law of conspiracy and sedition, in the loss of the "true executive principle" of an amateur cabinet supervising an expert civil service, and in terrible personal fear which was paralyzing the hearts of millions.

The threat to democracy from propaganda was inherent in the new rapid media, radio, press and rapid transportation. "The very mobility of words produces an immobility of thought," he said. "The great danger is mass emotion. If you differ with a person, he's a Bolshevik."

Education provided the only solution to these propagandist dangers. Its purpose should be aimed more at the moral and spiritual values than mere money-making means.

As to the law, "too often are we faced with an excessive and bastard loyalty," he declared. "Loyalty is spiritual. It doesn't need flag-waving or excessive profession."

NEW ENGLISH COURSE

partment of Education, by deciding to grant specialist certificates for teachers in both English and Modern History courses, had facilitated the progress, but the new course made very little difference as far as the English subjects were concerned, as these have been fairly well established under the old course.

There was a professional interest also in the new English course, since specialist certificates would be given to both History and English courses which would permit their holders to become departmental heads in those subjects or even principals of high schools.

The comparatively large amount of time spent in English subjects in high schools was one great reason why it was thought desirable to add a course dealing particularly with English subjects. On the other hand, the course was not intended to be narrowly specialist, contended Mr. Davis, and he illustrated his point by reference to the wide variety of options to be found in it.

One of the main criticisms of the present English and History course was that, since the work was under two departments there was a lack of centralized control over studies, and students were obliged to spend a great deal of time on two quite different subjects. This control has now been made possible and History subjects are now arranged to conform as closely as possible with the requirements of the English courses.

cent of those enrolled in the medical course are women.
When asked about the relative learning ability and perseverance of women and men in the course, Dr. Ryerson denied that women make poorer students. "We get them good, bad and indifferent, just the same as the men," he said. He commented further that "men find the course hard too—and it is a very stiff course." On the whole, Dr. Ryerson does not believe women are in any way inferior as students; and in 1934, he said, the graduating class was headed by a woman, Dr. Jenny Gray, who was a gold medalist for that year.

EXPECT BIG CROWD AT ALUMNI NIGHT

midnight in the big gym, when Ross Workman will lead. It is expected that by this time, everybody present will be right in the singing mood.

The rifle-ranges will be open for the entire evening, for men and women guests who wish to try their skill at shooting. Rifles and ammunition, as well as covering cloaks, will be on the house.

In the fencing room, there will be men's and women's exhibitions of fencing by experts in the art. In the wrestling room, Japanese wrestling and jujitsu will be featured by Japanese exponents of the art.

Finally, for the aesthetic-minded among the huge crowd, an exhibition of the work of senior members will be on display in the Sketch Room.

This is the first alumni night in which every facility of Hart House will be in use. Tickets are going at the S.A.C. office at a fast rate, and there is every indication that a capacity crowd will be on hand.
